

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A ST. PATRICK'S DAY WINDOW.

The Bell Floral Co., of Franklin, Pa., last year arranged a St. Patrick's day window which, in addition to a liberal supply of shamrock plants, and a large vase of green carnations, contained a block of artificial stone, marked "Shamrock," another piece of the same material labeled "The Original Blarney Stone," on the summit of which is a miniature representation of Blarney Castle.

The display included, also, clay pipes tied with a bow of green ribbon, numerous small Irish flags, fans for the occasion, appropriately decorated with pictures of shamrocks and other national emblems, and inscribed with the motto so dear to every Irishman, "Erin go Bragh."

There was also a fine black specimen of a shillalah, and several cards on which were marked in plain letters the following inscriptions, the last of which is original:

Sandle loves the thistle.
John Bull loves the rose,
But Paddy loves the land
Where the shamrock grows.

Saint Patrick was a gentleman,
And came of decent people.
He built a church in Dublin town,
And on it put a steeple.

The Wicklow hills are very high,
And so's the hill o' Howth, sir,
But I know a hill that's twice as high,
And higher than them both, sir.
'Twas on the top of this high hill
Saint Patrick preached his sermon.
He made the frogs jump through the bogs,
And banished all the vermin.

Good people, ere it is too late,
Your homes and selves adorning
With pretty shamrocks, celebrate Saint Patrick's day in the morning.

ARE SPECIAL SALES A BENEFIT?

[A paper by Z. D. Blackistone, of Washington, D. C., read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club.]

In speaking on the subject of the value of special flower sales in a retail store, as a means of advertising, I shall rely mainly on personal experiences. This will necessitate frequent reference to myself and my business, which I trust you will not consider egotistical, but as given simply for the purpose of throwing more light on the subject.

My business career began in November, 1898, when I started in a very small store and on a very small capital. For the first five or six years my business continued to grow and it seemed so easy that I wondered why everybody did not go into business. Then competition in the neighborhood became keener and business seemed to stop growing, but the expenses continued to increase just the same. Things went on in this way for several years, when I awoke and realized that I had to be more aggressive and progressive in the conduct of my business if I wished to succeed.

First Experiments in Advertising.

Up to this time I had done but little advertising and even that in a desultory manner—in programs, principally, with an occasional ad in a special Thanksgiving or Easter edition of a newspaper, given to a newspaper solicitor. My first systematic attempt at advertising came when I signed a twelve months' contract at $80.50 a month for a street car ad. With this space on my hands, I began to get busy to keep it working. My first ads were gotten up something like this: "Blackistone, Washington's Leading Florist, Roses, Violets, Orchids, Telephone—Address, etc." Well, this went on for several months and I began to wonder if anyone ever read them.

My first real attempt at special sale advertising came when I photographed a small kentia palm in a jardiniere, had it reproduced and put in my car space, advertising "Special Dwarf Palm and Jardiniere complete, 50 cents, regular $1.00 value." Now notice: This particular ad had run for at least two weeks and we had not had a single call. I then phoned to the man in charge of the ad, telling him of my disgust, and ordered new cards substituted, which required about a week to prepare, instead of my special palm ad. But, mind you, that very day we had best paying advertising I ever did. It not only paid for itself, principal and interest, but continued to pay interest for several years. And—would you believe it?—still, to this day, although the ad has been dead for several years, people occasionally come in and ask if we have this article. On this ad I cut my eye teeth as to the value of special sales as a means of advertising and I can assure you the lesson has been worth thousands of dollars to me.

After this I used a photo of a table bouquet of carnations, any color, arranged with greens, special at $1, and then, during the spring and summer, a spray of carnations with gauze ribbon, special at $2. Both these were successful ads, and good drawing cards.

Now, I fully realize that all this, while pertinent to the subject, is not what your committee had in mind and wanted me to tell you about. What you are really looking for is information on the subject of conservation. How shall we florists manage so that the great gluts of the crops of cut flowers, which necessarily come from time to time, shall not be wasted? How shall we manage so that they may prove useful and profitable to the florist, instead of a bane and a nightmare?

A Successful Saturday Special.

The foregoing I have related more as an introduction. It shows you the evolutions of practical commercial development as pertaining to the specific subject. Having shown you the experiments which I made and their results, you will readily understand that my mind was now in a receptive mood on this subject. I had finished my street car advertising contract, when, at the psychological moment, a friend of mine, representing one of the largest papers, induced me to sign a 10,000-line con-calls for our special palm. This was followed up the next day, and the next and the next, with frequent calls, and these customers were nearly all strangers, who had never been in my store before, and many of whom had never heard of Blackistone, florist.

St. Patrick's Day Window of the Bell Floral Co., Franklin, Pa.

A Dead Ad That Still Lived.

That special palm ad I consider the tract. This was in the fall, about four years ago. Just after this I was visited by one of Philadelphia's enterprising commission men and offered a special price on roses in large quantities. You must have had an awful crop of Richmond roses here at that time. Anyhow, they induced me to place a pretty good sized order at $20 per thousand.

And now observe the craftiness of the wholesale florist. In this entire first special shipment there was not a rose that was not worth $1 per dozen and a good many of them were worth and actually sold for $1.50 and $2 per dozen. I had placed a large ad of my Saturday special rose sale, at 50 cents per dozen, in the paper, and also put a large sized card in the window, displaying the roses which we were offering. That day everyone in the store, including the boss, was busy all day. When we closed that night we did not have a Richmond rose unsold in the house. That shipment was a sort of coax; I am still trying to get another like it.

Well, with this as a starter, I have continued my Saturday specials. Roses and carnations are the best for this purpose, but we use all and any kind of flowers that we can buy in quantity and at a price which will be an inducement. We have customers who phone and come from all over town for this sale and we always have it. I have paid 60 cents per dozen for carnations and sold them for 50 cents, giving greens and delivering in a box at this price, in order to preserve this custom and not disappoint our patrons, and it paid to do it.

At our Saturday sales we not only move thousands of flowers, thereby relieving the congestion of the market, but also send flowers and good cheer into poor and obscure homes all over the city. In fact, I have always had this as part of my motive in offering these special inducements.

Our patrons of the Saturday special come on other days for funeral pieces and flowers for other special occasions, and the point sometimes raised, that customers will postpone buying till the bargain day, does not hold good. On the contrary, it increases the popularity of the business and the patrons for the other days of the week as well.

Do not think, however, that the special sale only requires securing of proper stock and inserting an ad in the paper. Oh, no! In order to make a success of it, one must give it close attention and study. Many times I have spent good money in stock and printers' ink and have never seen it returned. Usually I can trace the cause, and more often than not I find it in myself—in something that I have done or have failed to do.

Special Ads as Educators.

There is another phase of this subject which I must touch on before leaving. It is the idea sometimes set forth by some competitors that special sales are degrading and detrimental to the business in general. In my opinion nothing could be more erroneous. On the contrary, the result is beneficial to all. A large proportion of the flowers sold at a special sale are bought by persons who have no particular need for them. They simply buy because they are getting a bargain or because their 50 cents in flowers is more satisfying than if spent in anything else. If not spent for flowers, it would go for candy, cheap amusement, or something else—perhaps even for something harmful to the health, and certainly not more generous in the spread of sweetness and good cheer.

There are times when the business seems to come to a standstill, when it seems to need a stimulus or tonic; not with one establishment in particular, but with all. And then it is that the good, rousing special starts things going and helps everybody. Especially, and beyond argument, is this true in the fall, just as all flowers are beginning to come into full crop and the public have gotten out of the habit of buying greenhouse flowers, and again after the Christmas holidays, when all flowers are so high that people in ordinary circumstances are afraid to come in and even ask the price.

Fifteen years ago the special flower sale was scarcely heard of. The reason, which you all know, is simple. Then the output of flowers was perhaps not more than ten per cent of that of the present day and all stock was easily disposed of. Then the florist was simply the florist. Today he must also be the artist. Tomorrow, in order to succeed, he must be the florist, the artist and the merchant combined.

A Part of the Florist's Mission.

"Necessity is the mother of invention," and the special sales are brought about by the unalterable laws of nature. Who shall say that the great glut of berries, which enables the poorest to enjoy them when they are the most luscious, and even to preserve them for the winter season, is an evil? Who shall say that the production and the maturing of any of our vegetables, the vegetables we serve on the table, the fruits and grains of the earth, the trees, the grass, and the flowers, is a mistake? Some may tell us that this periodical overproduction is a necessary evil, but I do not see it as such.

FLOWERS DELIVERED TO ALL PARTS OF THE CITY

Casket Cover of Roses by the Art Floral Co., San Francisco, Cal.

Gentlemen, I have no panacea to offer for this or any other of the evils, real or imaginary, which we may have, but I am convinced that with proper forethought we can, by means of the special sales, actually turn defeat into victory. This is our mission, our opportunity; this is the means by which we can place flowers within the reach of every family; this is the means of educating the poor as well as the rich in the love of flowers. Do you realize that if flowers were bought by only the wealthy people, fifty per cent of the florists in the city of Washington would have to go out of business? Here, and likewise in many other cities, the running expenses and the bread and butter of the florists and their families come from the poor and the moderately well-to-do classes.

Thus it is not only our necessity but our duty to find a means of distributing this bountiful supply which nature has placed in our hands. It is our mission and our opportunity to educate the people, to instill in the hearts and minds of the young and the old, the rich and the poor, the love of nature and all her works, the love of trees and shrubs and every flower that blooms.

This is the mission of the florist in the generations to come, and we can utilize the special sales as one of the means to this end.

CHICAGO RETAIL ADVERTISING.

The retail florists of Chicago are pushing along so rapidly that the flower business is coming to hold a place of importance in the list of the city's mercantile interests. It is advertising that is bringing the business into the public eye. All four of the advertisements reproduced on page 12 were in the Tribune Saturday morning, March 2. In the original they were double column spaces, and therefore in the aggregate they made nearly half a page of the big daily. Now, no one needs evidence that an industry that is good for a half page of the highest priced space in the country, possibly excepting New York, has a real importance in the eyes of the managers of the big organs of publicity. The florists' interests are well worth catering to.

The advertising florists are not charging fancy prices, but they are moving a tremendous lot of stock and making a great number of new flower buyers who become an asset for the growers.

THE CASKET COVER.

It used to be said that the supreme test of a florist's abilities as a worker with cut flowers came with the orders for brides' bouquets, but of late the nature of the test has been changed—nowadays the real showing of ability is made on casket covers. The accompanying illustration is a good example of a pall of roses made by a competent cut flower worker. The original was from the Art Floral Co., San Francisco, P. Vincent Matraia president and manager.

There are several ways of making a cover of flowers for a casket. Flowers of any variety or a number of varieties can be used, but upon the type of flower depends the frame or body of the cover. The stiff wire frames, as made by the wire workers, are perhaps used as a framework more extensively than any other. For large flowers, such as lilies, chrysanthemums or Beauties, this wire frame is best. After lightly covering the frame with green, the usual way is to fasten the flowers with No. 20 to 24 wire, bent like long hairpins. It is always advisable to bring the wires up from underneath, so as not to leave a lot of ends, which would mar the casket. Some florists moss the wire casket cover frames as in other design work, but this others consider useless. Only when using galax leaves as the background, is moss required.

Mosquito netting adapts itself nicely for use in making covers out of roses, carnations, narcissi or other flowers of medium size and not too stiff stem. A cover made in this way conforms readily to the shape of the casket. The flowers are attached in the same way as to the wire frame; a number can, of course, be fastened at one time if the stems are long.

When making such small flowers as violets, sweet peas, Roman hyacinths, etc., into a casket cover, many skilled workers sew or pin the flowers to a piece of moss-green denim. This makes a graceful cover. The flowers are first made up into small bunches of about a half dozen with the stems cut short, and these small bunches fastened to the cloth. Only a little extra green is required; of course, the bunches must be fastened close together. In order to facilitate matters, one will find it a good plan to lay the cloth or wire netting over one of the regular stiff wire frames while working on such a cover.

Until one knows from experience about how many flowers are required for a cover, it is a good plan to keep a record of those you make. Note the size and kind of flowers and the number used. The size and quality will, of course, change the figures somewhat, as will also the spacing of the flowers; still, one will find a record a great convenience when asked to estimate the cost of a cover of a given size.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Directors' Meeting.

The meeting of the board of directors will be held in the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, Wednesday, March 13, at 10 a. m.

A Letter from England.

The following letter has been received by the secretary from the management of the Royal International Horticultural Exhibition in London:

"Dear Sir: I beg to thank you for your letter addressed to Mr. Geo. J. Ingram, and have been instructed to write and thank the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists for their kind offer of three silver and three bronze medals to the exhibition, to be awarded at the International Exposition in London for plants and flowers of American origin.

"Our directors very much appreciate the kind gift, and have requested me to ask that the said medals be forwarded as soon as possible, in order that they may be exhibited with cups and other trophies prior to the exhibition, and, if possible, should they arrive in time, figure in the coming Souvenir Catalogue.—Yours faithfully, Geoffrey W. Henslow, M.A., Organizing Secretary."

ILLINOIS STATE FLORISTS MEET

Officers Elected.

President—Charles Loveridge, Peoria.
Vice-president—Charles W. Johnson, Morgan Park.
Secretary—J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville.
Treasurer—F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.

Sidesteps the Plunge.

For a moment, March 5, the Illinois State Florists' Association stood on the threshold of an open door leading to a new field of labor in which there is great need of powerful leadership—but it stood only a moment—then it backed away.

It was the seventh annual convention, held at Joliet, and W. L. Palinsky, of Chicago, had brought up the subject of the great damage done to florists because of illuminating gas seeping through the ground in cold weather into greenhouses near leaking mains. Mr. Palinsky and several other Chicago florists have suffered damages from this cause this winter and it developed that President-elect Loveridge, of Peoria, has just had a similar loss in two houses containing 3,500 rose plants that dropped their leaves. So graphically did the Chicago man paint the troubles of the small grower in getting an adequate settlement from a powerful corporation that, after a half dozen speakers had related the facts regarding other such losses of which they had heard, a motion was made that the executive committee gather data and seek expert testimony to be available whenever the members are in need. Mr. Palinsky explained that he did not seek financial aid in the suit he purposes instituting against the big Chicago gas corporation, but wanted the backing of the organization to give weight to the florist's side of all such cases. He said he will fight it out on principle anyway and put his story in such plain language that for a moment the association seemed about to accept his invitation to "come on in; the water's fine." Then it declined to take the plunge. J. F. Ammann, H. B. Dorner, George Asmus and others pointed out that the departure was not only radical but that its effect would be far-reaching, that much work would be necessary, that it would bring the association frequently into court and that it might detract seriously from the experimental work for floriculture the association has in progress and requiring all the effort of which the association seems capable—in other words, the association has its hands full, and the motion was withdrawn. Many individuals offered personal assistance in case of losses similar to those that have been unusually numerous this winter.

The Opening Ceremonies.

The business sessions were held in the parlors of the Hotel Munroe, across the street from the exhibition. President Washburn asked W. N. Rudd for some introductory remarks. He spoke of the well known hospitality of Joliet and told the story we all like so well, about there being no florists at the institution at which abide a considerable number of those in other walks of life. He introduced Mr. Mooney, secretary to the mayor, to give an address of welcome in behalf of the absent executive. Mr. Mooney said that Jo-le-et appreciates its own florists and always welcomes visitors from the craft. George Asmus responded and pointed out that the association's first president, James Hartshorne, was a Joliet man. He also emphasized the fact that the organization does not foster individual interests but seeks to advance the general good, having worked so successfully that other states now are following the lead of Illinois, notably New York, which is seeking a state appropriation for experimental greenhouses at Ithaca.

President Washburn's address will be found in full in another column.

Secretary's Report.

Secretary J. F. Ammann read the lengthy minutes of the 1911 meeting at Champaign and then presented the following brief annual report:

"I take great pleasure in reporting a successful year of our organization.

this association is shown by the liberal appropriation made for floriculture in the last general assembly. This is work, gentlemen, that this organization can be proud of. Full reports of this work will be given by others later on.

"The finances of our association are not large, yet I am pleased to report a balance to date of $234.01.

"We have increased our membership in the last year as follows: Annual members, from 153 to 175. Life members, from eighteen to thirty-two. Honorary members, four, giving us at this writing a total membership of 211. So far as your secretary knows there have been no deaths in our ranks during the year. I shall not dwell on the ever important question of new membership any more than to say the importance of this I am sure we all realize and the way to get new members we all know, so just hustle."

Treasurer's Report.

Treasurer F. L. Washburn presented the following financial statement:

Charles Loveridge, President-elect Illinois State Florists' Association.

The interest and the display of floral work shown at the state fair held in Springfield last fall, which was directly due to the work carried out by this organization, was indeed a credit to us.

"Another feature of the work of Mr. Hill's Address.

E. G. Hill was introduced by the president "to talk on his new rose." Mr. Hill said that the subject was solely the president's and that modesty forbade his saying much on it; "anyway, the rose speaks for itself." He added that Sunburst was not his seedling, but had been found by him when visiting Pernet-Ducher at Lyons, France, a few years ago. There it stood up above everything else in a big field of roses. After trying it at Richmond for three years the American rights were purchased. He added: "When it gets into the hands of the experts, the Poehlmanns and Keimels, etc., you will marvel at its strong growth."

Mr. Hill complimented the quality of the carnations in the exhibition and said it looks as though the novelty raisers must be encouraged, as it is quite apparent that the best of varieties in a few years break down, perhaps because we reverse the natural order of blooming. "Don't be discouraged if you buy a few gold bricks," he said, "one good one is worth all the failures."

Referring to outdoor roses, he told of the great amount of time and labor and money the European raisers are devoting to the raising of new varieties, but added that these varieties do not meet the American needs. We have raised good garden varieties in this country, notably Radiance and W. R. Smith, but we need more work to raise or test roses for the garden. In Europe from sixty-five to 110 new varieties are offered each year. He described the trials at the Bagatelle gardens at Paris and suggested that something of the same sort be undertaken here, predicting that as soon as a good list of varieties can be recommended with the backing of such a trial the whole trade will feel the benefit of the increased demand, not only for plants for the garden, but for cut roses in the season when outdoor roses are not in bloom.

Work at the Experiment Station.

At the evening session Vice-president Loveridge occupied the chair. Prof. H. B. Dorner, who is in charge of the work being conducted at Urbana under the auspices of the association, made a lengthy report of the experiments, some of them now in their third year. He stated that the staff has recently been increased by the appointment of W. H. Anderson as pathologist and James Hutchinson in charge of greenhouse and outdoor work. The instructional work has greatly increased. Last year there were sixty-eight students and this year ninety-one in the floricultural department. The erection of additional buildings for which funds have been obtained is held up pending the determination of plans for the rearrangement of the campus, which may require the removal of the present plant to a new but not less desirable location. The experiments with commercial fertilizers on carnations have been continued and it has now been definitely settled that as good stock can be grown with these as with animal manures. The station recommends that each grower experiment in a small way for himself and will soon issue a bulletin to place the records obtained in available form. The rose experiments started last year have been continued and appear to show that better results are to be had from grafted than from own-root plants. This season a rose garden is to be established to test the hardiness and blooming qualities of outdoor roses.

A volley of questions followed the reading of the paper, and Prof. Dorner was kept on his feet for an hour and a half.

Charles W. Johnson.

(Vice-president-elect Illinois State Florists' Association.)

W. H. Anderson, the new pathologist, described the work the station is doing on stem-rot in carnations and said that the first thing a grower should do when he discovers a plant affected with the disease is to dig it up with all the soil he can get without disturbing other plants and carry it all outside the premises; delays and half-way measures are dangerous.

Miscellaneous Business.

The committee on president's address, W. L. Palinsky and M. Barker, advised concurring in all the president's recommendations. The report was adopted.

On motion of W. N. Rudd the president was instructed to appoint a committee of three to arrange for the association headquarters booth at the S. A. F. convention.

George Asmus and Chas. Johnson reported having audited the books and found them correct.

The Exhibition.

If the attendance failed to come up to expectations, the exhibition made up for it, as it exceeded what anyone had anticipated, crowding the space so badly that additional room had to be obtained. The number of exhibitors was probably the greatest in the history of the association and the quality of the stock was certainly as high as ever has been seen at any of its meetings.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, showed twenty-five blooms each of Melody, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Antoine Rivoire, Double Pink Killarney and the Poehlmann strain of Double White Killarney. The Melody had the best color and the Ward the best stem many had seen on these roses. The Killarneys had exceptionally long buds.

Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, showed their strain of Double White Killarney, also Killarney and White Killarney roses, with samples of young grafted stock of each variety. In carnations a fine vase of O. P. Bassett was staged and a big fringed white seedling labeled No. 5, and a red seedling. Some fine strings of Asparagus Hatcheri were on the wall.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, staged 100 blooms each of White Enchantress, Gloriosa, Rose-pink Enchantress, Beacon, Norwood and Enchantress. The Beacon were extra good, but many thought the Gloriosa the finest vase of carnations in the entire show.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, was the largest exhibitor, staging fifty to 100 blooms each of Princess Charming, Scarlet Glow, White Enchantress, Victory, Washington, The Herald, No. 94, variegated; No. 150, dark pink; No. 78, light pink; May Day, Conquest, White Perfection, Pink Delight and Enchantress. The Washington were fine, but the greatest interest centered on The Herald and the variegated, which are to be sent out next season, and on the dark pink, No. 150, which is an extremely large flower.

A. C. Brown, Springfield, was the largest out-of-town exhibitor of cut flowers, staging ten varieties of carnations, about fifty of each of the following: Sangamo, Pink Delight, Mrs. C. W. Ward, White Enchantress, Gloriosa, Enchantress, White Wonder, Shasta, Bright Spot and Dorothy Gordon. The Mrs. Ward were especially good.

C. Loveridge, Peoria, was showing Beacon, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Enchantress and Scarlet Glow carnations, the Beacon being especially well done, and fine Princess of Wales violets.

Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, Morgan Park, set up 100 blooms of a fine pure white seedling carnation of remarkable fragrance.

Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, sent fifty blooms of the new red carnation, St. Nicholas, that showed up in fine shape.

W. H. Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, were represented by two good vases of carnations, White Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress.

J. F. Ammann Floral Co., Edwardsville, staged six vases, the varieties being Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Enchantress carnations and, in roses, Ivory, Killarney and White Killarney.

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., showed the new yellow rose, Sunburst, but the originally fine blooms had been touched by frost in transit, as had some big flowers of the new white carnation Wodenethe and 100 blooms of Gloriosa.

A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington, showed 500 Princess of Wales violets of excellent quality.

August Jurgens, Chicago, was represented by vases of three varieties of narcissi.

Frank B. Smith's Sons, Danville, had a large display of blooming plants in pots, including excellent cinerarias and splendidly flowered cyclamens; also a fine strain of pansies and heavily flowered Gov. Herrick violets. In cut flowers they staged some fine bunches of the Herrick violet and a sport of it considerably lighter in color. A large vase of mixed seedling carnations contained some promising things. A big vase of a fine seedling the color of Harlowarden was labeled No. 108-08 and attracted much attention.

Albert T. Hey Floral Co., Maywood, showed an improved Shasta daisy said to be absolutely hardy and so continuous in blooming that from 300 square feet of ground 30,000 flowers were sent to market last summer. Primula veris and small ferns also were staged.

Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., had several tables of palms, ferns, crotons, asparagus, pandanus, dracaenas, etc., and in blooming stock primulas and Easter roses.

George A. Kuhl, Pekin, was represented by a table of Easter flowering plants in bud, including hydrangeas, roses, lilies and spiraeas.

Joseph Labo, Joliet, was represented by some excellent Enchantress, White Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress carnations, some good single violets and Killarney and White Killarney roses.

A. C. Rott, Joliet, staged a number of vases of cut flowers, bouquets, etc., surrounding an ivy wreath of original design, a sheaf of wheat being made up in the center.

The Carter Floral Co., Joliet, staged a well-made broken column with a dove perched on top, several vases of cut flowers and a variety of blooming and foliage plants dressed in crepe paper pot covers.

The George M. Garland Co., Des Plaines, had a section of an iron frame truss greenhouse, showed five styles of iron gutter, a cast-iron eave plate and drip conductor, fittings for semi-iron construction, pipe bench fittings, a new support for bench wiring, and numerous blue prints. A big sign announcing an important new idea in greenhouse construction to be exploited next season failed of satisfactory execution and was suppressed.

E. H. Hunt, Chicago, set up a display of greenhouse supplies, including Tobak-ine products, fertilizers, Elastic-Lyke putty, greenhouse white paint, hose menders, sprinklers and a reel of Noxall hose.

G. E. Travis Co., Henry, Ill., showed a rocking grate for greenhouse boilers, set up so that the visitors could work the handle the same as if there was a fire on it.

I. L. Pillsbury, Galesburg, showed his well-known staple for mending split carnation calyxes.

The following were represented by banners: Bassett & Washburn, Pulverized Manure Co., John C. Moninger Co., United Fertilizer Co., Kroeschell Bros. Co., A. L. Randall Co., Foley Mfg. Co., A. Dietsch Co., all of Chicago.

Judges' Report.

The judges were A. T. Hey, of Maywood, and Carl Rauth, of Springfield. In their report they made mention of each of the exhibits. High commendation was given to the Thompson Carnation Co., for Gloriosa; Bassett & Washburn, for seedling carnations and Double White Killarney rose; to E. G. Hill Co., for Sunburst, and to Chicago Carnation Co., for its seedlings. Special mention was made of the following: White seedling carnation, from Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association; Carnation Wodenethe, from E. G. Hill Co.; Mrs. Ward and White Wonder, from A. C. Brown; roses, especially Melody, from Poehlmann Bros. Co.; White Enchantress, from Charles Loveridge; Princess Charming, White Perfection, Crimson Glow and Washington, from Chicago Carnation Co.; roses and Asparagus Hatcheri, from Bassett & Washburn; Princess of Wales violets, from A. Washburn & Sons; pot plants and the sport from Herrick violet, from F. B. Smith's Sons; hydrangeas, from George A. Kuhl; Phyllis and Tausendschon pot roses and Primula malacoides, from Vaughan's Greenhouses; sport of Shasta daisy, from A. T. Hey Floral Co.; German sprayer, from E. H. Hunt.

Wednesday's Entertainment.

The second day of the convention was devoted to sight-seeing and sociability, as well as to the trades' display. The day had been announced as in the hands of the Joliet florists and quite a few came to partake of their hospitality who had not been able to be present at the business sessions.

In the morning a trip was made through the state penitentiary, the second largest in the United States. It is only on an occasion such as this that there ever are any florists in it.

At noon the entire party was taken to the greenhouses of the Thompson Carnation Co., and later to those of the Chicago Carnation Co., where luncheon was served and some speechmaking, as usual, after which everyone had a chance to inspect the plant. It probably is needless to add that at both places everything was in spick-and-span order.

The following were the local committees in charge:

Entertainment Committee—William Hartshorne, A. T. Pyfer, Peter Olsem.

Exhibition Committee—Peter Olsem, C. E. Carter, Joseph Labo.

Reception Committee—A. C. Rott, P. W. Peterson, John Goranson, A. T. Pyfer.

Tuesday evening the baseball team of the Chicago Carnation Co. gave a dance for the visitors.

THE YEAR IN ILLINOIS.

[The address of Charles L. Washburn, president of the Illinois State Florists' Association, read at the convention at Joliet March 5.]

The year of this association just closing has been an eventful one in several ways. We have passed through the hardest winter the florists' trade ever has experienced in this state since our association has been in existence. The severe cold has cost all of us from forty to fifty per cent more for coal, while we have not received any increased price for our output. There have been numerous accidents resulting from this long cold spell, such as boilers giving out, boiler houses burning down and stock being frozen, but we all live in hope that the season will soon change for the better.

One of the events to which our association has contributed quite largely has been the twenty per cent reduction in express rates in this state, which has saved all of us quite a tidy sum. This reduction was brought about by the combined energy of several commercial associations in filing numerous protests with the State Railway and Warehouse Commission. The officers of your association were especially active in this work and take much pride in the results accomplished.

There are several other matters which probably will have to be attended to in the same way, one of which is the rumored advance in coal rates, which we understand the railroads will try to make effective this spring. This association will have to do its part in looking after the interests of the florists' trade if such a step is taken.

An important problem which is now confronting us is the matter of obtaining good fertilizer. It is almost impossible to obtain a good natural cattle manure and we are liable soon to have to resort to the use of chemical fertilizers. I would suggest this matter be taken up by a committee and let them confer with our state testing station, so that proper information in the shape of bulletins may be issued by the station, showing what chemicals are best adapted for fertilizer use, the quantities to be used and their method of application. Also, can chemicals be successfully used in combination with animal manures?

The testing station has done valuable work with carnations and we are looking forward to their report on roses with a great deal of interest.

Our association is now seven years old and has proved itself a healthy child. What we need is an increased membership, as the association would be much more influential if backed by a larger membership. Our dues are nominal, only $1 a year, while the field for its usefulness is so large that every florist in the state should become a member.

Let us all appoint ourselves a committee to impress on our brother florists who are non-members that it is their duty to join with us and assume their share of the responsibility and work of this association.

The exhibition of flowers and plants at our meeting places gives good results to both the exhibitor and the members by acquainting both parties and showing what stock is grown. It also arouses the interest of the general public and has a widespread and beneficial effect. This feature of our meetings should be encouraged.

The exhibition of new varieties occurring at this time, it is just the time of year for the trade to judge of their value and it would be a good idea if the introducers of these varieties could address us on their cultural requirements and the number of flowers that can be produced per plant under average condition.

Illinois is to be favored this year by the Society of American Florists holding its meeting in Chicago and I would suggest that if our association could secure a booth for headquarters in the exhibition hall, where our members could make it a social meeting place, it would add to their comfort and also be a good advertisement for this association. Let us all do our share in helping make the S. A. F. meeting a grand success.

The relations between the various officers of the association have been most pleasant and helpful and I wish to thank you cordially for the honor conferred upon me in serving as your president the last two years.

HARDY CUT FERNS.

There need be no special alarm over the quantity or condition of the hardy cut ferns now in storage—none but the holders of the stock will be seriously affected. It is true that the Massachusetts shippers have issued prices for March, April and May that are a considerable advance over what has been charged in previous years, indicating, no doubt, their state of mind, for an advance of 35 cents per thousand over what was asked in other Mays would only be the result of a somewhat panicky feeling over the size and condition of the stock. But this is a big country and New England is no longer the only source of supply on ferns. There are considerable quantities of Michigan and southern mountain ferns in storage in the west, more, in fact, than in any previous year. Then, too, this has been a winter of deep and lasting drifts, so that the "snow birds" may be expected to come out showing excellent quality for this class of stock. As a further bar to excessive prices, the far south and the Pacific northwest ship ferns early and far—good prices in the north and east always bring these supplies to the front.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Chicago, Ill.—The Adjustment Bureau of the Chicago Association of Credit Men February 28 reported having taken over the assets of the American Metal Box Co., formerly the Illinois Self-Watering Box Co., in the interest of the creditors, of whom there are eighty-three, Joseph T. Ryerson & Son being the largest. Subsequently the concern was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy by N. W. Ayer & Son, the Philadelphia advertising agents, who have a claim of $1,400. The total claims are about $31,000. The Association of Credit Men is trying to get the bankruptcy petition dismissed, so that the business can be liquidated as a going concern. It is said that the self-watering flower boxes are a good seller and profitable, all the losses having occurred in other departments of the business.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, 1913.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago offers its gold, silver and bronze medals to the National Flower Show committee for award as the committee may deem fit.

The Horticultural Society of New York also offers its gold, silver and bronze medals, to be awarded by the society's own judges for especially worthy exhibits.

TEMPERATURE FOR ASTERS.

At what temperature should asters be kept in the greenhouse for extra early blooming? C. G. P.

Asters require to be grown moderately cool and must have abundant ventilation. A night temperature of 46 to 50 degrees, with 10 degrees of a rise in the daytime, will suit them.

NOTES ONGLADIOLI*GLADIOLI AS A SPECIAL CROP.

[A paper by Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., read at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., in the Fifth Annual Farmers' Week, February 19 to 24, 1912.]

For the last ten years probably no other flower has gained popularity so rapidly as the gladiolus. The principal reason for this is the great improvement made in both size and character of the individual flower, as well as the better defined colors and markings. By experienced hybridizers, also, the strength and vitality of the corm or bulb has been so increased that gladioli of such breeding can be successfully grown in any climate and under extremely unfavorable conditions, and with little care compared with that necessary to succeed with most other flowers.

I am a firm believer in the theory that the acme of success is best attained by those who choose an occupation or profession more for the love of environment, and the possibilities of development, than for the financial returns. While I believe this is true in all walks of life, I contend that in agriculture, horticulture and floriculture we have the best support of such argument. Who are your most successful farmers, fruit and flower growers in this country today? I dare say, if you were to canvass this great Empire State, you would find such men and women in close touch with every detail of their industry so far as practical, and not merely directing it. I believe, also, that a certain amount of sentiment should accompany one's work; not too much, however, for this is dangerous, and the development on extreme lines of sentiment has made many a grower bankrupt.

Elements of Success.

In specializing there are many important as well as minor conditions and principles which must be taken into consideration to insure success. While soil and climatic conditions, as well as easy access to good markets, are the principal ones, labor conditions and economy in the preparation of the soil, planting, cultivating and harvesting, with improved machinery adapted to special crops, must not be lost sight of. There is today hardly any crop which at some stage of its growth is not attacked by insect pests, although it may be immune from disease; it is therefore quite essential that the specialist should be prepared to cope with these adverse conditions before much, if any, damage is done.

Experience is a good teacher, but experimental work, even on the most economical lines possible, is expensive;

hence I would advise the prospective specialist to become thoroughly familiar with the chemistry of agriculture, which includes the ability to analyze soils and prepare proper fertilizers, as well as insecticides and fungicides.

From force of circumstances I have, unfortunately, been obliged to deny myself the pleasure of attempting to master thoroughly the scientific end of this work, hybridization, which in itself is enough to demand constant attention from one person, and I have found it quite impracticable to unite the scientific and commercial branches of the business and secure satisfactory results. I have therefore contented myself until recently with securing the seedlings of the world's most successful hybridizers of this flower, the majority of which are from an enthusiastic banker, who has made the study of the gladiolus his life work, and who, like your speaker, believes that the real demand for this flower has not yet begun and the possibilities of further improvement have not yet been exhausted, even though to some it would seem that the acme of perfection had been reached.

As probably but few, if any, of you are familiar with the fact that my industry was not begun on a commercial basis, but is the development of a fad, I trust I may be pardoned if I preface my remarks with a few references to the early history and sentimental part of my work.

Some Personal Reminiscences.

Meadowvale Farm, Berlin, where I was born, lies in the Taconic range of mountains, in the valley of the Little Hoosac river, a picturesque stream, fed by mountain trout brooks, at every turn of which the lover of scenery is inclined to place his camera. It was here, when a boy, that an unusual love for flowers took hold of me. No work in my mother's garden was too hard or irksome for me; her approbation and the pleasure in arranging bouquets with the flowers grown, more than repaid me. At the age of fifteen I left home to attend school in the city and afterward to embark in business, during all of which time the garden at Meadowvale received my attention, although necessarily at intervals.

Among all flowers I found none so attractive as the gladiolus, and although I grew many other kinds, to this one I gave special attention, buying every year such as I could afford, and especially from the better varieties which the seedsmen might have unsold late in the season, and upon which I could secure lower prices. So it was that year after year my stock increased, both by purchase and growing, until I found myself with more than I could conveniently handle. My father remarked to me at one time that, if I were not careful, I would have the entire farm planted to flowers. The thought then occurred to me: Why not make a business of growing the highest possible quality of these bulbs and sell to seedsmen and others? The result is that there are few of the prominent American seedsmen of today who are not selling some of the Meadowvale product, and through other channels large quantities are distributed annually through every state in the Union; many thousands, also, are exported to foreign countries.

You will note how easy it is for me to make these last statements. I wish to assure you, however, that it was no easy task to secure the indorsement of my stock by the seedsmen of this and foreign countries, and not until I had established a demand in a retail way was I recognized. I do not mention these facts to discourage you, but rather to demonstrate that no matter what may be the quality of one's product, so long as he is a new disseminator his path is not strewn with flowers.

Gladioli in Their Wild State.

The gladiolus or sword lily in its wild state is a native of South Africa, Madagascar and some parts of Asia. It is, therefore, more or less of a tropical or semi-tropical nature and had to be acclimated to be grown successfully in other climates. There have so far been discovered about 140 wild species, many of them bearing beautifully colored, small, dainty flowers. Comparatively few wild species, however, have been of great value in building up the several strains commercially and scientifically that are recognized as standards of perfection in their respective types. Without close inspection even the professional grower could not detect the wild blood in many of the modern varieties, and he, too, is often puzzled and unable to decide to his entire satisfaction.

The process of breeding up to the finer strains and varieties of the present day has been a long and tedious, yet interesting work, and one which has required much skill and study. In breeding, not only must the color, size and texture of flower be taken into consideration, but also many other attributes which are necessary to secure a well balanced plant. Some of these requirements I will mention: First, strength and vitality of the bulb, giving it power to withstand the changes in soil and climatic conditions, without which the most beautiful flower would be worthless. With this feature I have had much to do, especially with foreign hybrids and self or field fertilized stock, upon the former of which I have spent many thousands of dollars in experimental work, in the end discarding beautiful specimens which, from the lack of this one requisite, were rendered valueless for dissemination. Other points which the successful hybridizer must consider are the proper number of flowers to a spike and their correct arrangement thereon, length and strength of spike, foliage, and the ability to reproduce rapidly.

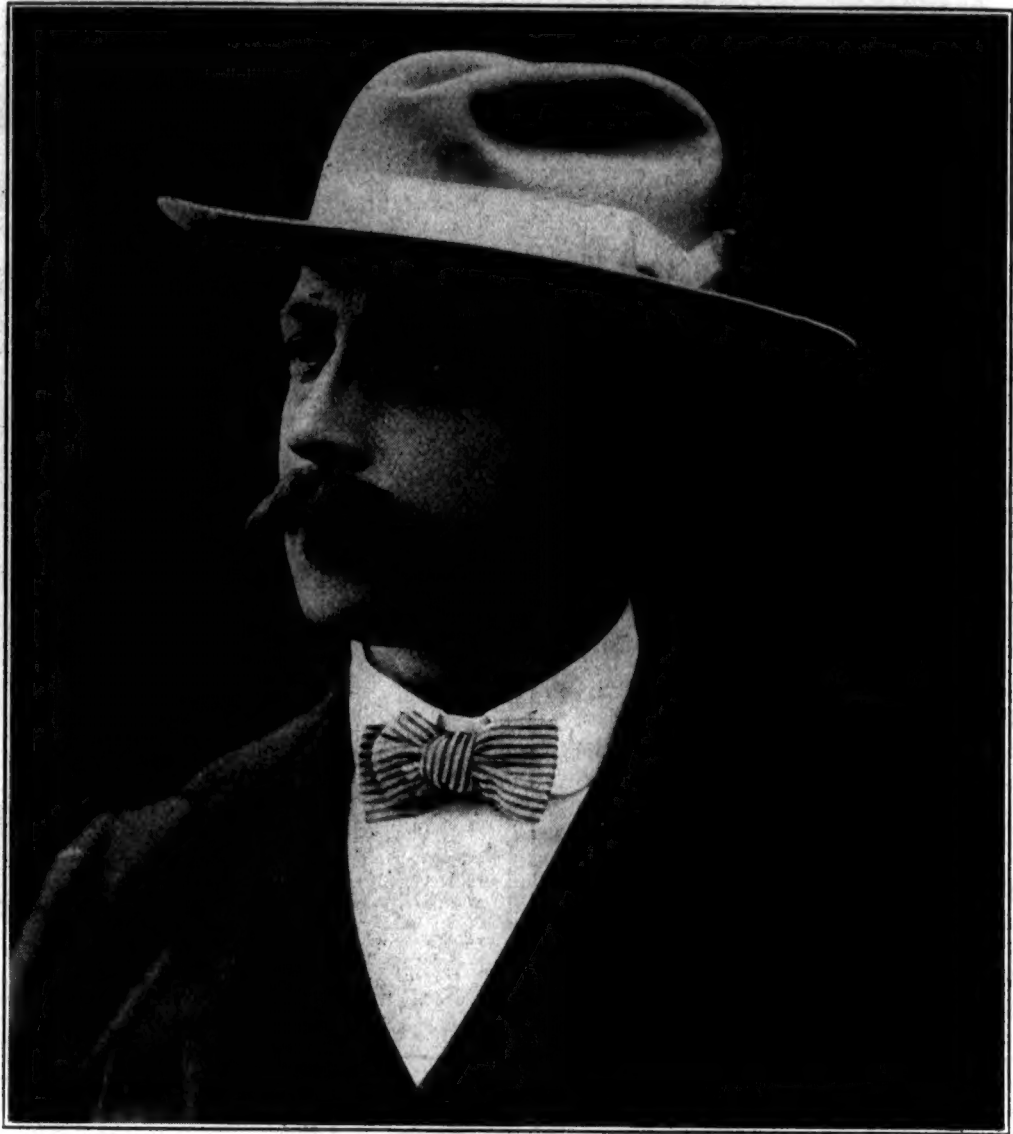

Commercially, gladioli are divided into five classes or strains: Gandavensis, Lemoinei, Nanceianus, Childsii, and, last but not least, Groff's hybrids. This last strain comprises all of the most desirable qualities of the others mentioned, without reference to the particular species from which they are bred, the highest standard of quality being sought for, irrespective of parentage.

Planting and Cultivation.

Gladioli are increased in numbers in two ways: First, by the hard cormels which form about the new bulb and above the old bulb planted, the latter of which dies in producing and nourishing its offspring; second, by the bulbs which grow from the center of, and the sprouts upon the side of the planted bulbs. These last mentioned are all of blooming size, and I have seen as many as seven bulbs so formed; this, however, is rare.

The black cormels have to be cultivated one, two and sometimes three years to produce strong blooming bulbs. They are planted, or rather sown in rows twelve inches apart. Two years ago I arranged a machine so that it would open the furrows, sow cormels and fertilizer, cover and press the earth on top, and this with two rows. Formerly the ground, after being thoroughly pulverized, was furrowed by two men and a horse, six furrows being made at one time. Following this operation, a man with a fertilizer distributor, another with the cormel sower and the third with a hand-wheel plow completed the planting.

With the bulblets, those which are to produce salable or blooming stock, the process is quite different. These are first rubbed lightly over coarse screens to remove the roots which have become brittle during the storage period, and at the same time the small cormels which have adhered are loosened and passed through the screen. The bulblets are then carted to the fields in trays or bags. Drills are prepared thirty inches apart and about four inches deep, into which the bulblets are distributed, to be properly spaced and placed by hand by the large gang of men required, after which an ordinary potato hiller passing over the rows completes this planting, leaving the bulblets about eight inches below the top of the covering. In about a week or ten days, according to weather conditions, the cultivating and weeding begin. While we formerly were compelled to do a great deal of hand weeding, the most of this work is now accomplished by the use of horse cultivators and weeders, which are kept busy until the plants begin to show bud. We calculate to start the cultivating just before the weeds show above the ground, and by the time the spikes begin to appear few weeds are in sight and the soil has become quite level, so that the bulbs continue their growth about four inches below the surface.

The Labor Question.

Berlin being a small village, the labor question became a serious problem with me as the industry increased, to cope with which I conceived the idea of making use of "Weary Willies," or what are termed "hoboes," "tramps," "wandering workmen," or whatever you may choose to call them. The first season I managed to halt and employ about half a dozen, to whom at the end of the harvest, together with the rest of my regular men, I gave a chicken dinner. The second season more came and the third more still, so that accommodations for taking care of them were not sufficient. I then organized a camp, furnishing to every man a blanket and firewood for cooking, making a nominal charge of 25 cents per week per man. The result was that I did not lack for labor and was able to select my men according to their individual ability, for usually more arrived than I could employ. Neighboring farmers took advantage of my surplus help and were more or less encouraged to increase their plantings.

These men, as a general thing, are quiet, industrious and sober while in my employ, for I have made it a point to impress them with the fact that I consider them honest gentlemen until otherwise proven. Now and then, however, by reason of some dishonest fellow's answering to the name of an absent man, the roll is called the second time and every man is required to step in line, so that the missing one is not again checked.

Everything ran smoothly until three years ago, when my hoboes struck for higher wages (I was paying $1.50 per day). I was compelled to accede to their demands, it being late in the season and considerable valuable stock unharvested. The strike fever again attacked them the following season, but, fortunately, it was early in the harvest and I concluded to take a chance with local help, with which I managed to squeeze through. Since the second strike I have made it a practice to employ none of the men who were connected with it, and they all know that it is useless to apply again for work. Some of such return, however, and loiter about for a day or two hoping for an invitation; disappointed in this, they leave.

A Useful Water Reservoir.

Several years ago, having experienced an unusually dry season, I constructed a reservoir on the hill near the trout brook which crosses my farm, turning the water by means of a dam and canal, for spring freshets would not permit of large storage on the brook. From this reservoir a sufficient supply of water for irrigating purposes could be taken. On account of the rotation of crops and the fact that some of my fields were too distant to be reached by my pipe line economically, I was compelled to partially abandon irrigation. Nothing was lost, however, by the installation of this reservoir and pipe line, for the reservoir now furnishes us with plenty of ice, and the water through a 10-inch pipe, with a 200-foot head, develops sufficient power for lighting all of my buildings, and for the operation of my saw mill, where trays for the storage of bulbs and crates for the shipping of flowers are prepared. Custom sawing is also done, for the accommodation of the farmers of the town.

Every season, soon after planting time, inquiries begin to arrive from the surrounding summer resorts: "When will your fields begin to bloom?" "When will your fields be at their best?" and other questions of similar purport. Even before there is much color in sight, automobiles, tally-ho coaches and vehicles of all descriptions begin their trips, which are continued throughout the season of blooming. Convenient roadways through the fields permit the visitors to examine more closely the different blocks of color and individual flowers, and, so far as it is practical, the plantings are arranged so as to show the colors in harmony.

One enthusiastic annual visitor to my fields, an elderly gentleman who is an invalid, has his chauffeur station his auto up on the bank above the large field, where he can secure the best view, and he will sit there and gaze over the mass of color until the ladies of his party become impatient to return to their summer home in the Berkshires. A few years ago a moving picture was taken of my fields during a large cutting of flowers and was reproduced about the country for some time after.

Cutting and Shipping.

At the beginning of the blooming season shipments of cut spikes are made in lots of 100, in half-barrel baskets, but as the season advances these shipments are increased, requiring crates in which the spikes are packed standing upright. The spikes are cut when but one or two buds are developed, care being taken to cut little foliage, for if due consideration to this point is not given, the bulb is weakened. The flowers are allowed to wither, lying upon the ground for an hour or two, according to the temperature, and are then packed and taken to the station for shipment that night.

Hotel dining tables throughout the country are kept supplied, from our fields, with shipments which, with proper care, furnish a creditable decoration for an entire week. The wholesale and large retail florists in the city come in for their share of shipments, as this flower is most valuable for them at that season of the year, it being so hardy that it can be satisfactorily developed after having journeyed a distance requiring as long as forty-eight hours. Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., offers for registration the following carnation. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date. TOO WITHERED TO BE NAMED.

Will you please examine the enclosed package of violets and tell what kind they are? They came with some California violets. We bought a variety for Princess of Wales, but they were small and of light color. This is a heavy bloomer. The stems were longer and the flowers larger than now. S. H. B.

The flowers came much dried out and could not be named. If the Princess of Wales was small and light colored it was not true to name. This is the finest of all single violets, is dark blue and produced on long stems. Too early housing of single violets will cause the flowers to come paler in color and be produced less freely. One or two light freezings should always be given the plants before they are lifted; otherwise they will produce far too much foliage and the flowers will be of inferior quality. A suitable night temperature is 40 degrees as a minimum. C. W.

VIOLETS FOR IDENTIFICATION.

I bought some violets last spring, thinking I was getting Princess of Wales. I have been told, however, that they are not that variety and if they are not, I want to know it. I am sending under separate cover a sample of the blooms and leaves. You will see that some of the leaves are not perfect. They are dry about the edges and I do not know what to do for this. I have cleaned the leaves two or three times, but they become the same way again. S. M.

The flowers were completely shriveled on arrival and could not be identified. It is necessary, in sending these or other flowers a considerable distance, to wrap damp cotton-wool or moss about the stems and they should also have been in water some hours before being packed. Tin or light wooden boxes are preferable to cardboard ones, which usually arrive crushed.

The disease which affects the edges of the leaves is common among double violets. Single varieties are more immune from it. Better get new stock from a really reliable specialist for another year. Princess of Wales is a large, dark violet, produced on long stems. It succeeds best in solid beds, and the night temperature should run as near 40 degrees as possible in winter. The plants, to give the best results, should be left out until they have had one or two moderate freezings. It is a great mistake to house them early, as they will then make a lot of rank foliage and bloom poorly. C. W.

PRESIDENT VINCENT'S HOPES.

President Vincent, of the S. A. F., purposes making organization the battle-cry of his administration. That it is no new subject with him is shown by the fact that almost fifteen years ago, at the Providence convention of 1897, the question "Would Organizing State Societies of Florists Be of Any Benefit to the Florists or the Society of American Florists?" being up, Mr. Vincent spoke as follows:

"Having been a worker for many years in an organization of the tillers of the soil, an organization that places its faith in the Giver of all things, and coöperation of all engaged in the cultivation of whatever can be grown in the soil, a worker and not a leader or lecturer, I feel out of place to stand before so critical an audience as I see facing me. But having only been asked for suggestions, I simply give you my ideas on the subject and if there is anything in them worthy of your attention you will, I hope, adopt them, or anything that will help the success of our association.

"Yes; just as soon doubt the advisability of combination among other trades and pursuits. No vocation, no profession but is promoted by the coöperation of those engaged in it. To say otherwise, to believe otherwise, would be to have the hands on the dial of progress moved backwards.

"Associations of those engaged in the same pursuits, with common interests and with mutual aims, is the watchword of the day. Whether it is the laborer in the mine, the shop, or the factory, the farmer in the field, physician, lawyer or in whatever calling men may engage, the first step towards independence, advancement, self-protection and defense is the union of segregated individuals into a compact and mobile force, whose vital influence and efficient power may be wielded as an energetic unit for the good of all.

"Should the florist be an exception? Hath not a florist eyes? Hath not a florist hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions, fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same summer sun and winter breezes as any other tradesman? If you prick us, do we not bleed? If you tickle us, do we not laugh? If you poison us, do we not die? And if you wrong us, shall we not have revenge?

"The effect upon the national society of a complete group of state societies, selecting the most advanced, intelligent and energetic members to send each year to its annual sessions, would be:

"(1) To give it a representative character, and standing equal in dignity and power to associations of other business, and an efficiency not now possessed.

"(2) To enroll under its standard those who are at present inert, lukewarm, or positively unfriendly.

"(3) The influence upon the individual florist might be counted:

"(1) To stimulate to larger, broader views; take him out of the local and provincial field, and widen his vision; to consider his vocation in its national, even world-wide scope, and promote the interchange of valuable experiences, and inspire an esprit de corps in his class.

"(2) To bring him personal gains by the advances necessarily secured where a thousand rivulets, bringing information, mutual aid, timely suggestion and friendly coöperation, will give volume and momentum to the resultant stream.

"Let us have a state society in every state, and a tributary local club in every town and neighborhood where numbers will allow, and all links in a sentient chain, each one necessary to the completeness and strength, to the efficiency and force of the national body, which, thoroughly representative in composition and character, material and aims, will give us a place eminent among other organizations, honored and applauded for good work throughout the land. Remember the fable of the bundle of arrows, each easily broken of itself, but once bound together, beyond any force to disrupt. Let us recognize and remember that with gardeners and florists as with every other profession and pursuit, however lowly or however exalted, 'In union there is strength.'"

GLOXINIAS FOR AUGUST.

Please inform us when we should start bulbs of gloxinias and tuberous rooted begonias in order to have them at their best from August 15 on.

D. F. C.

Start the tuberous begonias and gloxinias right after Easter and you will have each in good flower from August onward. Also, if you have any seedlings of either begonias or gloxinias, sown during the present winter, these, if transplanted into flats of light soil and later potted, will flower at the time named. The gloxinias will require more heat than the begonias and are also more susceptible to injury from sunshine. C. W.

THE "COMING" HOUSE.

Frequent reference has been made during the last few years to the "wide" house, as the "coming" house, and the illustration, reproduced herewith, of W. H. Weinschenk's greenhouse at New Castle, Pa., indicates that the wide house arrived some time ago, for this house has been up long enough to have had a thorough test. Of course conditions have much to do with the style and construction of any greenhouse, and the hilly country around New Castle, Pa., particularly lends itself to the type shown.

This is said to be the largest vegetable house in the world; it is 120x600 feet; the long span of the roof is ninety feet; the glass is 20x30, laid twenty inches between the bars, and there is a total of 80,000 square feet of glass in the roof. For ventilation a double row of sashes at the ridge and a row in each wall below the eaves is used. Planting is done directly on the ground, the soil being plowed and cultivated the same as in the open, with enormous crops of lettuce and tomatoes resulting.

This house has proven so satisfactory that two more of the same general type are to be built at New Castle this summer. The John C. Moninger Co., whose pipe frame construction was used in the house illustrated, is furnishing material to E. P. Weinschenk for a 226-foot extension to a house 100 feet wide formerly erected by him.

Weinschenk & George are also going to erect a new Moninger iron frame, flat rafter house 125 feet wide, which will contain about 45,000 square feet of glass. This will give New Castle, Pa., three establishments with houses almost identical with the original, making a decidedly distinctive showing.

FREESIAS NOT FLOWERING.

Our freesias this year were a complete failure. We use Purity and we potted them in 4-inch pots, giving them the usual treatment. The foliage developed in good shape, but the flower spikes did not show at all. We have generally had good success in the growing of these pretty flowers and are at a loss to find a reason for this failure. The plants were chilled during the January cold snap, but were not touched by frost. Can you help us to locate the trouble? D. F. C.

It is quite unusual for freesias not to flower at all. They succeed best in a night temperature of 50 degrees, but are sometimes grown a little warmer for early flowering, and often 5 to 10 degrees cooler. Provided you bought well matured bulbs and gave them correct cultural treatment, the flower spikes must have been destroyed while in a tender state by a sudden drop in temperature. You should be able to cut open the growths and find out if they are blighted inside. Heavy fumigation and excessive feeding will damage the foliage and adversely affect the flowers, but I have never known either to completely destroy the flowers while in an embryo state.

TO KEEP BRUSHES SOFT.

In looking over a newspaper I have just noticed a paragraph that has reference to the care of paint brushes and I thought that the suggestion offered on the subject might be of interest to many readers of The Review. So I am passing the paragraph along, without vouching for the correctness of the idea it contains. It reads as follows: "After finishing a job of painting, if you don't want a can of oil standing around the house, fill the bristles of the brush with a good supply of paint, carefully wrap it in paper, tie it securely with a string and place the brush on a shelf. The oil in the paint will soak the inner wrappings of the paper, thus preserving the brush in first-class style for two years."

DALE'S CATTLEYA.

The photograph reproduced on this page gives a fair idea of a unique Cattleya Trianae, Dale's Variety, recently discovered by the orchid grower for the Dale Estate, Brampton, Ont. Both in size and shape this flower is a magnificent specimen, having great depth of petal, each measuring three and three-fourth inches. The whole orchid measures eight inches across, the lip being two and one-half inches wide, with a blotch of deep purple shading off to lavender around the margin, and bright orange running well into the throat. As will be seen, the flower is perfect in shape, as all segments overlap each other. This is the second "find" during the month of February.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Shading.

Many of the orchids will now be benefited by a little shade. It should be light in every case, for, although on some days we are now getting quite genial sunshine, on others it is dark, raw and cold, and these conditions are likely to continue more or less during the month of March. The ideal orchid shade, and one almost exclusively used in Europe, is a movable one of either lath blinds or cloth. The former is the best, as it admits light, but breaks the direct rays of the sun. On account of their cost and the additional labor involved in manipulating the shadings, these have not yet become popular in America, except on some private estates. The general plan is to syringe or paint the glass with kerosene and lead, or some similar, easily applied shade. In applying shade now, carefully avoid overdoing it. All that is yet necessary is to streak the glass or cover it with a light, cloud-like effect. The orchids requiring most shade are phalaenopsis, cypripediums and miltonias. Odontoglossums should also have a little shade after the middle of March.

Cymbidiums.

Many of the cymbidiums are now pushing up their spikes, and at this stage the plants require a good water supply. None of the cymbidiums are warm house orchids. They succeed well in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. For compost I find fibrous loam, broken but quite lumpy, charcoal and fern fiber to be excellent. Three parts of loam and one part of fern fiber are about right, and the compost should be firmly packed in the pots. Cymbidium flowers have wonderful lasting properties, both on the plants and cut. C.

Lowianum will easily keep a month in water and three times as long on the plants. Cymbidiums do not flower freely until well potbound. A few good varieties to grow are C. Lowianum, C. eburneum, C. eburneo-Lowianum, C. Traceyanum, C. insigne, also called Sanderi, C. Lowianum concolor and C. tigrinum.

Cœlogyne Cristata.

The several forms of Cœlogyne cristata are now in flower, or will be shortly, and care should be taken to increase the water supply somewhat. The plants will develop their flowers even if quite dry at the root, but this is a heavy tax on the bulbs and will cause them to shrivel much worse than they would otherwise do. Cœlogyne do not require a warm house; 50 degrees at night is sufficient, and they can be wintered 5 or 10 degrees cooler than even this. The best form of C. cristata is that known as the Chatsworth variety. The bulbs are longer and more oval shaped than in the case of the old type, which has round bulbs and short spikes of inferior flowers. It is also a much shyer bloomer than this Chatsworth variety. C. cristata Lemoniana, with a pale lemon colored lip, is a beautiful form and keeps decidedly better in a cut state than C. cristata itself. C. cristata alba, with its pure white flowers, has a rather more sprawly habit than the other forms, but flowers a little later.

All cœlogyne are valuable in floral design work, and a few baskets or pans are of great value to any retail florist. When the bulbs become dense the plants need overhauling. This should be done after flowering. The plants will not bloom much the first season after being divided and it is therefore inadvisable to overhaul all the plants in any one year.

Cattleya Trianae.

Cattleya Trianae will bloom for a few weeks yet, although the bulk of the crop is now cut. As the plants pass out of bloom, any which require repotting should have attention. Possibly the removal of a little of the surface compost and the replacing of it with some new fiber will answer for some. Others, which are rooting heavily over the sides of the pots, should have fresh receptacles. No cattleyas are in a really thriving condition with their roots outside, rather than inside, the pots. The old idea of giving the plants a long and rather severe rest after blooming is to a large degree exploded. As much as possible of the potting should be done now, while the weather is cool, and before other duties unduly crowd us. Give the plants good drainage. Use the coarse brands of osmunda fiber for them, and be sure to firm the compost thoroughly. No orchids will thrive if loosely potted. On warm, sunny days a light spraying overhead will benefit all the cattleyas. Be sure, however, that it dries before nightfall.

Calanthes.

The calanthe bulbs, which have been in a dormant condition since the flowers were out, are now showing new growths at their base and should be shaken out of the pots and started in flats of sand, moss and old cow manure. I always find that a little of the latter, if quite old, mixed in the sand and moss, starts more vigorous root action. Water sparingly at first; an oversupply will be liable to rot the bulbs and must be carefully guarded against. A brisk heat should be given the bulbs at the start; 70 degrees at night is not too much.

Laelia Anceps.

The flowering period for Laelia anceps having passed, any rebasketing or potting should be done at once. It should not be necessary to overhaul these more than once in two or three years, but a little surfacing will be of advantage to many. Plants which have to be pulled to pieces will not establish themselves sufficiently to flower freely the succeeding winter, and it is not good policy, therefore, to repot too many. The various white forms of this charming Mexican orchid possess greater vigor than the colored ones. Their flowers are larger, possess more substance and keep better in water than the ordinary types, and also have a much greater commercial value. Such forms as L. anceps Stella, Sanderiana, Schroederiana and others will carry four to six flowers per stem, and these are worth as much money as the blooms of Cattleya Trianae. This laelia wants a cool, light house in the growing season. The cattleya house is too warm for it. A carnation house, with just sufficient shade to prevent scorching of the foliage, is what they like, and the pans, pots or baskets should be hung well up to the glass.

Laelia Jongheana.

Laelia Jongheana, which was quite scarce until a decade ago, is now fairly abundant. It is a native of Brazil, and enjoys a little more heat than L. anceps. The cool end of the cattleya house suits it to a nicety, the plants being hung quite near the glass. This variety carries quite large flowers for so small a plant; they are occasionally six and seven inches across and average five inches. The flowers are quite flat and have less character than, for instance, L. anceps or L. elegans. The color is generally soft, rosy purple in the sepals and petals, the crisped lip being of a darker shade. Two to five flowers are carried on a sheath. L. Jongheana comes into flower with Cattleya Schroederiana, at a period when orchid flowers are not overabundant. It grows best in rather small, shallow pans, similar in size to those used for Oncidium Rogersii.

Florists Review,

Gentlemen:

The Florists Review did it all! Our two-inch display ad, offering our new gladiolus Prinsessine to the trade, made its first appearance in the F.R. of November 23rd. In December we were corresponding with foreign publishers regarding advertising rates; but, before we had placed our order with them, inquiries came pouring in from home and abroad, therefore we thought best to withdraw our ad from the Review for a lot up. On Jan. 1st we asked you to discontinue our ad until further notice, but there was no letup until all the stock was sold. They did not even leave us any for our retail trade and yet we have to do something which a man hates to do, returning some nice looking checks.

The Review reaches the buyer no matter where he is located.

Yours for Success,

Here's a house for those who can't get the cost.

Odontoglossums.

The old idea about wintering odontoglossums was to give them a northern exposure, practically sunless, for several months. In such a house the plants would keep green and make a little growth, rapidly deteriorating when the hot summer waves arrived. A far better plan, and one now more generally adopted, is to give them a light, sunny house and a temperature of 50 to 52 degrees at night. The sun will bronze the foliage, making it tougher and better fitted to stand the summer heat when it arrives. These odontoglossums can not be grown here as they are in Europe. They are surely the finest of all orchids when well grown, and cattleyas have to take a back seat. Their culture in America is, however, always likely to be attended with more or less uncertainty. Some day we may be able to cool houses for them, as we heat them today. If we are ever to grow them well we must gradually accustom them to a higher winter temperature, for the warmer we grow them, the better are they likely to withstand our trying summers.

Quite a few flower spikes are now pushing on the odontoglossums and, to protect these from the attacks of snails, a piece of cotton-wool should be wrapped around the base of each spike. The danger of damage from snails is materially lessened if sphagnum moss is not used when potting them. O. citrosimum is now making its new growths, from which it will flower. It is better to keep the plants quite dry at the root for a little longer yet. The plants will flower all the better for it.

ORCHIDS OUTDOORS IN MEXICO.

The photographs reproduced herewith are interesting as showing how orchids thrive outdoors in Mexico. As will be noted, they are not all Mexican species, several dendrobiums being included in the group by the side of which the native gardener is standing. The photograph of Cattleya Skinneri shows how well this does under the somewhat unusual conditions, a total of 312 flowers on the two plants having been counted by Ed. Howard, of Los Angeles, who made the photographs during one of his Mexican trips collecting plants for the Doheney conservatories.

POINTERS IN PROPAGATION.

Individual Preferences.

The young grower, with a season or two of successful propagation to his credit, has usually some pet scheme for rooting his cuttings and can hardly be brought to acknowledge that there is any other method nearly as satisfactory. Only after he has moved around a little and seen other men equally successful by other means does he begin to think there may be moves on the board with which he is unfamiliar. Then he who would have nothing but two-eye cuttings finds that cuttings with three eyes can actually be rooted and even make good plants. He who firmly decided for himself that nothing but half ripened, wiry wood was worth anything sees stock of a new variety being worked up and every available bit of wood, from soft tips to hard butts as thick as the little finger, going into the sand and finally rooting, and he comes to the conclusion that there are more things to propagation than were dreamed of in his philosophy.

The Future of the Plant.

But this does not alter the fact that there are conditions, both of the wood used and of temperature, which, other things being equal, lead to best results. In rose propagation the future of the plant has to be considered, as well as the fitness or unfitness of the cuttings to root. An extremely small, soft cutting may root all right and count one in the bunch when rooted, but it takes much longer to make a good plant than a cutting of proper size, and is liable, too, to disappear by damping off in the evolution from cutting to plant. Therefore it seems to be decidedly worth while to select good wood for propagation—wood that will hold its foliage and will not wilt before rooting. Such wood makes plants more quickly, leads to a more even "strike" and a good, level batch of plants.

Some Essentials to Success.

A good knife is a trusty friend to the propagator and should be kept in order. Dull knives lead to sloping, jagged cuts, which, in turn, lead to damping off at the tops and a failure to callous freely below. Every bit of foliage that can be retained on the cutting helps to draw roots, so leave as much of the leaf as possible without crowding when inserted in the sand. Medium and heavy wood may be cut in lengths bearing two, or at most three eyes; smaller wood, three to five, and these will root more regularly than will others cut all one length, irrespective of size or condition. The closer the lower cut is made under the lower eye, the quicker the cutting will callous, according to my experience. I do not care for cuttings split through the joint or those with no joint buried, occasional records of success with them notwithstanding.

The House and the Bench.

Much has been written and said on the subject of propagating houses, and many still think that the narrow, two-bench affair, with a center walk, or the still narrower, smaller lean-to with north exposure, is the ideal propagating house. I once thought so too, but now any old bench in the rose or other houses that can be shut in below for the requisite bottom heat, and shaded above with linen, is good enough for me, and the small propagating house, with its bench surface necessarily near the roof ventilators, may be used for incubator chicken raising, or anything rather than propagating.

The question of bottom heat in relation to that in the house resolves itself into the question of supplying enough at the bottom to callous the cuttings well before the tops become active in growth. The actual figures are unimportant; the point is to keep the sand a few degrees hotter than the atmosphere. A sand temperature of 70 degrees, with 8 to 10 degrees less above, is usually recommended and is, I believe, as good an arrangement as possible, though a few degrees higher or lower, provided the ratio is kept up, will be quite satisfactory.

HOUSING ANTIRRHINUMS.

Can outdoor snapdragons be taken into the greenhouse at this time of the year, here in southern Oregon, and will they bloom successfully? They have bloomed in the open ground one year. S. G. B.

It is possible to lift old plants of snapdragons, plant them in benches and flower them with a fair degree of success. The plants should be taken up carefully, preserving all possible roots, and will probably require a light shade for a week or two until established. Of course, the tops should be cut back quite hard. You will not get as fine spikes by this method, however, as by potting on rooted cuttings or seedlings and benching from the pots. There is then no root disturbance and the plants start to grow vigorously at once. C. W.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Lemon-Scented Verbenas.

About everyone who purchases a few plants for the summer garden wants a scented-leaved plant or two, and perhaps the greatest favorite is the Aloysia citriodora, better known as lemon verberna. Perhaps you have remembered to start a batch of cuttings. If not, place one or two of the old plants, which have been kept dormant over winter in a cool cellar, in a moderate heat and spray freely. There will soon be a nice crop of cuttings obtainable, and these, if rubbed off with a heel, will root without trouble in a good bottom heat, and, if potted off, will make nice stock for May and June sales. Mature wood of lemon verbenas does not root readily, and the propagation, while it may be done in the fall, is much better if carried out now, as the little plants can be kept right on growing.

Dutch Bulbs for Easter.

Many inquiries are being received concerning the care of Dutch bulbous plants wanted for Easter. There is often a difficulty in retarding bulbs for Easter, particularly when it comes late, but the long, cold winter has materially helped to keep back this class of plants for what is a moderately early Easter. Provided that the bulbs are either outdoors and well protected, or are in a cold cellar, bedded in ashes, they need not be housed until three weeks before Easter. This would give ample time to flower any of the pans of tulips, narcissi or hyacinths. Should we get an unusually cold spring, a little forcing may be needed, while, on the other hand, a mild wave will send them on with a rush and necessitate storing them a few days in a cool cellar. None of the bulb stock should require to be grown in the dark at all. It will be stockier and better in every way if exposed to full light from the first. Let all have an abundant water supply. Liquid manure twice a week will be an advantage, discontinuing this when the flowers start to develop.

Spiræas.

Such varieties of spiræa as Gladstone, astilboides and grandiflora make splendid pot plants for Easter and are popular, as they can be profitably sold at a comparatively low price. All these should now be well started into growth, and if the spikes are already showing they are all right. Give them a warm house, an abundant water supply and frequent doses of liquid manure. Spiræas are thirsty subjects and may need three waterings daily where rambblers or lilies would only require one. As they grow rapidly now, they will have to be frequently given additional space. Stand some of the largest plants on inverted pots, with a saucer below them, which will prevent their drying out so rapidly.

Establishment of D. H. Smouse & Sons, Mt. Pleasant, Ia.

Spiræa Queen Alexandra.

The beautiful peach-pink spiræa, Queen Alexandra, is not adaptable for early forcing, but started from now onward will do superbly. Its price has come down until it is now within the reach of all florists. It usually pays much better to have this for Memorial day than for Easter, as the flowers are in active demand and they realized as much as $6 per hundred last year at wholesale, and in some cases even more. The plants also sell particularly well for Memorial day. If this spiræa is grown in a moderately cool house from the start, it is much finer than when subjected to hard forcing. A point to remember about it also is to be sure to have the plants in a well shaded house when the flower heads are expanding, or they will soon lose their beautiful pink color and bleach out almost white. The new variety, Philadelphia, promises to be something of unusual merit. Anything which beats Queen Alexandra must be exceedingly fine.

Amaryllis.

To have amaryllis of the finest quality, the pots should be plunged in some material such as oak leaves, tan bark or cocoanut fiber, and they should be on a bench under which the heating pipes run. This insures a nice, gentle bottom heat and the plants appreciate it, as is evidenced by the robust spikes and strong foliage sent up. Treated thus, the plants do not require more than one-fourth the water supply of the unplunged ones. Of course, many growers produce splendid amaryllis without any bottom heat, and no one should fear to attempt their culture, which is comparatively easy, because he can not provide such heat. A night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at this season is suitable for amaryllis. Provided they were not repotted before being started up, applications of liquid manure will greatly improve the quality of the flowers. Amaryllis bulbs are expensive to purchase, and anyone going into their culture should secure a first-class strain of seed as a starter, later crossing the best of these and saving his own seed. It usually takes two or three years to flower amaryllis, although they have been known to bloom in fourteen months from seed.

Calceolarias.

Both the herbaceous and rugosa or shrubby section of calceolarias are now in active growth. May is their flowering period, although it is possible to have some late in April. Be sure that some stakes are given them before any of the shoots can break, as calceolarias are quite brittle. Let these stakes be thin and painted green; this, indeed, applies to all stakes which will show in any way. Grow the plants cool; 40 to 45 degrees is sufficiently warm. The cooler they are kept, the stockier will they be.

Cobæa Scandens.

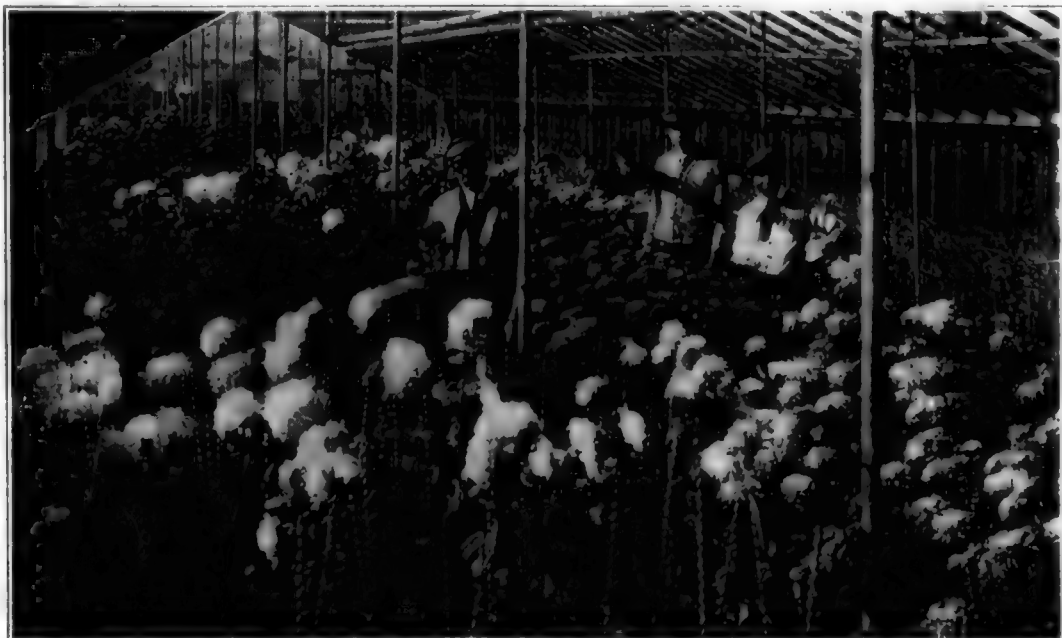

Cobæa scandens is one of the quickest growing and most useful of annual climbers. It is a mistake to sow the seeds too early, as growth is so rapid that the plants become overgrown and, unless carefully staked and tied, will get badly entangled. Sow the seeds in flats or pans, standing them on edge, and cover an inch deep with light, sandy soil. Pot off when they have made their second leaves and give a further shift to prevent their becoming potbound.

TRADE DEVELOPMENT IN IOWA.

In that great section of the country between the Mississippi and Sierras the florists' business is just beginning to grow—the development there in the next ten years will be worth watching. As to present status and recent growth, the report of Smouse & Sons, of Mt. Pleasant, Ia., is typical. They write:

"We have only been in the flower business five years. We began by using a small house made of hotbed sashes heated with a fire train. Later, with a little assistance from a near relative, we were able to erect the two smaller houses shown in the accompanying illustration, in which we grow carnations, bedding stock, ferns and roses. As our business grew we built the larger house, in which we grow one bed of carnations, with the rest in mums, which we follow with lettuce and spring vegetable plants.

"This fall we advertised a chrysanthemum show, which proved to be decidedly successful. We believe that more can be accomplished in the way of advertisement by having an opening of this kind than in almost any other way."

Sweet Peas

PINCHING OFF SIDE SHOOTS.

When sweet peas start to bloom and side shoots start to come, should these side shoots be pinched off to aid the main stem, or should some of these be left on? A. L.

Pinching out the side stems will certainly improve the flowers on the main stems. It is, however, a mistake to remove them, as they will a little later give excellent flowers themselves, especially if you took care to thin your plants out well or allowed them ample space when transplanting. C. W.

BUD WHEN TOO SMALL.

What causes sweet peas to start to bud when about six to eight inches high? A. L.

The winter flowering type of sweet peas always starts to bud when comparatively low, but they should be more than six to ten inches high. Are you sure that your soil is sufficiently rich for them? The poorer the soil, the dwarfer will the plants be when they start to flower. Old seed also produces plants which lack the vigor of those grown from new-crop seeds. Your soil should be liberally enriched with well decayed cow or sheep manure. This should be well mixed with the soil. If in solid beds, in which peas succeed the best, a thorough trenching must be given each season. Under glass, sweet peas succeed perfectly well in the same soil year after year. The bulk of growers on a large scale run cucumbers or tomatoes through the summer, and this change of crop seems in some way to prevent the soil from becoming what is commonly called tired. Provided your soil is deficient in plant food, you can much improve your crop by a liberal top-dressing of fine bone, cow manure or sheep manure, working this lightly into the soil before watering. C. W.

CYANIDE OF SODIUM.

For fumigating I have used cyanide of potassium for some five years and have become fairly conversant with it, but I hear that cyanide of sodium can be used with less danger. What are the differences and how does the formula for cyanide of sodium compare with the one used with cyanide of potassium? F. B.

The principal difference between potassium cyanide and the related sodium cyanide, as used in fumigation, is in the greater quantity of hydrocyanic acid gas given off by sodium cyanide, amounting in the chemically pure salts to nearly one-third (thirty-three per cent) more. In the generation of the gas from chemically pure sodium cyanide, therefore, about one-third more sulphuric acid is required per pound of the chemical to completely liberate the hydrocyanic acid gas. However, as sodium cyanide is frequently adulterated with inert substances, in order to standardize its cyanide content with that of potassium cyanide, a 100 per cent sodium cyanide becomes equal to pure potassium cyanide in quantity of gas generated. It is well, therefore, in using sodium cyanide to insist upon getting the pure, or 130 to 133 per cent, substituting this in the potassium cyanide formulae in the proportions of three parts of the sodium cyanide where four of the potassium salt are indicated, thus preventing an overdose. Three parts of the sodium will require the same amount of sulphuric acid as four of the potassium salt.

Pineville, La.—Emil Blum, formerly of Memphis, Tenn., has removed to this town and will begin at once the erection of greenhouses on Main street, adjoining the Jewish cemetery. He will also do landscape work.

Upper Sandusky, O.—A. A. & B. E. Constien, on West Johnson street, have ordered the materials for an addition to their greenhouses. The new section will be built this spring. The firm grows both flowers and vegetables.

Tipton, Ind.—Frank A. Benthley has been suffering severely with rheumatism throughout the winter; or, as he himself states it, the disease has been giving him "one continued round of pleasure." However, he has been able to attend to business.

Stamford, Conn.—Hilary F. Le Page has one of the finest stores in New England, part of which is occupied by the Frost & Bartlett Co., tree specialists. The new combination is expected to be mutually advantageous.

Hudson, N. Y.—R. W. Allen recommends a single white zonale geranium, Snowdrop. The bloom is close formed, petal perfect, fine truss, good keeper and excellent for funeral work. Cattleya Schroederiana is in bloom and is a splendid variety.

Irvington, N. J.—Edward Jacobi has had considerable success in the growing of mushrooms. After giving both a good trial, he strongly favors the American product. His cellar runs entirely under the range of glass devoted to Carnation Enchantress. The latter is another of his specialties.

Kansas, O.—The greenhouses of A. W. Schuster have been purchased by Byron Jones. Mr. Schuster and his family will make their home on a farm which he recently bought, near Charlotte, Mich. Mr. Jones is removing the greenhouses to the lots at the rear of his residence, on South Jacob street.

Moscow, Idaho.—Scott Bros., who have greenhouses here and also at Garfield, Wash., have decided to make changes that will greatly increase the capacity of the Moscow establishment. One feature of the improvements will be the erection of a handsome show house, with a height of sixteen feet and a frontage of thirty-five feet on Main street. It is said that the firm may remove the Garfield houses to this place and use the glass in the construction of the addition here. Under the management of Scott Bros. a business has been developed that makes Moscow the supply point for an extensive territory.

SEEDS
CUM CUM FRONDS

Slingerlands, N. Y.—Fred Goldring reports a pleasant trip to Ithaca recently.

Woodside, N. Y.—William Spiwaek has leased the greenhouses of Edouard Matthes, at the corner of Anderson avenue and Second street, and will continue the business. Mr. Matthes is planning to remove to New Jersey and make a new start in the florists' trade there.

North Brookfield, Mass.—A new corporation, to be known as the Pine Croft Greenhouses, has been formed here, with an authorized capital stock of $30,000. The officers are: President and treasurer, Howard S. Hill, of East Brookfield; clerk, Walter W. Clark, of Worcester, with Howard E. Webb, of Worcester, as the third director.

Tyler, Tex.—Mrs. Frank Hewitt reports that business for the year 1911 was the best in her experience and the prospects for this year are bright. Last year's corn and peach crops, however, were short. Once this winter, she says, the outside temperature dropped to zero, and the winter as a whole has been the coldest ever known in this part of the state.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The schedule of prizes for the June flower show was adopted at a meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society Tuesday evening, February 27, and has been placed in the hands of the printers. The premium list this year is an attractive one, with a few changes from last season. Some new features will be seen at the show.

James Robertson read a paper during the evening on "The Dahlia and Its Culture." This was followed by a general discussion, in the course of which Carl Bogholt, gardener for Miss Fanny Foster, explained his method of grafting dahlias, from which he had received good results. Winfield S. Sisson told of the preparation of flowers for exhibition and others took part in the discussion of the subject.

John Barren was awarded a cultural certificate for a fine specimen of cineraria.

Albany, N. Y.—J. A. Danker keeps ahead of the seasons. Just now his store window is a spring creation, with pans and small window boxes of crocus, ranunculus and the like, which are catchy and good sellers.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
 Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting,
 Buffalo, N. Y.
 Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
 We both have them.

PRINTED letter-heads are so cheap it is extravagance to try to do business without them.

IN another week the ground hog will have proved the correctness of his prognostication.

THE demand for competent help again exceeds the supply. Gardeners always come into demand as the sap begins to climb.

CONSIDERING that the subscription prices are so cheap, a surprisingly large number of florists write, in renewing, that The Review now meets all their needs in the way of trade literature.

L. MERTON GAGE, secretary of the American Gladiolus Society, sends The Review a copy of the Handbook of the National Gladiolus Society of Great Britain, which contains much of interest to gladiolus growers in this country.

It is the general report that trade dropped off after Ash Wednesday rather more sharply than in the last few years, and that it has not yet recovered, but that the winter season was unusually good. The report is general that funeral work was remarkably heavy during the first six weeks of the year.

HERETOFORE the problems of the florists have been those of production rather than of distribution, and the great majority of growers located in the residence districts or the smaller cities still are producing less than they sell, but for ten months in the year the city wholesalers now must seek an outlet for their stock, which presents an entirely different situation for the attention of the retailer distributors.

THE PRICE OF GLASS.

At the moment there is no price on window glass. That might seem like good news to the greenhouse man, but the fact is that March 1 the factories withdrew all quotations, and the jobbers promptly did likewise, pending an adjustment of wage scales at a meeting in progress this week at Cleveland. The trade understands that as soon as the men have been settled with, new prices for glass will be announced, probably before the end of the week. What the new prices will be is guesswork until they actually are announced, but there is unanimous opinion that there will be an advance. Greenhouse sizes are not in large supply; in fact, they are so well cleaned up that, low as the prices have been, the greenhouse sizes actually have been selling at a higher price than the other sizes in the same bracket. Therefore some of the dealers think the advance on greenhouse sizes will not be so great as on other small sizes, while some apply the opposite reasoning and look for a bigger boost on the greenhouse sizes than on any others. The probability is that the advance will be not less than 20 cents per box, and possibly 30 cents.

FAKE SUBSCRIPTION AGENTS.

The Review repeatedly has warned the trade not to pay money to strangers for its account—all those authorized to represent The Review are well known in their respective communities
 —this paper has no traveling solicitors.

Pennsylvania and the contiguous states appear to be an especially fertile field for the fake subscription agent, for most of the complaints of this petty swindle come from that section. In nearly every instance the florists who are caught are victimized by an offer of something for nothing. It is the old story. No matter what other publishers may do in the way of giving premiums, trading stamps, or coupons, no such methods are employed by The Review; circulation built by offering something the prospect will buy when he wouldn't buy the paper for itself is valueless to the advertiser, that's why. The Review, like the space in it, is sold on its merits. When someone offers you a book or any other article at half price, or free, if you will pay him for a year of The Review, know thereby that it is time to call the police.

Special Warning!

At Philadelphia a man signing himself M. B. Briggs has represented himself as a canvasser for the Franklin Square Agency, of New York. There is such an agency, but it is not authorized to take subscriptions to The Review, though Briggs has done so. The Franklin Square Agency states that Briggs is an impostor, for whose arrest and conviction a reward of $25 is offered by the Periodical Publishers' Association of America, 156 Fifth avenue,
 New York city.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The week in which February ended and March began gave the wholesalers and growers the biggest kind of a jolt —it gave them cause for serious thought, but the harder they used their thinkers the more disconcerted and bewildered some of them became; the future is not at all clear. In the years of its greatest growth the profits in the flower business have been so good that there was ample room to make a living for even the growers with the most lax methods; but times have been changing. This season average prices have hardly been up to other years during the time that not much was being cut, and now that the spring crops are on, the bottom has so fallen out of the market that not a few of the large class of happy-go-lucky growers wonder what their finish is going to be. For the wholesalers' part of it, some of them have had so little stock that for the greater part of the winter they have been content to sell it locally and have let the shipping trade drift away; with these the glut is far more serious than it is with the houses that have catered consistently to the out-of-town trade. For the last fortnight the market has been going down so steadily, and so rapidly, that even the most business-like growers and the most progressive wholesalers have been asking themselves if it is going to keep on getting worse every year or if the recent condition merely has been the result of some combination of circumstances.

not foreseen, not understood and not likely to be repeated. Nobody has the answer, but Fleischman's celebrated page-ad sale has dropped completely out of the discussion. Fleischman merely looked a few days into the future, that was all. Anybody could sell at Fleischman's prices any time these last two weeks.

It is some days now since any flower has been short of the demand. The weather has been unseasonably cold and the demand abnormally light. Stock has been so plentiful that forced sales have been the rule, even with roses, although these have done better than other flowers. The supply of Beauties, as well as of the Killarneys and Richmond, is increasing, and with the increase prices recede. The wholesalers hope for an improvement, but can not see just where it is coming from.

The heaviest oversupply is of Enchantress carnations, although white is not much better off. The greater part of the receipts have been sold to the special sales people. The price has been from $10 per thousand to $5 per thousand. Violets have refused to clean up at as little as $1 per thousand, the weather being too cold for street wear. Probably they will sell when it is warmer. White and lavender sweet peas have been difficult to move, but pink has done better. Even orchids have accumulated, more because of light demand than because of large supply.

With no real market for the big staples, the fate of the bulbous stock and the miscellaneous flowers of more or less indifferent quality is easier imagined than described.

Business picked up a little March 4, but the demand was not strong enough to raise prices; all that it did was to give a somewhat better clean-up than was had during the preceding week.

Everyone is hoping for settled, mild weather to draw the people out of doors. It is thought that then most flowers will sell at some price and that the waste will be greatly reduced.

Retailers are reporting the usual dropping off to trade during Lent, but at the same time everyone seems to agree there is more funeral work than has been the rule in former years. This condition has prevailed, according to those who have reason to know, ever since the first touch of winter.

Various Notes.

It is announced that E. E. Pieser, who enjoys being called the Peony King, has closed a deal with the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, for the purchase of all the roots in its big field of peonies. The plantation includes ten acres. The terms have not been made public, but it is stated that the sellers have valued the stock at $1,000 an acre. The Carnation Co. is to have the 1912 crop of blooms and the purchaser is to dig the roots in the autumn. Mr. Pieser states that he will sell most of the stock, using the remainder for planting on one of his farms.

The lease being about to expire on the ground now occupied by Geo. C. Wagner's greenhouse, he states that he will be forced to remove it this spring to make way for a new building. Mr. Wagner's place is known to all the trade as the old Hobbs plant and is located at Thirty-first street and Indiana avenue.

lively trade in bulbous stock, having imported extensively. Mr. Branch states that the new store recently opened at Fifty-eighth street and Prairie avenue has succeeded beyond expectations.

John Zech is suffering with an attack of lumbago; it makes work a burden, but is not sufficient to keep him at home.

W. H. Hilton, who has run a retail store at 1320 West Sixty-third street for the last fourteen years, has sold his lease to a hardware dealer and will confine his efforts to the new store, which he has been operating at Fifty-third and Jefferson avenue. At the latter place the business has been increasing rapidly and he has decided to turn all his attention to that one place instead of trying to conduct two separate stores. Catering is also one of the lines at Fifty-third street.

Orchids are in steady demand with Andrew McAdams, at Fifty-third street and Kimbark avenue. He looks forward to a big Easter trade and his bulb stock is coming along in fair shape, although in some instances the plants are a little small, which is believed to be due to their having frozen up rather hard. This has been rather general, however, with a good many of the retailers who do some growing, and the same condition has been reported by Fred Quasthoff, at Forty-sixth street and Cottage Grove avenue.

John F. Farrell, 4645 South State street, has been rushed with an unusual number of funeral orders, and, while some lines of trade have been slow with him, the same as all over the city, on account of Lent, he says he has had his hands full.

It is reported that Edward Tilden will enlarge the conservatory which is now in use at his recently completed home at Drexel boulevard and Forty-eighth street.

John F. Kidwell, president of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, has assumed the duties of managing director of the concern and reports business lively considering the condition of the market since the advent of Lent.

from the pranks of the storm of two weeks ago when the wind, inward bound from the lake, blew in one plate glass window of their retail store at Lake avenue and Forty-seventh street, and, after strewing potted plants all over the floor, made exit by the way of the Lake avenue side, where two more good sized plate windows suffered the fate of the first.

Since his company moved to its present location the old store has been considered by numerous other wholesalers, but it now passes out of the market. buying for W. J. Smyth, says that since the market has eased up there has been no special reason for complaint. Funeral work is steady and heavy.

August Poehlmann states that in the month of February Poehlmann Bros. Co. unloaded 152 cars of coal. At one time in January some of their sheds where they have only limited storage capacity were down to forty-eight hours' supply.

It is announced that the Skinner Irrigation Co., of Troy, O., has purchased all the patents and good will in connection with the Wittbold watering system from E. H. Hunt, Inc., Chicago, to whom they had been previously assigned by Louis Wittbold, the inventor.

Otto Wittbold says the call for bedding stock is increasing daily at the Edgebrook greenhouses and the Easter bulb stock is being brought in from outside. Pans of tulips already in bloom are much in evidence. Easter lilies are a little short of stem for cutting, but should make good pot plants. The spiræas are beginning to show color.

Frank Oechslein says business has been remarkably good considering the cold weather. His Easter rose plants are already showing a fine lot of buds and the rest of the blooming stock is in good shape. Mr. Oechslein says the ground was so badly frozen that the digging of bulb stock was difficult, but he now has the Easter allotment all in the houses.

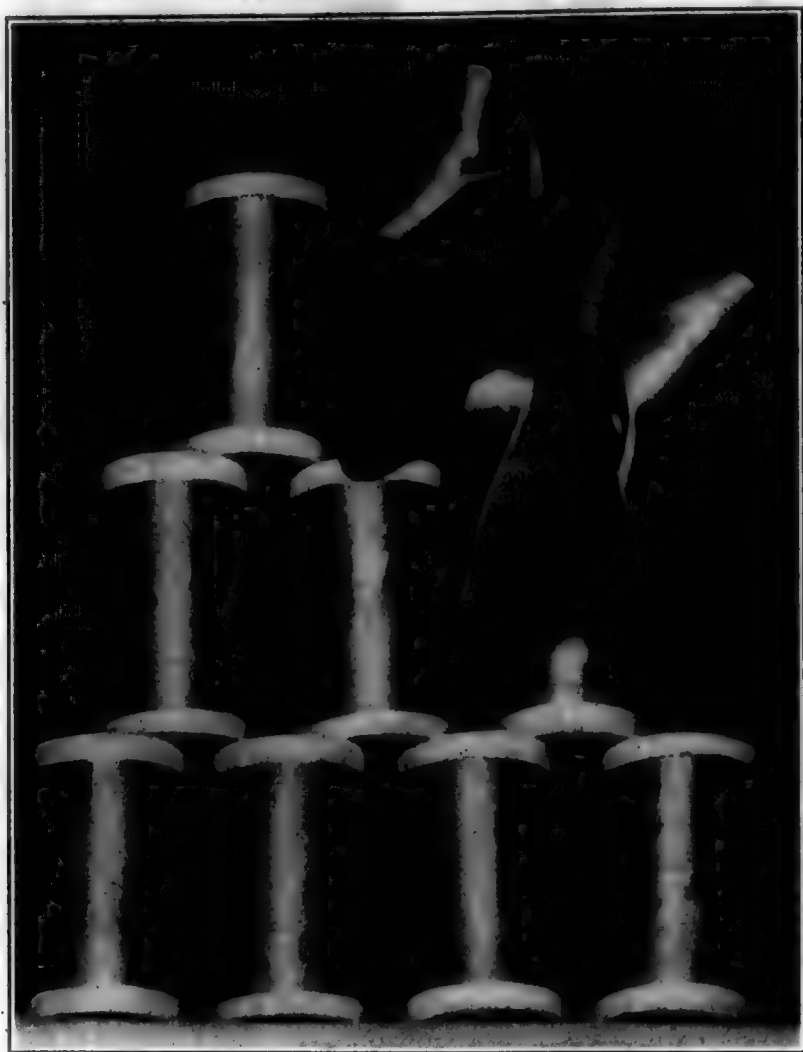

Fred Lautenschlager is making an extensive eastern trip for Kroeschell Bros. Co.

"The biggest February business in our history," is the way D. K. Harris, manager for the Pulverized Manure Co., expresses it.

John C. Moninger Co. has made a number of recent additions to the office force, including Mr. Rupp, Jr., who will assist Mr. McKee with the advertising. A large punch press and other new machinery has been added to the factory equipment.

A runaway at Edgebrook nearly resulted in the death of one of the Wittbold horses February 28. A team became frightened at a train while the driver was unloading boxes at the freight station. In the scramble resulting the shaft of the wagon broke and was driven part-way through the neck of one of the horses.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The reports of the market for the week commencing February 26 will not be encouraging to growers, at least as far as St. Louis is concerned. To put it mildly, the glut was on all through the week in everything the market affords at this time of the year. The especially heavy stock included California violets and carnations. The prices obtained for these in large lots can not be quoted correctly. The supply was far greater than the demand; consequently a large amount was left unsold and eventually dumped to make room for fresh consignments.

In roses the market is not so badly overstocked, but there are enough shipments to satisfy the local call. Lilies went begging at $5 per hundred for excellent stock. There is also an abundance of bulb stock of high quality, which had to suffer along with the other stock. The consignments of sweet peas from the Kirkwood growers were the largest this market has as yet received. Excellent long-stemmed stock in all the leading varieties was sold as low as 25 cents per hundred in large lots.

The leading retailers say the first week of Lent was about the dulllest they have experienced this year. Funeral work was the only important factor in the retail trade last week.

Various Notes.

Hugo Gross is strong, this season, on carnations, sweet peas and violets. At BOSTON.

The Market.

The cut flower business has been in a thoroughly demoralized condition for the last week, and it is a long time since prices have been so ruinously low at this season of the year. We have had another cold wave, and while less severe than some of its predecessors, it was accompanied by cutting winds and made flower selling on the street an impossibility for several days. Roses, which have held up unusually well for the last two months, have slumped with the rest, and values are practically cut in halves. The quality remains particularly good, but there is a slackened demand for even the best stock. Carnations have rarely been in a worse plight in winter than they are today. Absurdly low quotations have been made to effect clearances—prices which could barely pay the express charges. Of course, first-class flowers are selling, but the prices on even these should be double what is being obtained to be profitable. The clear sky is bringing violets on with a rush and veritable avalanches of these are arriving. Singles now are of superb quality.

Sweet peas are overplentiful, while bulbous stock is in a bad condition. Trumpet narcissi sell as low as 50 cents per hundred. Valley is in a weak condition, but gardenias are temporarily scarce. Lilliums are selling low, as are callas. White marguerites do not sell well, but yellows move much better. Mignonette, English primroses, snapdragons, dimorphothecas, calendulas and other miscellaneous flowers have an uncertain sale. Pink snapdragon sells as well as anything on the list. Dendrobiums are good. There is still a good supply of cattleyas. Green stock only sells moderately. Colder weather has affected pot plant

E. H. Borowski, of Roslindale, has a grand lot of rambler roses in variety coming on for Easter. Mr. Borowski handles Lorraine begonias particularly well, and, in fact, anything else he tries his hand at.

Galvin's, on Tremont street, have a superb orchid display this week, their Dendrobium nobile being of exceptional quality.

The March meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, to be addressed by Geo. W. Kerr, of Doylestown, Pa., on "Sweet Peas and Their Culture," promises to have a record attendance. An extraordinary interest is being taken in sweet peas this season.

J. A. Zinn, on Park street, is featuring large boxes of Dutch hyacinths in solid colors in the window display. He has a fine assortment of lilacs and orchids.

Chester I. Campbell arranged a superb floral effect for the big annual automobile show in Mechanics building, which opened March 2. One hall represents an old English garden scene, and another an English garden fete. Hedges of boxwood and climbing roses are used in great numbers.

Farquhar & Co. report the volume of seed business in January as below the year 1911, but February showed a gain. Mail trade is heavy, but counter trade slow, owing to severe weather. The T. J. Grey Co. reports a tremendous increase over 1911. This firm has taken an additional floor and all hands are up to their ears in business.

February proved an unusually cold month and March has been frigid so far. With low prices and prospects of a coal famine, the florists' outlook is not bright, but Easter is coming and winter, it is hoped, will soon pass.

fine shape, mostly in pots, in all colors. Violets are a glut and prices are down to where they can not be grown profitably in this state. They are now offered by the curbstone fakers at 10 cents a bunch, but are all single varieties.

years. The snow was about twelve inches deep, and at quite a few places parts of houses were broken in by the weight on the glass, but no great loss of plants has been reported so far.

The window in the store occupied by the W. L. Rock Flower Co. was most beautiful last week, hyacinths, orchids and lilacs being the chief flowers used for the display, all artistically arranged. This firm's new store is rapidly nearing completion, and when they once get settled there, they will have plenty of room on a good street.

Miss Jennie Murray reports a fine business here. Her show window is always in fine trim.

August Luther, Jr., whose greenhouses are located in the east part of this city, has everything full of well grown plants for spring trade. He is now busy repotting his geraniums, of which he has an unusual stock, all his own propagating. S. A. Nutt is his leading variety. He has extra good luck in begonias, having a large collection in fine shape, and seedlings in flats by the thousands. His cinerarias in bud and bloom are fine. Fuchsias are strong and healthy. Two crops of lettuce were grown in two houses. He finds a good demand for this at $1.35 per bushel. He sells it by weight, eight pounds to a bushel. He delivers all by his auto truck, taking in twenty bushels as the smallest load. He has five greenhouses, which he purchased together with about two acres of land from his father, August Luther, who has now retired from active business, having lost his wife a year ago. He is planning a trip to California.

A. Arnold has secured a stall in the city market house and he is now there attending to the shop daily. He has just completed one more large greenhouse and will build two others this summer. His spring stock is in fine condition, the geraniums especially. His cyclamen are extra fine this year, and he has had no trouble in disposing of them. He also has a large stock of vinca vines, and roses in pots for spring sales are coming on in good shape. He is the heaviest grower in this line in or about this market.

Samuel Murray has been taking extra pains to fix his show window for the last two weeks. The old saying is that "competition is the life of trade." Arthur Newall has moved up close to him and the two shops now make the city block quite attractive.

WORCESTER, MASS.

Roger Newton Perry, though only 18 years of age, is now fully embarked in the florists' trade at 82 Park avenue, after rather a notable career as a young amateur. Being ordered by his physician to live outdoors, he has had his garden and flowers since he was 8 years old. In 1905, at the age of 11, he began exhibiting at the shows of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in Boston, where he won many first prizes. In 1909 he entered the children's contest organized by Doubleday, Page & Co. through the Garden Magazine, taking first prizes the last three years. In the Garden Magazine of February, 1911, appeared an article which was written by him and which summed up his nine years' experience in garden work. In 1908 he became a member of the Worcester Horticultural Society, where he had exhibited with children since 1904. Last fall he began the erection of a greenhouse, doing most of the work with his own hands, but necessarily calling in a little outside help. This greenhouse, 20x50, was finished in January.

PHILADELPHIA.The Rising Eastern Market.

The question has sometimes been asked, "Is it not difficult to write a market report each week?" Not at all. Get the facts, consider them, and describe truthfully. That is all, unless it be added that work of any kind requires one's best efforts to achieve success. The conditions in the market this week are such that description is painful to peruse rather than pleasant, so it will be brief.

There are more flowers, and there is less business, than a week ago. A glance at the price list does not show this clearly, because flowers are sold at the same figures that they brought one week ago, but fewer qualify in the higher grades. Many more go into the lower grades. Many add little or nothing to the receipts. The return of winter, the absence of flower buyers from the city, the increase in production, all aid in the demoralization of the market. The quality of much of the stock is excellent. This is particularly true of carnations. Many of them are of exhibition standard. The volume of business would be considered fair for the second week of Lent were it not for the unusual cost of production and for that difficult problem, the surplus.

He met his visitors with a hearty welcome, showed them his dandies with pride and courteously answered their questions.

At length the propagating house was reached; the type is familiar, a long, narrow house, with a central walk and sand-filled bench on either side. Thousands of dandies had been carefully set out in the sand, but something had gone wrong; many had lost their foliage, many were rotting, few were rooting. It was a distressing sight. The visitors sympathized, consoled, suggested, advised. He looked calmly at the wreck and only smiled; not a word of reproach for himself or anyone else, not even a solitary cuss word escaped him, he simply talked pleasantly and smiled.

Perhaps you will think this is a poor story. It may be that you will throw down your paper in disgust; yet consider among your friends how many of them could have such true sportsmanship. That man was not only the Champion Dandelion Grower of Swainsonia; he was a thorough sport in all that the term implies and a true gentleman.

water, into which the spikes are plunged.

Roguing and Classifying.

With the first blooming in the fields, the roguing begins. This work is done mostly by girls, who generally have a better eye for colors than men or boys, and consists in removing plants from mixtures, color sections, and named varieties, which from carelessness during the winter's work have been misplaced. You can readily appreciate that a purchaser of a delicate pink or almost pure white variety at from $5 to $12 per dozen would not be pleased to find in his purchase shades of red, or inferior flowers of any color, the bulbs of which could be purchased at much lower prices. We therefore exercise the utmost caution to prevent such an occurrence. The bulbs so removed, being immature, are lost.

Also during the blooming season the work of classifying the new seedlings for naming and the preparation of new color sections must be cared for. Here is where superior judgment and knowledge of existing varieties is required. New varieties are selected, and numbered tags are wired to the spikes, the bulbs of which are separately lifted at harvest time and placed by themselves, to be further increased. These are usually offered singly or in collections of six, ten or twelve bulbs, to introduce them and prepare the way for the sale of larger quantities. Special attention is given to the preparation of special florists' mixtures, for in their work they require more light colors than the ordinary purchaser. With some individual varieties so selected, many years are required to work up a stock sufficiently large to be placed upon the market, and with some growers prices are not always an indication of quality, but the barometer of production. This principle I avoid as much as possible, preferring to adjust prices according to quality and increase confidence in my standard of values.

In the growing of gladioli, care should be exercised in the selection of proper soil, fertilizers, etc., and we seldom grow more than three years in succession on the same soil, giving a rotation of crops, such as oats with timothy and clover, and then corn or potatoes. High-grade commercial fertilizers and a measured dressing of lime when needed, give us an excellent cut of hay, and the heavy greensward, top-dressed with stable fertilizer the same season, furnishes not only ideal corn ground for the following spring, but places the soil in the best condition for the reception of bulbs the following year.

Harvesting and Storing the Bulbs.

New varieties are secured from seed only, this being gathered before frost has touched the plant, and, after drying, it is stored in a cool, dry place. The gladiolus is not hardy; hence the bulbs must be lifted in the fall and stored in a cool, dry temperature. In the storehouse we try to keep the temperature as near 40 degrees as possible. The harvest time is usually the most anxious part of the season, for in our section of the country the time is necessarily limited in which to lift and store our bulbs, and inclement weather often delays the final digging so that in some seasons the frosted earth has to be first removed before spading.

The greater part of our crop is first loosened in the soil by a double plow, which works on either side of a single row, partly lifting the bulbs, after which the men pull them from the ground, clip off the spike and spread the bulbs upon large sheets to dry in the sun. They are then placed upon screens and the soil and loose cormels are sifted therefrom, after which they are taken to the storehouse and placed in trays four inches deep by two feet wide and four feet long.

After the curing process in the storehouse, the roots are removed. This work is done mostly by boys and girls. During the early winter and until planting time in the spring, the bulbs are sized, counted and shipped in barrels, cases or small mail packages as the orders demand. Commission cases are also distributed in various towns for the convenience of small local buyers.

Gladioli are among the easiest of flowers to cultivate, thriving in almost any garden soil, if it is well fertilized in the fall and thoroughly respaded in the spring. They should be given all the sun possible. While I do not recommend planting too close to a building, if such a location is not too shady, excellent results may be secured.

I do not wish to convey the idea that this flower requires no care, for, to secure the best results, proper soil conditions should be chosen (preferably sandy loam), and the planting, the cultivation during the growing season and the proper methods of harvesting and storing should all be carefully considered. I do say, however, without fear of contradiction, that there is no flower which can be more easily grown, or which will give greater results and satisfaction, commensurate with cost and labor, than the gladiolus.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Conditions are about as last reported, with plenty of carnations and a noticeable scarcity of bulbous stock. Many of the growers are talking of planting their houses to vegetables and it looks now as if there might be a shortage later. Lilies for Easter are coming on nicely and, with the present bright weather, there will be no extra heavy forcing to get them in on time.

Various Notes.

The entertainment by the Florists' Club to the ladies on Thursday evening, February 15, was well attended. The address of welcome by Mr. Beeles was followed by a short program, after which refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Holze, of Seattle, and Mr. Scott, of Portland. J. L. S.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Business has been slightly improving the last week. The clearer weather and absence of rain for some days have helped the sale of flowers, as well as tending to improve the quality of the stock. The supply of almost every kind of flower in season is still rather in excess of demand, but there are fewer complaints on account of dull trade. Carnations are not coming in quite so plentifully and the stock is now in first-class condition. With a little better prices, growers and retailers would feel better. Roses, violets and bulbous flowers are plentiful and meeting a fair demand.

done much harm to the early growths on the roses, but if we should get a few degrees more, the early pruned plants may have some of their buds blasted. Growth on hardy plants is much earlier than usual, but the frost so far has not been severe enough to hurt.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Business is only fair at the present writing and the excessively dry weather continues. We are about twelve inches short of the average rainfall and conditions are beginning to have a serious aspect. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful, with the exception of violets, which are getting near the end of their season. Daffodils and narcissi are not as abundant as they have been and tulips of the early sorts are on the wane. There are plenty of the later varieties in sight and if we have favorable weather there will be heavy cuttings for quite a while to come.

Carnations average about $2 per hundred, with quantities of all the best selling kinds. Roses are better than they were during the warm spell of a week ago. Brides, Maids, Liberty and Kaiserin sell at from 50 cents to $1 per dozen and Beauties at about twice those prices. Wild flowers will soon be a factor to be reckoned with. Fruit blossoms, owing to the drying winds of the last few days, are not as good or as much in evidence as they were about one year ago. Freesias and valley move slowly. Easter lilies are only in about sufficient quantity to fill requirements. From all indications, however, there will be plenty for the Easter trade, which promises to be good this season.

Various Notes.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., reports good business on his Pacific coast trip this season.

Chas. C. Navlet, of the C. C. Navlet Co., of San Jose, is in town. He reports a heavy winter and spring trade.

Despite quite a large amount of funeral work, stock has not cleaned up so well during the last week as in the previous one. Early Lent has made itself felt more than usual and, while there is no serious glut, yet quite a number of flowers have gone to waste. Violets are past their best for the season, the flowers being poorer and lacking fragrance. A good rain may help them a little, perhaps, but their day is past. Daffodils are plentiful and good in color, but sales could be better.

Roses are overplentiful, San Francisco growers sending in fine stock to an already overloaded market. Some excellent Bridesmaid are included in these shipments, this grand old rose showing up well. Gladioli have appeared and the flowers are showy and growers have entered the field with these and it looks as though there will be a full supply, both of pot and cut stock. Asparagus plumosus continues short; in fact, all greens, with the possible exception of Mexican ivy, are scarce. There is a wider range of orchid flowers shown, but cattleyas and phalaenopsis are the best sellers.

Various Notes.

W. R. Wood, of Roeding & Wood, 1603 East Washington street, has just returned from a trip which included a call at the Fancher Creek Nurseries, at Fresno; their Exeter Nursery, in Tulare county, and Arizona points. Large quantities of citrus fruit trees are now being shipped.

Sir Watkin daffodils are a specialty with Creutz & Co. at their new store on Hill street. I noted some magnificent My Maryland roses here and all the stock is in fine order.

Frank Lichtenberg has been doing splendid business at the establishment of Thee Florists, 328 North Fifth street, now having the store in his own hands. He has secured the decorations for the great land show at the Fiesta park. A good deal of the work will, of course, have to be of artificial flowers, as the show remains open from March 12 to 28. In the main hall, sixty-seven pillars will be twisted with natural palm leaves, 10,000 of these being used. A fine pall of white roses, outlined with violets, was on the stocks during my last visit.

Theo. Folerie, of Goldfield, Nev., was here a couple of days recently, visiting wholesalers in the interests of Felis Bros., to whom he has sold his business. Mr. Folerie was en route to Chicago via San Francisco.

C. Morton, of the Los Angeles Flower Market, reports business rushing; indeed, one can see that at any time the store is visited. A glance at the shipping tags shows the big expanse of country covered by Los Angeles shipments.

At the wedding of Miss Letts, at her father's home at East Hollywood, February 27, Wright's Flower Shop had the decorations, which were elaborate. Over 300 guests were invited. Pink roses and lily of the valley were the principal flowers used. A church of flowers was set up in the house. The bride carried a bouquet of white orchids; the bridesmaids had pink roses.

Some of the finest long-stemmed My Maryland roses ever seen in this market are now being shipped by Dieterich & Turner from their Montebello plant. By the way Henry Turner eyes the big pile of glass in boxes that is ready on the ground, one can see he is itching to begin greenhouse building again. Walter Armacost and E. Royston, of Sawtelle and Ocean Park, were recently here in consultation with Mr. Turner on greenhouse building operations.

The Los Angeles County Horticultural Society is to be warmly congratulated in that Henry Kruckeberg consented to act as its secretary. Already his business methods are showing fruit. He has a decisive manner of doing things and a get-there style that is going to bring great results if only the members act loyally, in unison with him, and each one gives whatever aid he is capable of. No better man could be found in California and we have all good cause to be proud of our secretary.

During the terrific wind storm of February 23 and 24 greenhouse men in this locality were fortunate. The worst loss was that suffered by George Watson, at Boyle Heights, who reported about $50 worth of glass broken. Several lath houses were damaged extensively.

Changes have been made in the fittings at the store of the Hayward Floral Co., on Sixth street. Considerably more room and light are now afforded and some fine kentias, large specimen Boston ferns and philodendrons are now tastefully displayed.

The double red hawthorns now being sent in by Ed. Rust, of South Pasadena, make a pretty display in the leading retail stores. The plants are shapely and well flowered.

flowers of quality have a large share of attention here.

There are daffodils galore at the Los Angeles Flower Market, every day seeing many thousands of these golden beauties being handled. Manager C. Morton is kept busy running between here and the Signal Hill place.

The Market.

Business conditions are about the same as last reported, the lenten season having little effect on the social calendar. Several large funerals last week helped to clean up the surplus.

Carnations are plentiful in all varieties and move well. Roses are scarce, with not enough to go around, while lilies, tulips and daffodils are good sellers.

In potted plants, azaleas, hyacinths and tulips predominate, and the price of all stock is keeping up wonderfully, considering the volume. Greens are a scarcity, and almost impossible to secure on the local market. E. R. C.

BULBOUS STOCK LATE.

Owing to extremely cold weather, we find that our Easter bulbous stock has not made the root growth that it should have made at this time. We did not get the bulbs covered as deeply as we should have for the season, or as early. They are now in a house without fire, and have been all winter. Kindly advise us what to do. We can put them in a warm cellar that we have heat in, or we can put them under benches in a house with a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and darken it, or we can put them in another house, cover four or five inches and give a little heat. The tulips, we believe, will come all right, but the hyacinths and daffodils have only made from one-half to three-fourths of an inch of root growth and do not show above the soil at all.

inch long. I am afraid it will not give you much flower for Easter. Either you have placed the bulbs in the soil too late or have kept them too dry at the root. They should all be planted by November 15, and a month earlier would be better. If you had good roots, the tops would come all right, but you can not expect good flowers without plenty of active roots. I would place the bulbs in a house where there is a little fire heat, soak thoroughly with water if not moist, and cover with ashes. To have the tulips, narcissi and hyacinths in flower for Easter, you should have tops at least three inches long by March 20. In a temperature of 50 degrees at night the various bulbs would then flower on time. C. W.

MADISON, N. J.

The annual event known as "Carnation Night" with the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will be held in Madison, Wednesday evening, March 13. Three papers on the carnation will be read: On "Culture," by G. F. Neipp, of Chatham; on "Propagation," by George Hubbard, of Chas. H. Totty's establishment; on "The Carnation of Today and Twenty Years Ago," by John Downing.

Madison is strong in carnations and a good lot of standard varieties may be looked for. The society wants all possible consignments of novelties. All consignments sent to Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., will be carefully looked after, and there is lots of room to stage them to the best possible advantage.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The lenten season has hit the local market one awful wallop. At the time of this writing stock is piling up every day and there are few, if any, prospects of cleaning up much of it. Openings from now on will use some and will be a big help. The great bulk of the work now, however, is for funerals, while shipping business continues good.

The rose supply is again adequate and before the end of this week will probably be more than sufficient, for they are coming in stronger each day. Richmond and good American Beauties clean up each day. The offerings of the other colors and varieties are large and good in respect to quality.

Carnations have dropped to the lowest point they have been since the season for them opened. They are in large supply and the market is unable to use all of them. Many, however, are sold, but at buyers' prices. The white sell up the best of all.

Violets meet with almost no call, and, strange to relate at this time of the year, the same words will almost tell the condition of the market for longiflorum and calla lilies. Some choice offerings of rubrum are also lingering in the refrigerators. Bulbous stock generally is meeting with a limited demand. The same, owing to the large offerings, seems true of sweet peas. The good ones alone sell; the short ones and culls scarcely find a market at all.

The green goods supply is ample and business in this line is good.

Various Notes.

Ed. Fries, of Ft. Thomas, Ky., has every available inch of space in his houses filled with stock ready for the Easter and spring trade. As usual, he is long on pot lilies and spiraea, and both look good. He has gone in for bedding stock heavier this year than in the past and he always has a goodly lot. Most of his carnations will be in full crop at Easter time.

C. E. Critchell has been offering some choice Killarney and Bridesmaid roses.

Fred Rupp, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., who was laid up for a time with typhoid, is about again.

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Winter still lingers. The week closed in the embrace of another cold wave. This continued over Sunday, crimping the enterprise of the street men, who, with the department stores, seemed to be the only relief to an overstocked market. Hundreds of boxes of violets were left unsold, and actually thrown away. There was no stability to values in anything, even American Beauties declining.

The underlying cause of the general depression seems to be overproduction. Great in size as is the New York market, it is not big enough to digest, properly, the immense shipments. There is now no shortage of anything, and some stock, tulips especially, can hardly be given away. Roses are overabundant; with any warm weather the streets will be flooded with them. Easter is only four weeks distant, and Harrisii are already coming from Bermuda. An exceptionally mild winter there has brought the blooms in earlier than usual.

VASSAR COLLEGE
The Saltford Flower Shop, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Grand carnation stock was selling in quantity March 4 at $10 per thousand and under. The street men get the leftovers as low as 25 cents per hundred. Quality is superb. The orchid market is marking time; no change in prices. The top has been 40 cents, and one cannot see the bottom. The demand seems abnormally small, but fortunately the disgrace of street distribution has not come upon them. Looks as if there might be nearly as many orchid as violet growers in time, so many are now offering them in this market. Gardenias are down again, and valley has slipped also. Lilies do not go above 6 cents and must be selected at that figure. The abnormal supply of bulbous stock of every kind and of sweet peas, mignonette and freesia, shows no diminution. Callas move slowly. The yellow callas are quite popular. Southern daffodils and lilac are on their way.

Various Notes.

Monday, March 11, the New York Florists' Club will have a rose and orchid exhibit at its rooms, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue, worth going miles to see. New roses will be displayed, and President Manda says there have been many promises of orchids. Wallace R. Pierson will make the address of the evening. His subject will be "The Rose." There will be other speakers. Tickets for the twenty-fifth banquet of the club can be secured and tables selected for the jubilee, March 23. Patrick O'Mara will be toastmaster. Ladies will be presented with a handsome silver souvenir. There will be fine orchestral and vocal music and an interesting program. Monday, March 11, at 3 o'clock, all bowlers who are members of the New York Florists' Club are invited to meet at Thum's alleys, Broadway and Thirty-first street.

If spring delays its opening any longer, it will be Tuesday, March 19, when the first horticultural auction house opens its doors for the season. The two old established depots on Vesey street will probably handle the bulk of this distributive enterprise. Large importations are on the way, one house having half a million roses engaged.

Charles Millang continues to improve in health. His indomitable pluck and will power have had much to do with his rapid convalescence. He will be back at business before the week is over.

A. Moltz & Co. have sublet every inch of floor space on the first floor of the Coogan building, and now this floor is almost as busy a scene mornings as the headquarters of the Cut Flower Market, two floors above. Almost the whole building now is given over to the trade.

The fifth annual ball of the Greek-American Florists' Association, February 28, was a great success. The decorations were artistic and abundant. Every lady received a corsage of roses, orchids or violets. The Greek consul led the grand march with Mrs. Polykranas as his partner, over 2,000 taking part. The usual liberal courtesy of the organization was everywhere in evidence and the festivities lasted until daylight. Nearly every prominent wholesaler and dozens of the employees were present. George Polykranas is president of the society, J. J. Fellouris, secretary, and D. J. Pappas, treasurer. A fine stereopticon program was provided before the dancing began.

Myer, at Fifty-eighth street and Madison avenue, is back from an auto trip south, and busy with dinner decorations.

Thursday, March 7, the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will make the annual spring inspection trip, calling on the Long Island establishments. The party will start in automobiles from the residence of George Dreyer, Elmhurst, at 9 a. m. Refreshments, dinners and transportation are included. These plant growers go the limit in every legitimate enterprise.

Max Schling, on West Fifty-ninth street, next door to the Plaza hotel, has had another unique decoration in Montreal, Canada, the second elaborate affair of the season at which he has officiated and affiliated with our non-reciprocative neighbors.

The conservatory of William Kessler is brilliant in color and variety, Easter plants already being staged for the holiday inspection.

Charles Weber, of Lynbrook, where the fine Brooklyn carnations are grown, was instrumental in sending a horse poisoner to Sing Sing for nine years last week, and was fortunate to discover his villainy in time to save his valuable horses.

The Misses Horn and Hess, 767 Lexington avenue, will dissolve partnership after Easter, one of the young ladies having consented to a partnership of a more interesting kind.

McKenney, at Forty-second street and Fifth avenue, was handling some fine yellow callas in pots last week, obtained through Woodrow & Marketos.

The engagement is announced of Herman Berchad, of Trepel's Loeser branch in Brooklyn, to Miss Hannah Voit, of the same city. Frank R. Verona, secretary for C. C. Trepel, was married March 5 to Miss Isabel Wuerpel, of Jersey City. The young lady is an accomplished musician.

The Market.

Although Lent is certainly affecting the trade to a slight extent, business is good for this time of year. Corsage bouquets of violets, valley and sweet peas are in big demand and there is the usual call for funeral designs. Stock is arriving in excellent condition and there is a bountiful supply of everything, with the exception of Beauties; in fact, there are none of the latter to be had.

A trip through the greenhouses in and around the city is all that is needed to convince one that Easter is drawing near. The growing stock is in excellent condition. There has been plenty of sun and by the time the holiday season arrives, every grower should have stock in plenty. Roses and carnations will be excellent, while lilies will be better than ever.

Various Notes.

John H. Dunlop has a large crop of lilies and says his stock was never before in such good condition.

Frank Smith, of the Cannon Floral Co., Hamilton, Ont., was in town for a couple of days recently.

J. H. Dunlop had one of the biggest and most beautiful decorations seen here in a long while, when Mrs. Hamilton Merritt gave a large dinner at the King Edward.

J. S. Simmons reports an excellent lenten trade and is looking forward to a good Easter business. E. A. F.

SPRING SONG.

(Not knocking Congressman Mann.)

A man of seeds
And not of deeds
Is like a garden Full of weeds.

—B. L. T. in Chicago Tribune.

THE man whose catalogue was late was not so far behind, after all, this year.

SPRING officially is a week old but, practically, not many seed buyers have been able to see any other sign of it than the pile of bright covered catalogues on the reading table.

THE counter trade is beginning to show some life in eastern cities, but in Chicago and the west cold lamb was on the menu for March 1 and there was little stirring in the way of counter trade up to that date. The changes in the temperature show on the cash register.

THE W. W. Barnard Co., 231 West Madison street, Chicago, has its large and handsome new store completed and ready for the rush of counter trade that is sure to come as soon as the winter breaks. The show windows present an enticing appearance to the thousands of suburbanites who pass.

THE February mail orders are variously reported, some of the houses that have been forging ahead the last few years reporting another gain as compared with 1911, but on the whole the trade has no more than held its own in February, as in January. The severity of the winter has held the orders back. A record-breaking rush generally is thought to be in early prospect.

AT LAST, THE RAIN!

[Night letter telegrams.]

Santa Cruz, Cal., March 5.—A long needed rain began falling in the Santa Clara valley March 4 and continued through March 5. The San Juan valley got a nice shower the night of March 3 and there are good indications of more to come.—G. L. Grant.

Carpinteria, Cal., March 5.—To March 1 this has been the driest season in southern California for forty-eight years. We are now getting light rains, which are very encouraging, although by no means insuring crops.

NOT TINKERING TARIFF YET.

Inquiries reaching The Review indicate that there is an impression in the trade that the Ways and Means Committee of Congress is at work on a revision of the duties on horticultural goods. A Chicago congressman is the ranking republican member of the committee and also has a more or less intimate acquaintance with nursery and seed trade interests. An inquiry addressed to him brought the following telegram:

Washington, D. C., March 6.—Committee on Ways and Means has done nothing yet about revising tariff of seeds, bulbs and plants.—James R. Mann, M. C.

ROBINSON AT ROCKY FORD.

It is announced that the J. C. Robinson Seed Co., Waterloo, Neb., has taken over all the interests and stock of the Rocky Ford Seed Growers' Association, Rocky Ford, Colo.

In elaborating on the announcement a local paper at Rocky Ford says in part:

"J. C. Robinson is acknowledged to be the largest wholesale vine seed dealer in the world, and during the last twenty-five years has handled more Rocky Ford seeds than all the other seed dealers and has had contracts with all the seed growers in this section.

"After making the transfer the Robinson company engaged Mr. Clute to place his acreage and write the growers' contracts for the season, and with-

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

For several years our salesmen complained that our price on a certain size lily bulb was too high—competitors were selling the same size apparently at lower prices. But when we bought a case of the lower priced bulbs—dumped them side by side with our own, it did not take much to convince the men that the bulbs at $6 less per case were fully $12 poorer in size and quality—our case being incomparably better and cheaper in the end. Our salesmen would have been ashamed to sell the lower priced article. There are two lessons in this for you. One is, look beyond the price of lily bulbs—learn their quality—then you will have something upon which to base their real value. The more you know about the quality of Horseshoe Brand bulbs the more clearly you will realize the advantage of spending your money where “Quality Counts.” The other lesson is that we have your interests at heart in selecting the kind of bulbs your business needs. No one knows better than we do that price cannot make an undesirable article satisfactory. Therefore, while we have reduced our prices on certain sizes this season, the same good quality will be maintained, for nothing else can take Quality's place. Horseshoe Brand Giganteum, 7 to 9 inches, at $50 per 1,000, f. o. b. New York, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Memphis or Philadelphia, is the best value ever offered in Easter lily bulbs. Send for prices on other bulbs and Azaleas.

in the last few days 300 acres have been contracted for among the growers here and it is expected that before time to close the contracts for the season a thousand acres will be placed.

"Mr. Robinson will come to this city about April 1 and will then select a site upon which he will erect office buildings and a large fireproof warehouse, equipped with all the modern machinery for the cleaning, polishing and testing the germination vitality.

"Mr. Clute has a contract with the company to conduct a trial ground at his ranch and there will be seen growing every variety of cucumber, cantaloupe and muskmelon, a chance being given to make a study of the different varieties to determine their adaptability to our soil and climatic conditions.

"The Rocky Ford Seed Growers' Association was organized two years ago with Will Morrison, president; J. P. Mallowney, treasurer, and H. D. Clute, secretary, and during their first year they grew and shipped 50,000 pounds of seeds and they also perfected a new seeder and placed it on the market. This last year they handled 150,000 pounds of vine seed and sold some twenty-five of their seeders, but now the association will discontinue their seed business. The field men of the Robinson company will have charge and general supervision of the growing, harvesting and drying of the crops, and it is expected to improve the stock and vitality of the seeds handled by the company."

CONDITIONS IN CALIFORNIA.

Writing under date of February 29, L. W. Wheeler, president and general manager of the Peters-Wheeler Seed Co., Hollister, Cal., had the following to say of crop conditions:

"The outlook at present for California seed crops is anything but encouraging. We have had only about

The New Florists' Dahlia, "Foster Barnes"

NATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE SHOW GARDENS, Spencer, Ind.

Dear Sirs: In reply to your inquiry, "How do you like the pink-tinted, white show Dahlia, Foster Barnes?" will say we like it very much. In fact, you have never shipped us a Dahlia which sells so well as a cut flower. Foster Barnes is an ideal variety for funeral work. Its waxy white petals, so delicately tipped with bright pink, together with its fine stems, makes this one of the very best varieties for florists' use.

We hope your supply of cut flowers of this variety will be greater next season, so we can have a larger percentage of this variety.

Yours very truly,

one-third our normal rainfall to date and the season in which we may expect rains is fast drawing to a close. Late planted stock, such as radish, has made little growth and considerable rain will have to fall to make anything like a crop. Onion so far has suffered little, if any, as this crop was planted early and received the benefit of the early rains, but it has been injured some by heavy frosts. Sweet peas have been badly injured by recent frosts. All early flowering sorts are nipped back to the ground and it will require more rain than we usually get after February to make even half a crop. Carrot and other root crops seem not to have suffered as yet, but all depends on future rains. The heavy frosts and high winds have taken the moisture from the ground and it seems quite probable we will see extremely short crops for 1912 unless the unusual happens in the way of abundant late spring rains and exceptionally favorable climatic conditions."

EUROPEAN NOTES.

The International Exhibition, to be held in the last week of May, in London, was originally planned for twenty-two acres. The great demand for space, however, has compelled the directors to take in additional ground. France, Holland and Belgium have each been allotted 10,000 square feet. The Japanese exhibits are now on their way to London. The directorate is busy and all is going on well.

A subscription list has been opened to present a testimonial to Silas Cole, the raiser of the Countess Spencer sweet pea. Several American firms have subscribed in a handsome style, for instance:

W. A. Garaway, head of the old established firm of James Garaway & Co., seed merchants and nurserymen, Bristol, England, died suddenly February 19, at the age of 75. He was popular in the trade, and presided over the business of the firm up to the day of his death. The firm is noted for special strains of schizanthus, etc. Bee.

LOS ANGELES SEED NOTES.

In spite of the continued drought, business at the retail seed stores keeps up remarkably well. Only in a few instances are there any complaints.

The Aggeler & Musser Seed Co. says its business has shown the usual increase, despite the fact that thousands of acres, usually planted to peas and melons, have to be eliminated as a source of business in this exceedingly unusual year. Unless rain comes soon, the dry farm bean growers will be unable to get their crops in and this will mean a serious loss to seed houses.

Charles Winsel is installing an outdoor overhead watering system at his Washington street place and will probably use it on his land at Montebello. He reports large orders for various public works.

Theodore Payne reports a large and constantly increasing demand for native seeds and plants. There is no better authority than Mr. Payne on these interesting subjects and he issues a Leri W. Bowen and D. M. Ferry have returned from a trip to California made in a private car with a party of fourteen ladies and gentlemen from Detroit. "We have been on both a business and pleasure trip," said Mr. Ferry to a reporter. "Our business object was to enable Mr. Bowen and myself to look after some lands that we own in Arizona that are under the famous Roosevelt irrigation dam. We found conditions in the irrigated area of Arizona looking most promising. Rains, however, are much needed. The Roosevelt dam is a great work, which is practically completed, although not quite ready to be operated."

Nicotine fumigating papers are excellent. The high grade nicotine liquids are also effective if poured on a steam pipe in each house. Use an oil can and run a tiny stream along one pipe in each house, if you heat with steam. If you heat with hot water you must wait for a time when the pipes are quite hot, in order to use the liquids. These remedies can be procured at any good supply house.

Perhaps your lettuce is not old enough to head. Ten weeks' stocks could be in bloom for Memorial day. There are few flowers that can be had so quickly.

NURSERY NEWS.AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

YNZONIDES BROS. have started a nursery at Crown Point, Ind.

THE death of M. Orr Shoop, of Sidney, O., is reported in this week's obituary column.

J. P. BARGER, proprietor of the Alliance Nurseries, at Alliance, Neb., has opened an office at 122 West Third street.

D. C. TWOGOOD, formerly in the nursery business at Riverside, Cal., announces that he is no longer connected with the trade.

THE Woodland Orchard Co., of Woodland, near Seaford, Del., has purchased 800 acres of land and will convert the tract into a nursery.

THE Maywood Nursery Co., Maywood, Ill., has been incorporated with $8,000 capital, by Zadoc C. Smith, Joel E. Bul-lard and Albert N. Charles.

At Sumas, Wash., J. Newton Moore and G. M. Fisher, of North Yakima, have bought the Fitzgerald place of thirty acres and are planting a nursery. The main output will consist of apple, pear and cherry trees, though special attention will be paid to the various kinds of berries suitable to the soil and climate of the district.

NURSERIES in Oklahoma report a good demand for grape vines. A reference to the agricultural statistics shows that during the last four years Oklahoma has produced an average each year of 1,500,000 pounds of grapes, a test ample to convince the most skeptical of the climatic and soil advantages existing for grape culture. The sandy loam prairie hillsides of the state are said to be unsurpassed for grape growing purposes.

ABOUT a year ago A. B. Cunningham and B. F. See went to Seymour, Ia., from Rising Sun, and after looking over the field carefully decided to establish a nursery there. They leased for five years eighty acres of land southwest of the city and in the spring planted fifteen acres of the tract and in the fall planted an additional ten. They began at once to dispose of their stock at Rising Sun and the entire business is now to be removed to Seymour.

goods. A Chicago congressman is the ranking republican member of the committee and also has a more or less intimate acquaintance with nursery and seed trade interests. An inquiry addressed to him brought the following telegram:

SEEDLING EVERGREENS.

We have just received a shipment of Swedish and Irish juniper, Colorado green spruce and Austrian pine. They are small seedlings, twelve to eighteen inches high and not balled. We should like to get information as to how best to take care of these—whether to plant them out now in the field, or trench them in a cellar and plant them out later. If later, what time would you suggest?

F. E. W.

The evergreens should not be planted out until all frost has left the ground. The sooner they are set out after the ground is open, the better. The general plan of delaying the planting of evergreens until the growths are starting has arisen from the desire to finish the planting of all deciduous stock first, before beginning with the evergreens. As a matter of fact, however, evergreens do better if planted as early as the deciduous stock, and the chances of loss are lessened by so doing. Temporarily, your plants will be better in a cold cellar. Damp the roots if they are in the least dry, and ventilate freely all the time.

ceived the suggestion that steps should be taken now to protect the Gordonia pubescens, which grows only in Georgia and only on the banks of the Altamaha river. Mr. Katzenstein says he sees a possibility that the novelty of the tree, and its rarity, may make it the subject of an attempted corner on the part of some nurseryman and thereby cause it to be threatened with extinction. "The ground where these rare trees grow," writes Mr. Katzenstein, "should be reserved by the state and the number of trees increased by judicious propagation. It would be a matter of sincere regret if the publicity given this rarest of all our trees should act unfavorably upon its already more than precarious existence."

HARDY CLIMBERS AND RAMBLERS

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Severely cold weather still holds this city in its grip, and naturally it hampers business to some extent. However, for Lent, business has been unusually good, and there are numerous informal social functions given at this time, cut flowers especially being in demand, while spring openings have begun to draw on the florists for decorations of all kinds.

A little sunshiny weather has brought on an abundance of blooms. Carnations are plentiful and good in quality, but are selling at a low figure. Sweet peas are flooding the market and are much reduced in price, although the stems are longer and the flowers much larger. Roses, too, are much more plentiful than at the last writing and have gone down the scale of prices, except Beauties, which remain at a high figure. Calla lilies are more abundant the last ten days, as also are Harrisii.

The effect of the spring sunshine upon flowering plants is wonderful. Azaleas, primroses, camellias, lilacs and marguerites are in splendid condition and full of flowers. Since there is a great demand for plants at this time of the year, they are bringing a fair price. Azaleas seem to sell the best. Daffodils are in first-class condition and are in great favor.

Various Notes.

A number of the downtown florists had special sales Saturday, March 2, principally of violets, sweet peas and roses. These sales made business hum.

James Bishop is still confined to the house.

Geo. B. Hart is handling some new greens from California.

The Maurer-Haap Co. is selling lilac bushes, potted, budded and ready for forcing.

Ted Ogston has severed his connection with Henry P. Neun's store in the Mercantile building.

The new officers of the G. A. R. flower committee are S. C. Pierce, Fred C. Cozean, J. G. Knittle and Philip Mohr; N. O. Beilby, secretary; G. V. Southard, treasurer.

Henry P. Neun recently sent out some attractive announcement folders to the Rochester public, inviting them to visit the new store and calling attention to the fact that Frank Reeg was doing his landscape and gardening work for him. Mr. Reeg has been with Ellwanger & Barry for twenty-five years.

Col. Andrew J. Switzer, pioneer in grape culture on Lake Keuka, died at his home in Bath, N. Y., February 26, aged 82, after an illness of several weeks.

James Vick's Sons are having a special sale of jardineres.

Horace Head is planning a trip to his home in England and will sail about June 1, to be gone an indefinite period of time.

Visitors: William B. Lake, of Philadelphia; Robert Greenlaw, of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia.

The nursery and greenhouse employees of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., have a mutual benefit association that held its third annual meeting February 5, at which the election of officers took place. There being quite a rivalry for the various positions, it drew a large attendance, over ninety per cent of the members being present. The following officers were elected: President, A. W. Hoyle, reelected; vice-president, George Christy; treasurer, Fred. Foster; secretary, H. Dinges, reelected; directors, Ed. Anderson, George Bailey, John Hilson, Julius Lieb, Walter Long, Max Lockowitz, Moses MacCready, William O'Donnell and John Ruppert.

The association is doing good work, not only in paying benefits to its sick members but in creating a fellowship among the employees. The following statement for the year's business from January 21, 1911, to January 21, 1912, will speak for itself:

A meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held at the Hollywood Inn February 16, with a good attendance of members. The executive committee reported progress as regards the spring show, stating that the schedule had been prepared. The committee on the fall show has set the dates for next show, which will be October 31 and November 1, and it is hoped there will be keen competition, as some valuable prizes are offered. At the annual dinner there were on view two silver cups which the society will give at the fall show.

A committee was appointed to visit the treasurer, Peter Macdonald, who has been seriously ill for some time, but who is now on the road to recovery. J. H. W.

A Seedling of S. M. MERWARTH & BRO., Easton, Pa.

Parentage, HARLOWARDEN and ENCHANTRESS

As a medium-priced "red" it has a very promising future

From the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., where this has been grown on trial, we have a letter under date of Nov. 24, 1911, saying: "So far we like the new seedling very much; the color of the flower is fine and the size good. The stems are stiff and the number of blooms to a plant shows it will be a good producer."

E. J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., who has been growing five hundred on trial, writes us under date of Jan. 8, 1912: "So far this season this variety has produced more than double the blooms Beacon has, planted in the same house, and I feel sure it will maintain its lead the balance of the season. It is of a much brighter color than Beacon, flower as large, with a good stem, and a calyx that practically does not split, not averaging more than one split flower a week from the five hundred plants."

The Market.

Business last week was more lively than last reported, but not enough so to relieve the market of the oversupply of bulbous stock and carnations. The latter, while altogether too plentiful, can be disposed of at a low figure. On the other hand, bulbous stock is almost impossible to move at any price. Nevertheless more is grown every year.

Various Notes.

E. A. Feters purchased an Overland light delivery automobile and hopes to have it in commission about the second week in March. This is a lighter car than the one Mr. Feters is now using and will be used for general delivery when loads are light.

Robert Rahaley and Albert Pochelon have been spending the last week in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Rutherford, N. J., and other eastern cities.

The members of the Detroit Florists' Club will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Plumb at their greenhouses some afternoon this month. Mr. Plumb recently erected a fine salesroom, packing shed and office, and this visit of the club will be in the nature of a house warming. Mrs. Plumb has been seriously ill at a local hospital, but is getting along nicely at present.

Mrs. Patterson, mother of Murray Patterson, has just returned from a three months' visit in Scotland.

A handsome, first-class theater is in course of construction on Broadway, almost across from Breitmeyer's store. This, with the beautiful new market, which will soon be completed, should liven up things on Broadway.

Mr. Pochelon, of the L. Bamb Floral Co., will formally open his beautiful new store and conservatory March 18.

CLEVELAND.

The Sixth City.

March started out like a lamb—so far as business was concerned. Trade is quiet and stock has accumulated in all the wholesale houses, to the extent that buyers have been getting stock at their own prices. The stock that is a complete glut is calla lilies, Lawson and red carnations, while Golden Spur narcissi, freesias and sweet peas sell on sight. Maidenhair ferns and plumosus are much in demand.

Easter stock in and around Cleveland looks promising. Rambler roses are well budded and are going to be just right, as they will start blooming about ten days before Easter Sunday, and this, with cool growing, will put them in fine shape for selling. Lilies will be here in sufficient quantity to meet the demand. Some excellent stock of giganteums in 5-inch and 6-inch pots is seen at the establishments of the various growers; there are also some lots of poor ones. Lilac will be fine, both in pot plants and cut stock. Genistas will be seen in small lots only. Azaleas will be more than plentiful; the cold weather of January stopped the sale of these to a certain extent and there have not been so many forced early as in other years; this is sure to make a good supply for Easter.

Various Notes.

C. Merkel & Son, of Mentor, O., are sending some fine cut lilac to this market. They are cutting from home-grown stock, dug from their own fields last fall, and they find it much better than imported stock.

T. Smith, of the Smith & Fetters Co., who has been on a pleasure trip to California for the last month, is expected home this week.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is cutting Spanish iris, the first of the season.

Gordon Gray, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, is reported much better.

The McCallum Co. reports a good call for sweet peas and lilies during last week. Stock of all kinds is plentiful with this house.

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange is receiving Marie Louise violets from the east. They say it has the first call in violets.

The quality of the Killarney and Maryland roses that the F. R. Williams Co. is sending in is unexcelled. Their carnations are also fine.

F. C. Bartels, of North Olmsted, is sending in some excellent Freesia Purity. F. A. F.

Newton Falls, O.—C. E. Tinker reports that business, which until the first week of the year had been the best in his experience, was seriously checked by the extremely cold, cloudy weather, which was the severest on record for forty years, with the thermometers registering as low as 36 degrees below zero. The prospects for spring trade, however, are bright.

 The old reliable firm, GODFREY ASCHMANN, is not connected with any other firm and is more active than ever

PREPARE FOR EASTER!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

From our old friend, GODFREY ASCHMANN, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past, and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

What Florists Say About Our Lilies

Daily visitors to our establishment say: "You have the best lilies we ever have seen on our visits to many florists' establishments. We congratulate you. You certainly can be proud."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Easter Lilies, Lilium multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "cracker-jacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have four houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6-in. pots, 75c.

Stop making those goo-goo eyes!

How can I help it?

Aschmann's Lilies look so charming,

And Aschmann himself is so entrancing—

That I simply can't resist; I must send him an order today.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see, Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me. Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow. The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day. Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way. The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green, With bulbs, and plumed Spiraea, the best you've ever seen. And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear, For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear. If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring, Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00 to $3.00 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25; Niobe, double white, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each. Vervaekeana, double variegated, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. De Schryveriana (double variegated), 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Simon Mardner, double pink, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Pres. Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $2.00. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo, best red, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Best mixed varieties, such as Helene Thelemann, Empress of India, Mme. Eichhaute, etc., 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or 100 the same.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up of 3 plants, 15c, 25c; 5¼-in., 25c.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glaucia and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, spring 1910 importation, 6 to 7-in. pots, 5 years old, 3 good tiers, 15, 18 to 20 inches high, 24 to 26 inches across, very handsome, $1.50 to $2.00 each; small size 6-in., $1.00.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

With the great carnival festivities at an end, the dull lenten season is upon us, to be enlivened only by several big weddings and entertainments on St. Joseph's day, March 19. The backbone of the winter is broken at last, and only forcing stock for Easter, roses and tender stove plants require firing during the night. All the growers made big preparations for the Easter trade and look forward to the same good business as in years gone by, but sales down here for that occasion can not be compared with those up north. Local grown stock of cut flowers is at times plentiful, but moving slowly; flowering plants find a good demand at fair prices.

The present weather conditions are ideal and outdoor spring planting is progressing nicely. The reports from the landscape gardeners and truck farmers are satisfactory in regard to moving of stock on hand.

Various Notes.

Abele Bros. are doing a big shipping business in all kinds of nursery stock as well as vegetable plants.

Chas. Eble is the proud owner of the first florist's delivery auto here; a White steamer, forty horse-power. It serves a triple purpose, as open truck, panel body or touring car.

C. W. Eichling has a fine lot of Formosa lilies and giganteums ready to cut and in bud.

J. A. Newsham's orchids are a beautiful sight to behold, and it is no wonder the cut blooms are always in demand.

Chris Reuter, the largest receiver and shipper of early vegetables in this part of the country, reports a rushing business, with prices firm, especially for bunch vegetables.

U. J. Virgin made the elaborate decorations for the automobile show held here recently.

Visitors: John Zech, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham, of Chicago; T. E. Waters, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; R. J. Haight, Chicago. R. E.

The Aphine Manufacturing Co., Madison, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of Jan. 27, will say that we have been using Fungine on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the Aphine for lice on lettuce instead of [a nicotine preparation] and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots; if so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this Fungine as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

Yours very truly,

Greenhouse Heating.LEAKY UNDERGROUND RETURN.

We have a range of six greenhouses, with the boilers at one corner of the range. Our present steam heating system has been in use for fifteen years. The main return pipe runs crosswise of the six houses and is laid under the surface of the ground, in sewer tile. The farther end of the return pipe is below the water level in the boiler and about two feet below the ground; it runs on a gradual slant to the bottom of the boiler. This pipe is wearing out and is leaking, but we do not know where the leaks are. As we do not wish to tear up the whole return to find the leaks, would it be just as well to place a new return pipe above ground, on the floor level of the greenhouses? The ground has a drop of about eighteen inches in 100 feet toward the boiler. At the boiler house the return would drop to the floor under the boiler and then rise into the boiler, in the form of a U. C. B.

If the plan for replacing the return is correctly understood, the new return pipe would run across the ends of the houses just below the level of the coils, and two to three feet above the level of the water in the boiler, while as now arranged it is slightly below the water level. There is no reason whatever why the proposed change would interfere with the return of the water to the boiler. On the contrary, it should be found helpful, as there will be no backing up of the water in the returns. The return can be dropped to the floor of the boiler room and enter the boiler from below, as proposed.

AN ADDITION FOR ROSES.

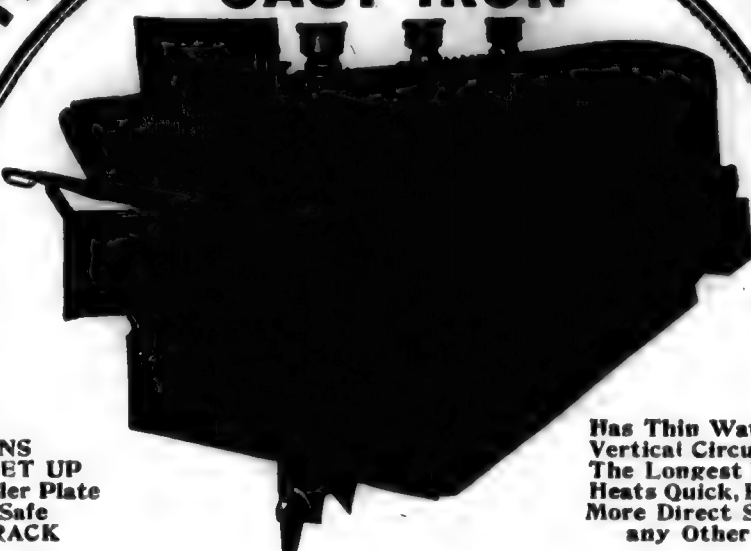

We have two even-span houses, 18 x 75 feet, connected, with a shed along the west end their entire width. Each house has two 2½-inch flows, feeding nine 2-inch returns. The boiler is tapped for two 3-inch flows and two 3-inch returns. We propose to add one house for roses, south of the other houses, and wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in this Ohio climate. How would you make connection at the boiler to feed the houses properly? We thought of running both flows to a header and then connecting the three 3-inch flows to this, one supplying each house. Will one 3-inch return take care of the two south houses? How would you pipe the new house, and also a 10-foot section at the west end, to be used as an entrance or temporary plant room, where retailing will be done?

We want this new part to be heated in good shape, as the system works finely in the two present houses and we do not want to take any chances next winter, when the house is full of roses. We should rather have a little more piping than is absolutely necessary.

if necessary. We have a Scotch marine boiler of fifteen horse-power. We should also like to know how to arrange the system so we can use steam in extremely cold weather. Our houses, as pipied, have stood at 50 degrees when we had outside temperatures as low as 16 degrees below zero. The new house will be 18 x 75 and six feet high to the gutters, with three feet of glass in the south wall. We propose to heat this house with two 24-inch flows and eleven 2-inch returns, placing three of the returns along the south wall and the others under the benches. We wish to give The Review's Heating Department credit for the success of our present system of piping. C. B.

The new house will require about 600 square feet of radiating surface to heat it to 60 degrees, and about 90 feet will be needed in the salesroom. The proposed piping, two 2½-inch flow pipes and eleven 2-inch returns, is entirely correct, and the plan of having eight pipes under the beds and three upon the wall is a good one.

To heat the new rose house, with the workroom at the end, it will be well to run a 3-inch main from the boiler and use a main return of the same size. If possible, run the flow pipes downhill and connect the expansion tank with the highest point. To heat the office, either use radiators, or put in 150 feet of 2-inch pipe in wall coils. For the other two houses connect the four 2½-inch flow pipes with a 4-inch main flow and run this to the boiler, where it can be connected with the remaining port by means of a 4 x 3-inch reducer. The size of the main flow should be the same as that used for the main return.

If the houses are piped as directed, there will be no difficulty in securing the temperatures mentioned and there will be no occasion for changing to a steam heating system in severe weather. If this is to be done, it would be better to use 2-inch pipe for the flows in the houses and 1½-inch pipe for the returns, and the only change that will be required will be to have a shut-off valve in the pipe leading to the expansion tank and automatic air valves at the lower end of each of the coils, provided, of course, that the lower end of the coils is at least two feet above the top of the boiler. Piped in this way, it will be possible to maintain the temperatures desired with hot water in ordinary weather and then use steam when the temperature approaches the zero mark. Really, for houses of this size it is better to put in enough pipe so that they can be heated with hot water, as the cost of the fuel when steam is used will be about twenty-five per cent greater, besides the bother of changing and the extra care that will be required.

It there meets the revolving knives and by the addition of water is reduced to a consistency that allows it to flow freely from a valve at the bottom, into a cistern, where it meets the next process, that will be shown here in a later article.

The Market.

The local florists report business quiet, and the fact that Lent is on is being felt here as usual. There is a little business stirring, chiefly funeral work. Roses, last week, continued scarce, but a steady increase in the supply is noticed and ere long the supply will be heavy. The carnation crop, which was heavy last week, has eased up a little. The lily supply is quite heavy, while spring flowers are not over-abundant. Trade last month came up to more than a fair average. While the latter part of the month was very quiet, the former part was more encouraging and especially Valentine week, when things boomed. Roses were scarce throughout the month, while carnations were just the opposite.

Various Notes.

The two florists who were victims of the grip last week were George Bartholomew and Mrs. B. Haschke.

Fred Lembke, of the W. W. Barnard Co., was in town last week.

H. H. Ritter says he has an excellent trade on corsage bouquets.

Mrs. E. Young had a big day on carnations March 3. R. A. L.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

Business shows no signs of slackening, despite the arrival of Lent. Stock of all kinds is in keen demand throughout the country and the quality is excellent and in good carrying shape.

J. and Miles Burford left the Dale Estate last week for the United States, and Jas. Wilson, who has been a carnation grower here for ten years, has purchased the Woodstock Floral Co., with the intention of running it himself.

A large number of the old countrymen in the various greenhouses got together lately and formed the nucleus of a social club. They hope to enjoy the pleasure of each other's company a little more frequently and will also endeavor to make life a little easier for new-comers.

E. H. Dale, only son of the late Henry Dale, was married on St. Valentine's day. His bride was Miss Alice Robinson, of this town. The ceremony was quietly performed in Toronto and astonished the natives of the village not a little. W. G. P.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING AND
PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

February was a satisfactory month as far as Pittsburgh wholesalers were concerned, the volume of business being greater than last year. The prices, while not as high as some other years, were likewise satisfactory. These conditions continued until last week, when stock of all kinds arrived in such large quantities that rock bottom prices went into effect. Considerable stock was moved, but I would be ashamed to see some of the prices in print. However, almost everything was sold at some price, and everybody was satisfied Saturday night. Some shippers, however, will wonder what happened. For instance, sweet peas and violets, which had been selling nicely, died a natural death and could not be moved at any price. Carnations also were a glut and the inferior stock found its way to the dumping grounds. The retailers, while not really busy, do not find the slump which usually arrives with the lenten season.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has purchased a large Packard truck, which makes daily trips to the Bakerstown greenhouses, delivering a fresh stock to the market store by seven o'clock each morning.

The McCallum Co. reports trade good, but also finds more stock than is necessary and an effort is needed to move it and keep pace with the constantly arriving consignments.

A sign of approaching spring was A. W. Smith's advertisement in the street cars: "For Saturday, a Large Box of Roses for $1."

Randolph & McClements are keeping up a fine display of blooming plants in their Baum street store.

W. M. Deyoe & Co., Oil City, have decided to open a store and have selected what is considered a most promising site.

L. J. Rowe, of Titusville, will rebuild and enlarge his greenhouses to the extent of about 25,000 feet this summer. He has been putting in his spare time this winter manufacturing concrete benches, which will take the place of wood in all his houses.

Wm. Schmidt, of Johnston, Pa., is arranging for a trip abroad in the near future.

John A. Miller opened a new store last Saturday in Tarentum, Pa.

The Market.

Trade has been brisk the last two weeks, with a good line of stock on the market. Funeral work has been heavy and has used up an unusual amount of stock. There have been several good decorations to help things along, and taking it as a whole trade has, in most cases, been tolerably good. Roses have been in demand, the quantity being about equal to the call except on two or three occasions when the market was extra heavy on all stock.

Carnations are more plentiful at the present than at any time during the winter, and while the size is good the stock is a little soft. Sweet peas are selling well and quantities are used up in corsage orders. They have met with great favor thus far. Violets are coming alone nicely and are moving well, the home grown single improving materially in last week or ten days. Valley has been in good demand and some good home grown stock is to be had. Bulb stock is moving rather light as a rule.

Various Notes.

The business of Wm. Graff is being carried on by the administrator, C. F. Wheeler, a particular friend of our late Brother Graff. Ben Flynn is managing the business and reports things moving nicely at the present time.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. place is still torn up. A new window is being put in and it will take a week or ten days for completion.

Sherman F. Stephens reports good business at the present time, especially in funeral work.

E. Metzmaier reports heavy business all along the line.

Wm. Johnson, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., scalded his leg badly at his home a week ago and was off duty for a week on account of it.

Sam Graff was calling on the trade the last few days. J. M.

Scott read an interesting and instructive essay on "How to Grow Chrysanthemums for Exhibition," which was greatly appreciated and was accorded a hearty vote of thanks.

At the next meeting, to be held March 26, there will be a smoker and a cordial invitation is extended to members of neighboring societies to attend. A social and enjoyable evening is assured and a delegation from each is expected. G. M.

CHICAGO'S FIRST SPRING SHOW

AN ARTISTIC SUCCESS.

Makes Extremely Pretty Picture.

Because of the apparent diminution of interest in the stereotyped kind of autumn exhibition, and encouraged by the great success made by the national spring show at Boston last March, the Horticultural Society of Chicago last summer determined to omit the annual autumn exhibition and hold, instead, a display of spring flowers and plants, a novelty in the west, for no extensive show ever had been tried in that section of the country except in the month of November. The show is on this week in the Art Institute, the ornate home of sculpture and painting on Michigan avenue.

Because of its being a first attempt no one knew just what to expect in the matter of exhibits—there was no way of telling whether a big show or a small one was to result, although the premium list, carrying a total of $2,590, was sufficiently liberal to encourage the exhibitors to do their best. To some, therefore, the extent of the show is a disappointment, while others found it greater than they had anticipated. The upper floor in the center of the building is being used and the exhibits in place on the opening day were sufficient to occupy all the space this splendid hall affords, with some of the exhibits finding quarters in adjoining rooms. The number of entries is, perhaps, not so large as the number and size of the premiums would seem to justify, but the picture, from the moment the visitor steps inside the entrance and gets the view up the grand stairway, to the time he has gained the full view on the floor above, is one of exceptional attractiveness. The management of the show is in the hands of George Asmus, and none knows better than he how to make the best possible use of the material at hand. But after all is said and done, a flower show in the Art Institute, with all due respect to our excellent friends in charge of that institution, is nothing more than a decoration for their stately, statute-lined halls and picture-covered walls. This show is just that. A museum is not the place to show flowers to their greatest advantage—the plainer the walls and the surroundings the better for the plants and flowers.

Some of the Exhibits.

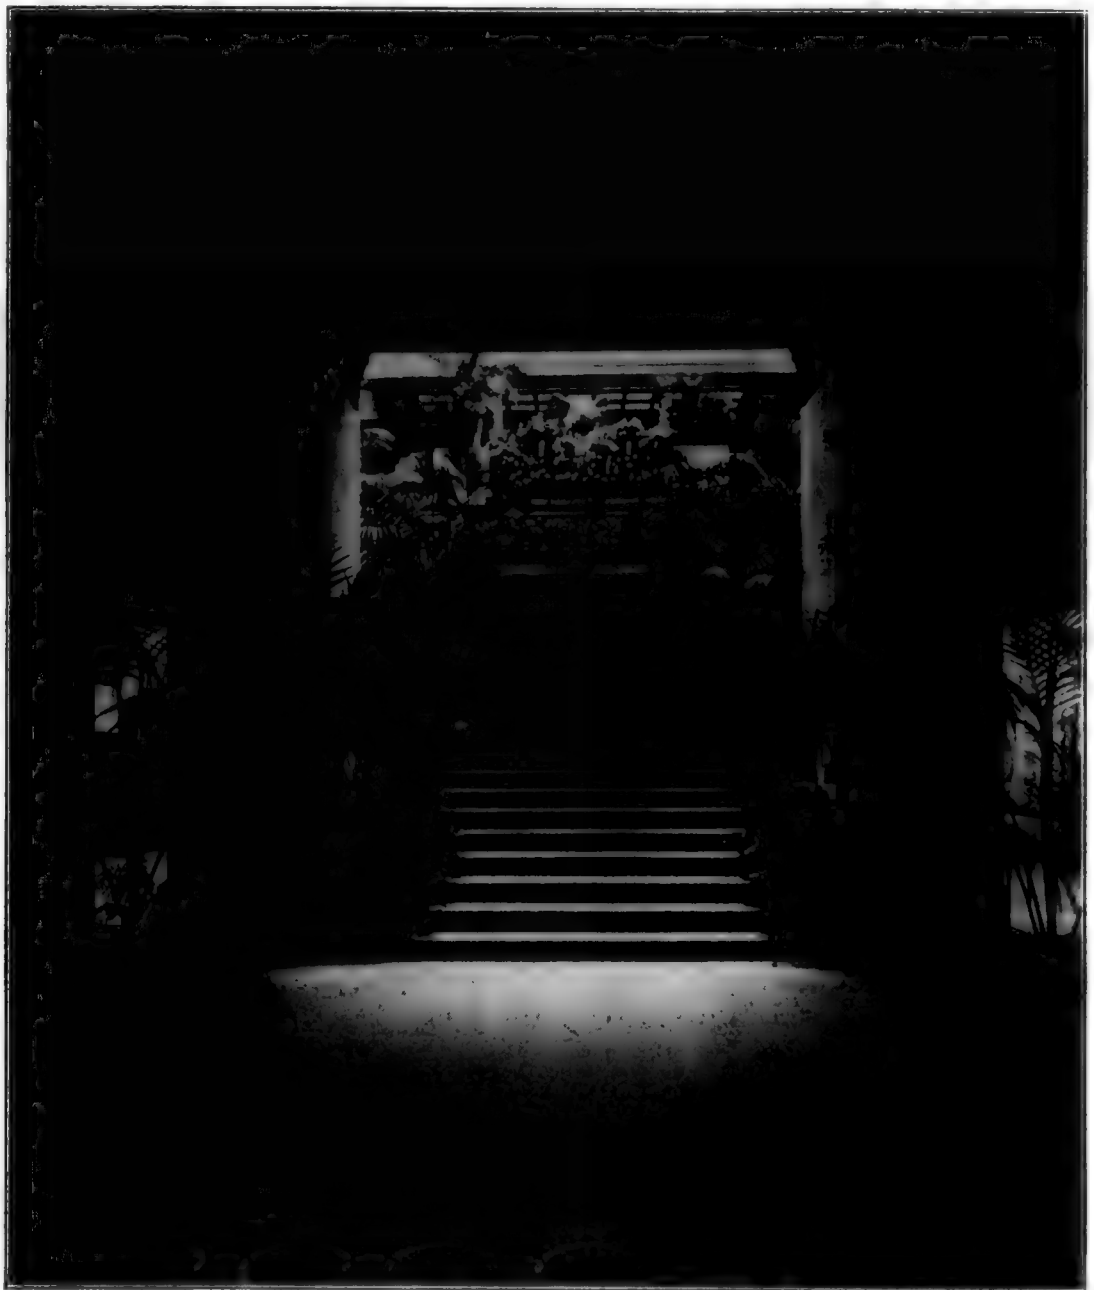

The first thing to strike the eye of the visitor is a fine lot of stock from the West parks. This includes both flowering and foliage plants and occupies the space at the foot of and on the grand stairway. As one mounts the steps he comes to the best view in the exhibition, the stairway turning to right and left, so that a massive marble balustrade crosses the line of vision at the level of the upper floor. Here Manager Asmus has a splendid decoration of Easter lilies donated for the good of the cause by Poehlmann Bros. Co. There are plants and wild smilax everywhere as one goes up the stairs, exactly as though the decorator had been given carte blanche by some wealthy patron. Let us hope it inspires many to do just that.

In the room at the west at the head of the stairs are the ferns, a dozen or more splendid specimens of Boston and Whitmani in the center, while over

Then comes the table of ten vases of long-stemmed sweet peas from Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., who also has sent some pansies that are as good as the peas, enough to fill eight plates and six baskets, each with a separate color.

In this same west room is the largest group of plants in the show, from Frank Oechslin. It is admirably arranged, although somewhat crowded, as is the habit with exhibition groups. The plants used include primulas, cyclamens, hyacinths, dracenas, tulips, asparagus, cocos, genistas, forced al-in one corner F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., has a display that holds the attention of everyone who is interested in ferns, for it shows Boston and thirteen of its children. Next to the Tarrytown ferns is a group of Calla Elliottiana, the yellow variety, from John Lewis Childs, and everyone remarks about the purity of the color.

monds, kentias, rhododendrons, araucarias, marguerites, azaleas, cibotiums and several others. The edges at each end are bordered by pots of funkia, the variegated foliage making a pleasing contrast to the rest of the group. Many comment on not having seen the funkia grown in this way before.

The galleries crossing the building are both handsomely decorated with stock not entered for competition and without cards, although the effect along the south gallery is one of the best in the show. The second day the cards made their appearance; the stock was from the south parks.

The bulbous stock occupied the room at the head of the east stairway. There are two exhibitors who so overshadow the others as to practically be the whole show of bulbous flowers. These are Frank Oechslein and August Jurgens. The valley in pans is in the same room and here it is H. N. Bruns who competes with Mr. Jurgens. Poehlmann's pots of lilies are here also.

In the east room the commanding group is the 100-foot arrangement of rose plants in fine flower from Vaughan's Seed Store. This is flanked by smaller groups and specimen rose plants from the same exhibitor, who is the only one showing roses in pots. In this room Fritz Bahr has some fine ericas and here, too, are the primulas from Peter Schilt, J. J. Wolniewicz, Oechslein, Vaughan and Bahr.

One of the quality exhibits, although not a large one, is the table of cattleyas from Charles J. Bond, of Naperville. The dozen vases mostly contain Trianae, the flowers being of splendid size and substance in spite of the lateness of the season. Some equally good Schroederae are shown and a few blooms of hybrids.

E. Wienhoeber Co. had one of the rooms all to itself for a table simply but attractively arranged with the use of the porcelain water ways, etc. In the center were flowering almonds and around these spring flowers and Mrs. Ward roses.

The Landscape Display.

H. J. Stockmans has a room to himself for an exhibit that attracts as much attention from the public as anything in the show. He illustrates how various pieces of ground are treated by the landscape man. The larger of the three exhibits shows a property of five acres at Lake Forest, for which Mr. Stockmans has prepared the plans for improvement. He has built a big, low table on which has been placed a pan specially constructed, the scale being one inch to four feet. The pan is only two inches deep and is filled with soil, so that the receptacle is out of sight and the surroundings are safe from damage by moisture. On an elevation stands the mansion, with a formal rose garden, hedges, pergola and balustrades at one side. Off to the left are the vegetable gardens and further yet the orchard, all so completely illustrated that the little trees are full of fruit (cranberries) with more on the ground. The sod is green sheet moss. At the right is a water garden with real water, and a perennial garden. The crocuses are in bloom. The avenue beside the estate is lined with trees and the shrubbery and trees about the grounds are shown as they will be planted, down to the most minute detail. Two similar displays show different treatments for city lots 100x150.

Rose Day.

Wednesday, the second of the show, was rose day, and the size of the exhibition was materially increased, for the big vases of 100 long-stemmed blooms, many of them arranged in the Institute's unique big vases, took up a great deal of room. The roses were given the east room, displacing the bulbous stock, cyclamens and primulas, which gay colored exhibits were removed to adjoining rooms not used on the opening day. The show thus appeared much larger than as at first staged.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. made a clean sweep in the rose classes, but was without competition in Dark Pink Killarney, Double Pink Killarney, Ward, Bulgarie and Melody. Each class called for 100 flowers. While all were good, the Mrs. Ward were exceptionally fine. Wietor Bros. staged excellent entries in the Beauty, Killarney and White Killarney classes and Peter Reinberg had a fine vase of Richmonds. The Beauties made a brave show in the great porcelain jars in which they were staged, but soon went down, proving that these fancy receptacles are not nearly so good for the purpose as are the ordinary straight pots.

Bassett & Washburn put up a group of roses not for competition. Eleven vases were used, the varieties being White Killarney, Rhea Reid, Killarney, Ward, Double White Killarney, Beauty and Richmond.

John Mangel staged two splendid large, tall baskets of roses, one of Bulgarie, and the other of Ward, excellently arranged.

The Bohannon Floral Co. had an exceptionally fine tall vase of White Killarney, splendidly arranged.

Harry Papworth, of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., New Orleans, brought roses to fill a half dozen vases, long-stemmed stock that showed that though New Orleans gets most of its roses from Chicago, good flowers nevertheless can be grown in that climate.

The awards on roses were:

One hundred American Beauty—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Wietor Bros. second.

One hundred Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Wietor Bros. second.

One hundred White Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Wietor Bros. second.

One hundred Dark Pink Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first.

One hundred Double Pink Killarney—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first.

One hundred Mrs. Aaron Ward—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first.

One hundred Prince de Bulgarie—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first.

One hundred Melody—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first.

One hundred Richmond—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Peter Reinberg second.

Best new rose not yet disseminated—certificates to E. G. Hill Co., for Sunburst, and to Poehlmann Bros. Co., for Double White Killarney.

The Carnations.

The carnations come on the stage Thursday and it promises to be in this department of the show that the strongest competition is seen. Up to Tuesday night there were twelve entries in the class calling for 100 white, and there was nearly another whole day in which to receive additional entries. None of the other classes had so many entries as the class for white, but there were eight entries in the class for red, seven in the one for light pink, six in the one for flesh pink, five in the one for dark pink, and three in the class for variegated. The only classes which had not filled well on Tuesday, two days before staging, were those for crimson and for yellow variegated, in which there were no entries at all at that time. With the quality of all the stock averaging as well as it does at present an interesting competition is expected.

Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, were on hand Wednesday with a fine vase of St. Nicholas, the new Christmas red carnation, and received many compliments on the color as well as on the quality of the flowers. Mr. Baur brought for A. Pettit, of Indianapolis, a vase of a Spencer sweet pea that was from vines that have been flowering since October. The color is a pleasing rose pink and the name is Rose Queen. The flowers were fine.

The Awards.

The judges on the first day were E. Allan Peirce, Waltham, Mass.; E. O. Orpet, Lake Forest, Ill., and John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.

In the east room the commanding group is the 100-foot arrangement of rose plants in fine flower from Vaughan's Seed Store. This is flanked by smaller groups and specimen rose plants from the same exhibitor, who is the only one showing roses in pots. In this room Fritz Bahr has some fine ericas and here, too, are the primulas from Peter Schilt, J. J. Wolniewicz, Oechslein, Vaughan and Bahr.

One of the quality exhibits, although not a large one, is the table of cacti from Charles J. Bond, of Naperville. The dozen vases mostly contain Trianae, the flowers being of splendid size and substance in spite of the lateness of the season. Some equally good Schroederae are shown and a few blooms of hybrids.

E. Wienhoeber Co. had one of the rooms all to itself for a table simply but attractively arranged with the use of the porcelain water ways, etc. In the center were flowering almonds and around these spring flowers and Mrs. Ward roses.

The Landscape Display.

H. J. Stockmans has a room to himself for an exhibit that attracts as much attention from the public as anything in the show. He illustrates how various pieces of ground are treated by the landscape man. The larger of the three exhibits shows a property of five acres at Lake Forest, for which Mr. Stockmans has prepared the plans for improvement. He has built a big, low table on which has been placed a pan specially constructed, the scale being one inch to four feet. The pan is only two inches deep and is filled with soil, so that the receptacle is out of sight and the surroundings are safe from damage by moisture. On an elevation stands the mansion, with a formal rose garden, hedges, pergola and balustrades at one side. Off to the left are the vegetable gardens and further yet the orchard, all so completely illustrated that the little trees are full of fruit (cranberries) with more on the ground. The sod is green sheet moss. At the right is a water garden with real water, and a perennial garden. The crocuses are in bloom. The avenue beside the estate is lined with trees and the shrubbery and trees about the grounds are shown as they will be planted, down to the most minute detail. Two similar displays show different treatments for city lots 100x150.

Rose Day.

Wednesday, the second of the show, was rose day, and the size of the exhibition was materially increased, for the big vases of 100 long-stemmed blooms, many of them arranged in the Institute's unique big vases, took up a great deal of room. The roses were given the east room, displacing the bulbous stock, cyclamens and primulas, which gay colored exhibits were removed to adjoining rooms not used on the opening day. The show thus appeared much larger than as at first staged.

Pochlmann Bros. Co. made a clean sweep in the rose classes, but was without competition in Dark Pink Killarney, Double Pink Killarney, Ward, Bulgarie and Melody. Each class called for 100 flowers. While all were good, the Mrs. Ward were exceptionally fine. Wiator Bros. staged excellent entries in the Beauty, Killarney and White Killarney classes and Peter Reinberg had a fine vase of Richmonds. The Beauties made a brave show in the great porcelain jars in which they were staged, but soon went down, proving that these fancy receptacles are not nearly so good for the purpose as are the ordinary straight pots.

Bassett & Washburn put up a group of roses not for competition. Eleven vases were used, the varieties being White Killarney, Rhea Reid, Killarney, Ward, Double White Killarney, Beauty and Richmond.

John Mangel staged two splendid large, tall baskets of roses, one of Bulgarie, and the other of Ward, excellently arranged.

The Bohannon Floral Co. had an exceptionally fine tall vase of White Killarney, splendidly arranged.

Harry Papworth, of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., New Orleans, brought roses to fill a half dozen vases, long-stemmed stock that showed that though New Orleans gets most of its roses from Chicago, good flowers nevertheless can be grown in that climate.

The awards on roses were:

One hundred American Beauty—Pochlmann Bros. Co. first, Wiator Bros. second.
One hundred Killarney—Pochlmann Bros. Co. first, Wiator Bros. second.
One hundred White Killarney—Pochlmann Bros. Co. first, Wiator Bros. second.

The Carnations.

The carnations come on the stage Thursday and it promises to be in this department of the show that the strongest competition is seen. Up to Tuesday night there were twelve entries in the class calling for 100 white, and there was nearly another whole day in which to receive additional entries. None of the other classes had so many entries as the class for white, but there were eight entries in the class for red, seven in the one for light pink, six in the one for flesh pink, five in the one for dark pink, and three in the class for variegated. The only classes which had not filled well on Tuesday, two days before staging, were those for crimson and for yellow variegated, in which there were no entries at all at that time. With the quality of all the stock averaging as well as it does at present an interesting competition is expected.

Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, were on hand Wednesday with a fine vase of St. Nicholas, the new Christmas red carnation, and received many compliments on the color as well as on the quality of the flowers. Mr. Baur brought for A. Pettit, of Indianapolis, a vase of a Spencer sweet pea that was from vines that have been flowering since October. The color is a pleasing rose pink and the name is Rose Queen. The flowers were fine.

The Attendance.

The Art Institute has a regular daily attendance averaging 300 when 25 cents admission is charged. On the opening day of the show this was increased to over 1,000. The show is open evenings. Because the regular admission is 25 cents, that sum is charged during the day, with 50 cents at night, when the building ordinarily is closed. The Art Institute has two free days, Wednesday and Sunday, and on these days no admission can be charged to the flower show.

Secretary J. H. Burdett stated that on the free afternoon, Wednesday, over 6,000 people visited the show.

THE STATE COLLEGES.

What They Are Doing for the People.

[A synopsis of a paper by Joseph Heacock, read at the March meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia.]

I enjoyed Farmers' week at State College, Pa., December 27 to January 3, so much that I wrote President Thilow that if your essay committee thought well of it I would be glad to tell the Florists' Club about it. I now realize that in so doing I bit off more than I can chew. I have not been able, with the time I have had at my disposal, to write up the matter as I should like to have done.

Dean Thomas F. Hunt told us how little the great state of Pennsylvania had done for her college in comparison with what the other states had done for theirs, and what the revenue from the land grant of the national government to the various states was compared with that of Pennsylvania. I subjoin a few figures:

State.	Grant.	Amt. per capita.
California	$2,729,553.35	$1.14
Wisconsin	1,664,854.53	.71
New York	1,643,792.25	.18
Illinois	1,443,792.06	.23
Minnesota	1,429,424.00	.68
Ohio	932,424.00	.19
Massachusetts	883,528.74	.26
Virginia	610,446.24	.29
Missouri	592,304.90	.18
Nebraska	554,903.00	.46
Iowa	542,345.55	.24
Indiana	482,447.81	.17
Mississippi	467,629.48	.26
Pennsylvania	400,809.00	.05

One is apt to think of the State College only as agricultural, but such is not the fact. There is the School of BOILING CYPRESS IN OIL.

Does it benefit cypress greenhouse material to boil it in linseed oil? Is this better than applying the first coat with a brush? If so, how is it done?

M. B.

While it is a good plan to boil sash-bars in linseed oil, if one has conveniences for doing so, it is not necessary, as a priming coat of oil containing a small amount of white lead will answer the purpose. It will be well to apply a second coat of lead and oil paint and then, after glazing the houses, give them a third coat.

EXAMINATION FOR HEAD FLORIST

The examination for head florist of the West Park system, Chicago, was held February 27, 1912.

The fact that the civil service law requires examinations to be competitive and public required that this examination be held in Chicago on a fixed date. The civil service board received inquiries and applications from some forty or fifty prospective candidates, residing in twelve different states of the Union. Of these candidates, only ten found it possible to appear in Chicago on the date set for the examination. The test was completed in one day and consisted of—

(1) A paper giving the candidate's age, education, and a description of his practical experience.

(2) A paper on the organization of the work in conservatories, the arrangement and time of the various floral displays, and the general maintenance and care of the greenhouses and conservatories and their equipment.

(3) A paper on propagation, plant nomenclature and general horticultural work.

(4) A paper on English, arithmetic, and other educational features.

(5) An oral examination, including the recognition of about thirty greenhouse plants.

The questions were designed by Edwin A. Kanst, of Chicago, and W. N. Rudd, president of Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, and these gentlemen also conducted the oral examination and graded all the papers on floral work.

The successful candidate was August Koch, at present in charge of a department of the Missouri Botanical Garden, at St. Louis.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.*The March Crop.

The indoor plants which are now just starting to flower should, under favorable conditions, produce the finest flowers of the year during the next few weeks. The earlier crops are now running out and will soon be over. The houses they occupy can be utilized for an indoor summer crop, provided, however, they are large and well ventilated. It would be a pure waste of energy to attempt their summer culture in any but the largest and most up-to-date houses, but Memorial day crops of ten weeks' stocks, gladioli, feverfew, candytuft or snapdragon can be planted, provided the plants are now ready in pots. Many growers, for a change, run tomatoes or cucumbers through the summer and find they pay well, particularly the tomatoes, which are less sensitive to cold than cucumbers.

Plants which are commencing to flower, or will soon do so, should be given a night temperature of 48 to 52 degrees. The latter figure, however, must not be exceeded. As the plants now grow quite rapidly, the ties must never be neglected, for if the haulm becomes twisted it means a percentage of bent and unsalable flower stems. With increasing sunlight, the soil will now dry out more quickly and the water supplies must be increased. Just as soon as flower stems start to shorten of artificial heat they will develop more slowly, but will come stockier and hardier. In frames some covering over the glass may be needed for a few weeks yet.

Planting out can be done when the weather becomes settled, anywhere from the beginning to the end of April, according to location. Sweet peas started in pots will come into flower ten to fourteen days earlier than duce exhibition flowers are set eighteen inches apart and the shoots on these reduced in number. The general tendency always is to sow sweet peas much too thickly. If they germinate thickly it pays to thin severely, as it will always mean much stronger haulm and finer flowers. It is easy for any grower to prove the correctness of this statement by trying a few each way.

Sowing Seeds Outdoors.

If the ground was deeply plowed or spaded last fall and liberally manured, it will be in the best possible mechanical condition for sweet peas. This fall preparation of the soil is not half appreciated and is utterly ignored by many good growers. It is satisfactory to note, nevertheless, a growing disposition on the part of wide-awake growers to prepare the ground then. Those who did not prepare ground in the fall—and those are the overwhelming majority—should lose not a moment when once frost has left the ground and it has sufficiently dried out to be workable, in preparing the ground for this important crop. The deeper the ground can be plowed or spaded and the more liberally it is manured, the better will the peas grow and flower.

The Trench System.

While splendid sweet peas can be grown on land containing good, friable loam, well manured, flowers of extra quality can be had if a trench twenty-four to thirty inches wide and of similar depth is dug out, and filled with alternate layers of well decayed manure and loam, finishing with several inches of soil on top. This method entails much labor and is only to be recommended where fancy flowers are wanted, but deep digging or plowing gives almost as good flowers, which are not, however, produced over so long a season as when a deep trench is excavated. The idea should be to loosen the ground as deeply as possible, in order to allow the roots to penetrate well below the surface in dry weather. Fine bone, well worked into the soil, up, it is a sure indication that the food supplies at the roots are inadequate, and liquid manure, top-dressings of cow manure, pulverized sheep manure or fine bone should be given; this should be scratched into the soil lightly before watering.

The Safest Fumigant.

A recent inquiry is, "What is the safest fumigant for sweet peas?" The tobacco papers are excellent. Some large growers, once a week, take small piles of tobacco stems or dust and set fire to them, laying them on the floors. In using the dust, a little kerosene sprinkled over it will make it smolder away better. Never give strong fumigations, as the foliage is quite easily burnt, particularly if the night should be a warm one. Above all, avoid the use of hydrocyanic acid gas; this is too much for sweet peas. Some varieties, particularly Watchung, have a faculty of dropping many of the buds, especially in winter. Under the same treatment Florence Denzer will not drop a bud. This would seem to indicate that Watchung has some organic weakness; still, it is so wonderfully free flowering that many still grow it.

Starting Seeds in Pots.

While the ground will not be open for some time, except in the warmer states, those wishing for an early outdoor crop should start a quantity of seeds in pots. I like 4-inch pots for this purpose, sowing four or five seeds in each and afterward thinning these out to three. A cold greenhouse, or better still, a cold frame, answers well for this early sowing. It appears that if the seeds are raised without the aid those sown outdoors in the average season. They should not be planted closer than ten or twelve inches apart. This will allow them to make strong haulm and to branch freely, which is out of the question where they are set too thickly. In England, where stems eighteen to twenty-four inches long are produced, the individual plants to pro-is an excellent fertilizer and is not sufficiently used. Poultry manure is too strong, and unless applied with caution and then only in the form of top-dressings, is liable to do harm.

Depth to Cover Seed.

Many seed catalogues advise the light covering of sweet pea seed, say an inch at first, and afterward filling in around the plants with fine soil as they grow. Others advocate covering two and one-half to three inches deep, and later filling between the plants similarly. This filling in has done much to discourage sweet pea culture. It starts stem-rot and is responsible for a whole lot of failures. Cover the seeds three inches, firm them well and do not fill in between them at all, and there will be less stem-rot and far healthier plants.

Varieties.

The varieties of sweet peas are now multiplying at such a tremendous rate that it is bewildering to the small grower to know what to buy. This year there are about 100 novelties being introduced in England and America. If half a dozen survive they will do well. The varieties now catalogued are needlessly numerous and would better be reduced to one-fourth the present number. Private estates may like to grow a large collection, but to the man in the trade a much boiled down list is a necessity. Furthermore, only certain colors will sell well, and these shades only should be planted.

The Spencer type, which originated in England in 1900, is now immensely popular. This giant waved type has now become quite fixed and there are probably 100 varieties listed today, inclusive of novelties. No sweet pea today is more popular than the Countess Spencer, of a lovely rose-pink color.

This has great vigor and can be relied upon to produce long stems the whole season, if given good treatment. Helen Lewis Spencer, of a rich orange color, is the best of its shade and popular in the markets. Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, apricot, flushed with delicate pink, is beautiful. Evelyn Hemus, or Mrs. C. W. Breadmore, is of a lovely shade, the groundwork cream, edged with pink. King Edward Spencer, rich scarlet, is the leader of its color. In pure whites Nora Unwin and Dorothy Eckford are both superb. Frank Dolby, light lavender, and the old but reliable Lady Grisel Hamilton, lavender blue, are equally good. Asta Ohn Spencer is of a lovely shade, lavender suffused with mauve. Where flowers of a rosy carmine color will sell, John Ingman should be planted. Constance Oliver is of a delicate creamy pink color. Lord Nelson is a fine dark blue, and Mrs. Andrew Ireland an excellent bicolor, rosy pink and blush.

The foregoing list comprises practically all shades of colors which will sell. The most popular are pink, orange pink, white and lavender, and it is always well to plant most heavily of these.

PIERSON'S PEARLS.

Following are some of the gems of thought from the address of Wallace R. Pierson before the New York Florists' Club, March 11:

"I enjoy talking on a subject that interests me, and roses are a big part of the flower business of this country. The rose stands in a place which no other flower can hope to usurp. It is in a class by itself.

"The glass market has caused a building boom. We shall have to look for an increased outlet for the product or face a glut in the markets of the country.

"The essentials for success in the rose growing business are good soil, good houses, water, steam heat, good plants, good management, shipping facilities and a proper handling of the product and collection of accounts.

"Good houses for roses are houses that grow roses well. The ideal house is a matter of opinion only.

"Steam heat I consider absolutely essential. Hot water gives a uniform heat and a steady supply. Every house on our place has both steam and hot water heat, which worked in conjunction we consider ideal.

"We find in commerce not over twelve or fifteen varieties of roses that are being grown in quantity for cut flowers.

"The Killarney family is entitled to a Roosevelt medal for the variety and number of its offspring.

"In new roses this year there are but a few leading varieties which appeal to the commercial grower.

"A flower lover sooner or later becomes a flower buyer.

"For the flower business our parks are wonderful advertisements, and the building up of the business depends on the elimination of prejudice and the education of the masses.

"To our retailers we must look for the salvation of the business.

"The wish to see and buy the latest creations of the millinery art would be duplicated in the flower business when we can offer to each customer something that is different and which appeals not to established precedent, but to individual taste.

"Salvation must come through the retailer and grower working in harmony.

"During the last fifteen years we have only been able to teach the masses the names of about four or five roses.

"The political expression 'to look to one's fences' applies to the rose situation at the present moment.

"Sentiment is connected with flowers, and with roses in particular, and that sentiment should be used to educate the love for roses and admiration for the wonders and beauty of nature.

"The successful rose business depends just as much on how the product is sold as it does on the growing.

"Be alive to such opportunities as the National Flower Show will present to educate the public.

"Teach your retail customers to know and distinguish varieties. Show them something new and different.

"Prepare your grower as to your needs for succeeding seasons.

"Remember that retailer, wholesaler and grower are, after all, just men striving to make an honest living in a busy world, which is, so far as we florists are concerned, sixty per cent roses."

sary vigor and virility to withstand extremes.

We are breeding a number of types, two of which are: First, spikes with many open flowers at once, for florists' use; second, a few out at once, but developing over a long time, especially for garden culture. Some of our more recently introduced sorts do not appeal to me at all. A stem with eight or ten flowers open at once, close together, does not appeal to my artistic faculties any more than does a mopstick. The most appealing to me are those nicely spaced, showing each flower in its full, individual beauty of form, with five to seven open blooms and opening buds on slightly slender stems. These are airy, graceful and beautiful as against stiff, straight, rigid ones, with eight to ten open flowers jammed tightly together, and then, to finish the caricature, several dozen jammed into a small vase. So long as the store man demands this last type, however, I suppose we shall be compelled to listen to his siren call to profit.

We expect to see quite a change in the ideal gladiolus, compared with what has been grown, in quite a number of aspects in our future results. We hope to see, and not far away either, an ideal something like the following: A virile, strong plant, seven feet high; broad, bright green foliage; thinner, but strong stem; twenty-four buds and flowers to the spike, each nicely spaced; good, clear, bright colors; wide-open flowers, eight inches wide; good, plump, medium sized bulbs; bulblets large and freely produced. At least, such is my dream of conquest.

MORE ABOUT GLADIOLI.

As B. F. White invites discussion on his welcome and interesting article in The Review of February 22, page 16, I wish to say that I differ with him on the lasting qualities of glads, where he advises the breeding of longer lasting varieties, such as Princeps, etc., that will last three times as long as other kinds.

I think gladioli last altogether too long, from a business standpoint. I have heard retail florists say that gladioli make the cheapest window decoration, as the flowers will last all the week in a window. Now, if a flower lover buys such kinds as the Princeps type, she would only need to buy about twice in a month and have flow-

NOTES ON GLADIOLI

HYBRIDIZATION OF GLADIOLI.

B. F. White's interesting notes on Gladiolus Primulinus, on page 16 of The Review of February 22, ought to arouse discussion along all lines of breeding. Rosarians, carnationists, etc., all should give the fruits of their experience; an open interchange of ideas as to methods, trials, tests and results would be a lasting benefit to all. Indeed, Mr. White, it is worth while to spend the time to seek nature's manifold laws; progress can come only through experimentation, comparison and correlative deduction.

I have done practically little work except with near-species. With these the results have been eminently satisfactory; hence, perforce, I must disagree with Mr. White. Some of the most beautiful, robust and especially virile seedlings are from species interbreeding, but one must exercise much discriminating judgment in the material entering into the unions. I think that many false conclusions have been arrived at relative not only to the introduction of distinct species, but closely allied sorts, because we have not given such work the amount of time that it needs to determine rightly the actual results. Some things may be done in hybridizing that we now declare impossible, because we take too much for granted or because earlier scientists have not tried rightly.

Many older growers and fanciers have sneered at Primulinus, but my observations with Gladiolus dracocephalus, etc., have caused me to breed a lot of it, with the result that I have a fine collection of its hybrids, embracing plants seven feet tall, with a blooming period from July 1 until November, from bulbs all planted April 1. A row of these will tickle any garden owner longer than anything else in that garden. In color they range from palest cream through all shades of yellow to old-gold, golden purples, golden reds, etc. There are many spotless selfs, with flowers superior to the best yellows listed. In size many are equal to Childsii, some with a few, some with many open flowers at one time. While many growers say, "No Primulinus for me," it is the most promising of all gladioli, embracing everything desirable in such a flower. I have good grounds for making that statement, as I possess many of the finest introductions of the better known world specialists. When showing flowers or selling bulbs, I watch carefully the remarks and opinions of all visitors, regardless of age or degree of intellect, as often the unpolished "rube" has more discriminating incisiveness of view than those born with a gold spoon and given an "edycation." Primulinus has more points of merit to make it popular than any other type. Above all is its thin, strong stem, long keeping qualities, unusual texture and substance.

We deal with from fifteen to twenty characters in our breeding, as against a few, as did Mendel. Nor do we follow Mendel's ideas so far as many growers and breeders do, as there are some noteworthy exceptions to those laws, so that merely taking things for granted may be the underlying causes for the disappointing results some growers get. Again, there are some distinct points we have observed in our work that to the breeder for best results are exceedingly important; one should and must know them to realize the "utter development," etc., that we heard so much about a few years ago. Entirely too many of the older gladioli lack multiplicative force, or they lack the neces-ers all the time in her rooms. What then would become of us growers? We would starve. If gladioli would last like carnations they would last long enough, which would be three to four days, but the average gladiolus lasts one week.

I also wish to say that my fancy does not harmonize with Mr. White's as to the graceful appearance of such a type as Princeps. Just imagine before you a spike three feet long, and in the center of the spike are two open blooms, and above them is one and one-half feet of stalk without anything on it, not even any foliage! How does it look? Now place a dozen of them in a vase; they don't look any better. If you were to put greens in with them to hide the long spikes, you would hide the flowers and spoil their effect; so you must leave them as they are and be contented with their appearance. These look to me decidedly like the tall bunch of vegetable asparagus to which Mr. White has referred.

If gladioli in a florist's window are wadded together in a bunch, Mr. White doesn't know who is to blame for it. I say it is the florist's blame; he ought to know how to place them in such a vase, how to arrange them so that they will look graceful and loose, and how to place something with them that will improve their appearance. One great mistake is that most of the retail florists do not know how to work up gladioli and it seems to me that they don't try, but simply work them up into anything that comes along.

I must admit that Princeps is a good seller, but you must remember that it is the color and the wide open flowers that take. I notice that when the retail florists in Milwaukee pick out glads, they always choose those with the most and largest flowers on the spikes. I breed only such varieties as have many flowers open at one time, and with straight stems.

I invite other growers' ideas.

produced from a snapshot of the automobile now in use by Charles Eble, New Orleans, the picture having been made in front of Mr. Eble's store in the Grunewald hotel. It is said to be the first automobile to be put on the street by a New Orleans florist. The machine originally was a touring car and it has forty horse-power, originally costing $4,500, but Mr. Eble bought it at a bargain and had the body rebuilt. The panel body can be removed so that the car can be used as a platform car for the transportation of tall plants. It also can be used as a touring car by replacing the touring body. Mr. Eble says that it not only proves a great help in handling business, but has been an excellent advertisement. Mr. Eble's son, Bernard, runs the machine, which is known as the floramobile. He appears in the picture.

than the fall cuttings. Do not use anything in the nature of fresh manure in the soil. Let any manure be so old that it will crumble readily in the hands, and add some fine bone, which builds up a stocky plant and makes for flower rather than soft green wood.

Winter Geraniums.

Provided cuttings of winter geraniums are not yet taken, no time should be lost in getting them in the soil. Single cuttings in small pots containing sandy loam, placed where they can get a little bottom heat, are preferable to cuttings in the propagating bench. They will root nicely within four weeks and should have a shift into 3-inch pots before they can become in the least starved. Use a little fine bone at this potting and a little well decayed old hotbed or mushroom manure in addition.

Hotbeds for Geraniums.

Greenhouse space is always at a premium after the middle of March, and every grower at that time has to tax his brains to accommodate all his plants. Provided that a good supply of cold-frames are at disposal, and surely no commercial establishment is complete without them, it is possible to utilize them to relieve the indoor pressure from this time onward. It would be too severe a check to take geraniums or any other of the hardier bedding plants and simply stand them on a bed of sand or ashes without any artificial heat, but if the frames are of sufficient depth, or can easily be dug out to allow fifteen to eighteen inches of horse manure and leaves to be placed in the same and still allow of sufficient headroom, the geraniums will thrive well in them. The manure should be moist, and if mixed with leaves and turned once or twice before being used, all the better. It should be tramped in the frames thoroughly, after which a few inches of fine soil or even cinders can be added, and in these the pots can be partly plunged. Splendid plants can be grown in this way, provided, of course, that ventilation, watering and the necessary covering on cold nights

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Geraniums for Bedding.

All of the fall propagated cuttings should now be in 3½-inch or 4-inch pots. Growth is now quite rapid, and with houses filled to overflowing with Easter stock it is difficult to give the plants the necessary space for their proper development, but every eight or ten days they should be looked over, decaying leaves and weeds removed and given a fresh stand. If this is not done, mold will spread quickly, and especially among crowded plants. A warm house is not necessary for geraniums; 45 degrees at night will suffice. Do not make a habit of playing the hose over the stock on bright days; it only makes the plants soft. Also always run the pots a little on the dry rather than the wet side. This will make the growths harder, shorter jointed, and what is important, more floriferous. If any stock looks starved, give a weak dose of some stimulant like nitrate of soda, on two occasions ten days apart, but do not continue its use once they put on new life, as it will only make them soft.

Winter rooted cuttings should be potted along before they can become potbound. If the balls get much matted with roots, loosen them a little when repotting, and never pot geraniums, or for that matter any other plants, with dry balls. These later rooted cuttings will do better kept 5 degrees warmer are attended to. These hotbeds may be scouted by big growers, but there are many country florists to whom they would be a great help, for not only geraniums but many other plants can be grown in them.

GLORY OF CINCINNATI.

Please give the best method and time for propagating Glory of Cincinnati begonia and its requirements as to shade and temperature. R. E. M.

This fine winter flowering begonia propagates readily from either leaves or shoots. To secure a good supply of shoots, remove the flowers, cut back the plants halfway, run them pretty dry for a time and then give them a warm, moist house and they will start to produce cuttings in good numbers. A warm propagating bench, with a steady bottom heat of 75 to 85 degrees, should be used. The cuttings must be shielded from sunshine and no direct air current should reach them. Neither these nor Lorraine begonias should have a house heavily shaded, or they become drawn and attenuated. A minimum temperature of 60 degrees should be given after potting. Use a compost largely consisting of rather flaky leaf-mold for the earlier pottings, and use considerable leaf-mold even for the final potting. C. W.

PREPARATION OF YOUNG STOCK.

Removing From the Sand.

Much of the success of the rose grower depends upon proper care being given to the young stock in the earliest stages. The experienced propagator can usually tell almost to a day when his cuttings are fit to be taken out of the sand and potted. The beginner will probably have to lift a plant or two and examine them before commencing to pot. As a general rule, roses and other plants are more likely to be left too long in the sand than to be lifted and potted too soon. While sand is an excellent medium for "drawing" roots, it is bad for maintaining the health of the young plants, and when, as sometimes occurs, the plants are left in the sand until the roots are a couple of inches or more in length, they receive a check from which it takes several weeks to recover.

To obtain the best results, young rose plant roots should be running in heavy loam just as early as possible. By this means only will the earliest, youngest shoots have the necessary vigor. When half an inch, or even less, of root has been made from the callus, the plants are ready to pot. When possible, have soil and pots near the propagating bench, so as to prevent the drying out of the roots. The dry, cool air and drafty conditions of the ordinary potting shed are not good for the tender young rootlets.

The First Potting.

A good, heavy loam, with a 6-inch potful of bone meal to each barrow load if the soil is poor, makes a good compost for the young stock; never use a light, sandy soil. If too dry to firm well in the pots, sprinkle and turn the soil, but do not wet it sufficiently to make it stick to the hands of the operator, or to make it cake.

In potting, make the soil tolerably firm by pressure of the thumbs, and finish just below the rim of the pot. If kept too low the plants are apt to become too wet when damped over daily, as they must be should the weather be bright.

The grower who ships plants in large numbers uses a small thumb pot or beds his young roses out on benches, but I am not writing for him, as he usually knows his own business. The small grower, who propagates only a few thousand plants for his own use, will find it most convenient to pot at first into 2-inch and later give a shift into 3-inch. Quite a large number of these pots can be got into a small bench. Whatever else is neglected, see that the young stock is given a light, sunny bench. The temperature should be the same as for the permanent rose plants—around 60 degrees at night.

Shading.

Coming, as they do, from the shade of the propagating bench, the young plants cannot at first stand full exposure to the sun; so, if the weather is bright, they should be lightly shaded. Newspapers are always handy and are generally used for shading, and they answer the purpose, though a line of muslin about a foot or so above the plants is better. In either case, remove the shading entirely as soon as possible, usually about the third day after potting. Plants that have their foliage softened by heavy or long continued shading are more likely to be attacked by mildew and insect pests later, and are less able to withstand these attacks than others with hard, robust leaves.

Discretion in Watering.

Watering is a subject upon which no definite instructions can be given. Everything depends upon the weather, the class of soil and other conditions, and these have to be watched and the treatment altered to suit individual cases. As a general rule, I like to be able to water the young plants once daily, as it freshens them up and keeps them growing, but if it is found that the daily waterings overhead are making the plants too wet and causing a scum to form on the surface of the soil, then let them dry out a little and water less heavily. But young roses must be kept moist. If they are allowed to dry they go to rest, the stems becoming hard, and it is difficult to get them started again. Watch carefully for the first signs of mildew and keep a little sulphur on the pipes, to check it or to act as a preventive.

This may seem a long list of apparently unimportant details, but the man who attends to just such seeming trifles is he who gets there with the best stock in the market.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society has received, through President Farenwald, a proposition from the head gardener of the city parks of Hartford, Conn., as follows:

We are considering the feasibility of establishing, in connection with our rose garden here, a public trial or testing ground for hardy roses. The object would be to invite foreign and domestic growers to send new varieties for a test covering sufficient time to establish thoroughly the merits of the variety, at the conclusion of which the plants would be returned at the owner's expense, or if of sufficient merit, would be given a permanent place in the garden.

The rose garden here has attained considerable prominence in this country, and this, coupled with our climatic conditions, should make an ideal location for a test garden that could in time be made to assume national importance.

If the American Rose Society would cooperate with us to the extent of judging the exhibits and making the awards, it would give the affair a wider scope and make its standing official.

We are of the opinion that America needs an official trial ground and, with the cooperation of the society, feel that the outcome of our efforts would be certain of success. If the matter were presented to your executive committee early and they should approve of it, we would have sufficient time to secure some exhibits for spring planting. Alex. Cummings, Jr.

This proposition was laid before the executive committee and the idea was endorsed as a plan well worth supporting. There is such a garden in the city of Paris, with thousands of varieties on exhibition in blooming time. Hartford has a climate well suited for the growth of roses.

The guarantors of the prize awards for the exhibition held in Detroit, of whom there were thirty-four, paid up in full. Poehlmann Bros. Co. sent twice the amount requested and ex-President Elliott sent us four times as much as we asked. This sort of support speaks volumes for the solidity of the American Rose Society. The Ellwanger & Barry sweepstakes prize has been sent to A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. The Alexander Montgomery cup for the best American rose originated during 1909-10 was awarded and sent to Stockton & Howe, of Princeton, N. J.

The effort to do something to increase the interest of amateurs in the rose has met with some success. One gentleman sent in a check of $50 without any reservation, to be used toward that end, and four amateurs have bobbed up with an annual subscription, which we are glad to have.

Can anyone send me for record the name of roses originated in America since 1860?

Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Azaleas.

But three weeks more and Easter will be here. Azaleas are always one of the most important of flowering plants at this great floral festival. Provided the plants are now opening their flowers they will be all right if carried along in a cool house. If, however, no color is yet showing in the buds, they must be hurried. Give them a warm, moist house and spray them freely. Discontinue syringing after the flowers are expanding and as soon as you are reasonably certain you have them sufficiently advanced move them to cooler quarters.

Lilacs.

The Easter lilacs should never be grown in the dark. Half their beauty is lost if they are lacking in foliage. Give them the fullest light and, as they open, gradually move them to a lower temperature. This change must not be too sudden, as lilacs are more susceptible to chills than many other plants. If taken from a warm house directly to one 20 degrees lower, the flowers are pretty sure to wilt, but a little experience will teach even a beginner that this sharp temperature slump is too much for them. Well flowered lilacs, particularly white and pink shades, will sell well at Easter. The call for blues is never so good at that season, but many customers rather like made up plants containing white and pink or white and lavender, which are easily possible by using good sized pots and using three plants in each, or, as is often done, the plants are placed in tins which fit into wicker baskets.

Cannas.

The time is at hand when those popular bedding plants, the cannas, should be started. Cut them up carefully, leaving a single sound eye to each plant. Do not pot at once, but lay on a bed of moss on a bench where there is a nice, steady bottom heat. Spray them over occasionally, but do not keep them wet at all, or many are likely to decay. Many small growers prefer to purchase fresh roots each spring and there should now be no delay in securing these, as the run on the really first-class bedders is always strong.

Pansies.

The covering should by this time be removed from pansy plants which have been wintered in coldframes, but on outdoor stock the mulch must remain for some time yet. There is always an excellent call for pansies in small baskets containing a dozen plants of assorted colors and it is each year noted that those which come into the market early are always quickly sold. Many defer purchasing pansies until Memorial day, but it is a common error to delay planting even the hardier plants until summer is almost here.

They are cool, moisture loving subjects, and are always seen at their best during May rather than the summer months. In order to get some plants along early a number of plants should now be lifted and planted in a violet house. It is possible to get a better price for these early flowered pansies than when the full outdoor crop has arrived. Plants in frames, after being cleaned off, should have a soaking watering, and if sashes are kept over them they will make quite a rapid growth. Double daisies and myosotis, which are two other popular spring flowers, can be treated similarly to the pansies.

Lilium Speciosum.

The fall potted bulbs of Lilium Speciosum will now be making some growth. They are better grown quite cool. In fact, unless they are wanted particularly early, they will be just as well in a coldframe and bed of ashes rather than in the greenhouse. The same applies to Lilium auratum. Even when grown cold, aphids will attack liliums and a spraying or fumigation should be given once a week. After Easter, when bench space is a little less at a premium, the lilies can be moved into one of the houses, but do not stand them below the benches, as is too often done. It will only draw up the stems and make them more weakly.

Hydrangeas.

The Easter hydrangeas should now be showing color in their flower heads. These are notoriously thirsty plants and require an abundant water supply. Feeding can be discontinued when the flower heads are fairly well developed. The blue hydrangeas do not sell well at Easter, and it is a mistake to force them for Easter. There are, however, some new forms of Hortensis which make admirable Easter plants. The Otaksas, however, of late years, even when well flowered, have not sold well.

The plants for Memorial day will be clamoring for more space, which it will be difficult to give them until some of the Easter stock has been moved.

If a sufficient batch of cuttings has not been inserted there is still time to root these and get nice plants before fall. An abundance of cuttings may be found on flowering shoots now, and probably occasional plants will be found which for some reason have failed to flower and these will yield plenty of wood for propagating purposes.

Ten Weeks' Stocks.

Stocks form a valuable Memorial day crop. Plants for flowering at this important floral festival should now be potted off. Be sure not to allow them to become potbound before planting them out or they will do disappointingly. Give them good compost to grow in, such as you would use for mums or carnations, and not too warm a house; 50 degrees should be the absolute night maximum and 5 degrees lower is better. As soon as singles show themselves pull them out. They are of no value in the market, and they should not be left to crowd out the good doubles, which are what people want. The grower who can time his crop for Memorial day will make money. Some changes in temperature may be needed to do this, but it should be remembered that after that date stocks are hard to move at any price. Therefore, no efforts should be spared to flower them by the end of May.

GREENHOUSE WALLS OF TILE.

Can you give me any information about fireproofing brick or hollow tile for greenhouse walls? Will they stand heat and moisture if cemented outside to keep moisture from going in? Which is better—tile treated in that way, or concrete?
M. B.

Ordinary building tile answers well for the walls of greenhouses, but care should be taken to use a footing course of grout high enough above ground to keep the wall fairly dry; otherwise the plastering at the lower part of the wall may be injured by wet and frost, and, after the cement has scaled off, the tile will be likely to crumble.

GOVERNOR HERRICK.

I saw some violets this winter, growing at a place where I had no chance to ask questions, that looked like Princess of Wales in color, but in shape the flowers were more like California. It seemed to be remarkably free blooming. What is Governor Herrick like? I thought it might be that variety.
M. B.

The variety undoubtedly was Governor Herrick, which, while by no means as commonly grown as Princess of Wales, is to be seen in a good many establishments, especially those that grow to supply a local retail trade.

STEM-ROT STUDIES AT URBANA.

[A paper by W. H. Anderson, assistant in floricultural pathology at the Illinois Experiment Station, read before the Illinois State Florists' Association at Joliet March 6.]

In undertaking an investigation of the diseases of floricultural plants the writer was of the opinion that a thorough and complete study of a single disease was preferable to a more or less superficial study of a larger number of the many diseases affecting our floricultural crops. After consulting with a number of prominent florists of the state, it was decided that the disease known as soft or wet stem-rot of carnations was of the greatest economical importance to greenhouse men, since the fungus causing this disease is also known to cause a number of other diseases of greenhouse crops.

The literature on this disease is extensive, but no thorough investigation has ever been carried out, so that a certain amount of preliminary work had to be undertaken in order to confirm such investigations as had already been made. These preliminary investigations have occupied the time of the writer since July and a few of the results obtained will be given in this report, although a number of experiments which have been started are not completed as yet, and therefore will not be mentioned here.

Two Kinds of Stem-Rot.

There are two recognized stem-rots of carnation, which should not be confused. One, called the dry stem-rot, is believed to be caused by a fungus of the genus Fusarium. This same fungus, but perhaps another species, causes the drying of the lower leaves of the carnation plant so often noticed in the benches. So far as I have observed, this disease is not of any great economical importance, since only the older leaves are attacked. But the fungus mentioned above as causing the dry stem-rot seems to work in the interior of the stem and to cause the death of the larger branches and often of the main stem. The stem and branches when attacked by this fungus gradually wilt and the leaves turn to a yellowish brown or about the same color as the leaves dying at the base of a normal plant. This yellowing or dying of the branch is rather rapid compared with the other stem-rot. In the dry stem-rot the stem remains firm after death, although wilted and shriveled, and if pressed with the fingers the bark does not slough off, while the fibers of the stem beneath the bark remain intact as in a dried or normally wilted stem. The contrast to that of the wet stem-rot is marked.

The wet stem-rot, which has caused the carnation grower of this country so much trouble and which has so often been called the most serious disease of carnations, is caused by a fungus called Rhizoctonia. It is hardly necessary to describe the symptoms of this disease to a convention of florists, since they are all only too well acquainted with it. The fungus usually attacks the plant at its crown; that is, where the stem enters the ground. It may enter at this point or lower and growing up one side of the stem may cause the death of only a single branch. This is often the case where the plants are set rather low in the soil; for example, when they are finally brought from the field into the house in the fall. Usually the first indication of the disease is a paler green color of the entire plant or of a single branch. The plant does not wilt at once, for the pale bluish green color of the foliage may be noticed for a week or so before any actual wilting takes place. If one presses the stem of such a plant just above the soil between the thumb and forefinger a soft area is usually felt and a slight twist is sufficient to slough off the bark, beneath which is usually a slimy wet area which gives this rot its characteristic name. Often, however, the stem is dry at the point of attack and upon breaking off the stem at this point the fibers of the stem are seen to be separated, giving a brush-like appearance to the broken stem in contrast to the firm stem of the dry rot.

Attempt to Determine Extent.

In order to obtain some definite information as to the extent of this latter disease in the state and also to get good material for our studies of the fungus itself, we sent letters to about eighty growers of the state, requesting information and material. The response to this appeal was somewhat disappointing, for from these eighty letters we received ten replies and with the ten answers we received six packages of specimens. In four packages were stem-rotted plants; in two, carnations suffering from other diseases. Since we have seldom visited a carnation greenhouse without finding some stem-rotted plants, we believe the lack of material could not have accounted for the above facts. Such material and replies as we have received, however, seem to indicate that this disease is fairly well distributed over the state and we know from other publications that it is found in most carnation beds throughout the United States.

In making an investigation of this disease it was thought best to study the fungus causing the disease and to learn something of its methods of attack before making any suggestions concerning possible methods of control, for only too often superficial studies lead to recommendations to growers which are not only impracticable but are often harmful. No suggestions concerning the control of this disease will be made by us in this report, aside from merely sanitary precautions which every careful grower should observe.

Fungus is in the Soil.

The organism which causes this disease is a fungus. Fungi are plants, just as the carnation is a plant, but they are lower forms of plant life. We are all familiar with the rusts, the mildews and molds, all of which are fungi. This particular fungus lives in the soil and may thus live for years without causing any trouble. It is very abundant in the soil and undoubtedly is present in most greenhouse bench soils. The question naturally arises: If this fungus is so universally present how can we raise any plants at all, since it surrounds all the plants in the bench? There are a number of factors involved in the answer to this question and our experiments are not yet completed along this line.

An experiment to prove that this fungus was the real cause of the disease was undertaken. This experiment showed that when the stem below the soil is injured so as to expose a portion of the stem beneath the bark and the fungus placed in contact with this exposed area, then the plants always die from the typical stem-rot disease. On the other hand, if plants are so injured and no fungus is added to the soil the wound heals over and in a few weeks only a callus can be seen at this point. If the fungus was put in direct contact with a healthy, uninjured stem it was found that about seventy-five per cent of the plants died from typical stem-rot, while only twenty-five per cent remained healthy. But in this case the fungus was very much longer in attacking the stem than when it was injured.

These plants were old plants and in vigorous condition, but the soil was kept a little damper than in the benches under ordinary cultural conditions. In the few cases where we have merely placed the fungus in the neighborhood of the plant, but not in actual contact with the stem, we have found infection takes place only rarely. Thus it is evident that in the case of plants brought from the field into the greenhouse bench any injury to the stem, a bruise or cut, makes this plant all the more easily attacked by this fungus. We believe that this partly accounts for the rather heavy loss from stem-rot which is usually experienced for a few weeks in the fall when the plants are brought into the house. Other factors, such as shade and damp soil, both favorable for a rapid and vigorous growth of the fungus, have their influence also during this period.

Rotted Plants Good Pastures.

Our experiments further show that when a plant suffers from stem-rot it is an indication that the fungus is abundant in that neighborhood. Further, a rotted plant is a good pasture for the fungus, upon which it can gain renewed energy and from which it grows out into the surrounding soil in greater abundance and renewed vigor. For this reason plants attacked by the stem-rot fungus should be immediately dug up, the soil in the area up to the neighboring plants should be carefully removed and taken entirely out of the house. Very often several plants adjacent in the bench are seen to follow a single stem-rotted plant. This may often be prevented by the above treatment. Further, moisture is necessary for a rapid spread of this fungus. In the drip of an angle in one of the station greenhouses four plants were seen to follow each other in rapid succession, all dying within the course of two weeks. Experiments in the laboratory confirm these observations in nature.

There is one peculiar condition in the life history of this fungus that is of such great economical importance that we will lay especial stress upon it at this time. This fungus, so far as we know now, never produces spores. Spores are the seed of fungi, which are usually much more resistant to drying, freezing and other adverse conditions than the vegetative part of the fungus. Just as you keep your seed over winter in a dry condition which would be fatal to the plant, so the sports of the fungi are able to pass long periods of drought and are again able to germinate when placed in moist conditions. Furthermore, these spores or seeds are usually produced on the aerial part of the plant, so that the drafts of air scatter thousands of them throughout the house or over the field. Also they are caught on the hands or tools of the workman or on the bodies of insects and so spread abroad to infect other plants.

The Way Rust Spreads.

This is the way the rust is spread—the red masses seen on the leaves consisting of thousands of spores. Also the dry stem-rot, the spores of which form a pink mass, is spread in this manner. But in the case of the Rhizoctonia or wet stem-rot no such seed is produced, and while it is always advisable to use care in removing a plant from the house, no great precautions are actually necessary in the case of this disease. As mentioned before, the removal of as much soil as possible along with the rotted plant is the essential precaution. The fungus spreads by growing through the soil. But this fungus has certain bodies which take the place of the spores in some particulars. If the stalk of a stem-rotted plant is carefully examined, many little black or purple specks may sometimes be observed in the crevices of the bark or just under this bark next to the "wood" of the plant. These specks vary in size from half the size of a pin head to a flat cushion-like mass one-fourth inch in diameter. These bodies, called sclerotia, are made up of more or less resistant cells which have the power of germination just as do the spores. They are often found in the soil independent of the plant and may here be much larger than those next the stem of a plant. These bodies are in a resting condition and do not germinate except in the presence of abundant moisture. To determine just how resistant these bodies are to drying, heat and chemical reagents is the purpose of a series of experiments now being carried out in our laboratory, but not yet completed. Two things are established beyond any doubt whatever: First, the cells of these bodies will not germinate after drying in the open air for several weeks; second, freezing has no harmful effect on them, since they will germinate after being frozen for several days.

Among other experiments, we have attempted to determine the effect of this fungus upon cuttings. In this experiment the sand was thoroughly inoculated with the fungus shortly before the cuttings were introduced. Cuttings placed in such sand were at once attacked at the cut surface and on the stem where the leaves had been stripped from the node. No chance is given for the formation of a callus or of rootlets, so that the cutting soon wilts and dies, resembling in external appearance those cuttings which are not firmly fixed in the sand and therefore wilt in a few days after being placed. Upon closer examination, however, the brown threads of the fungus can be seen covering the lower part of the cutting and often a sclerotium is formed on the cut end of the plant.

It is well known that this fungus often causes damping off of various seedlings, but what part it plays in the damping off of carnation cuttings is yet to be determined. We will be especially glad to receive cuttings suffering from the effect of the "cutting bench fungus" or "damping off." There are several kinds of fungi described as the "cutting bed fungus" and we are anxious to determine what forms are most harmful in this state.

Experiments in Progress.

In concluding our report on this particular disease we will mention a few of the experiments which are being carried out but not yet complete.

1. A determination of the resistance of the sclerotia to various physical and chemical agents.
2. Effect of various methods of soil sterilization both upon the carnation plant itself and upon the fungus. It may be said in this connection that sterilization by steam easily kills the fungus in the soil, but so changes the soil that the carnation does not make a normal growth. It is expected that other methods of soil sterilization will overcome this difficulty.
3. Various strains of this fungus taken from plants other than the carnation are to be tested in regard to their effect upon the carnation.
4. The infectious power of this fungus upon the carnation in various stages of its growth is being investigated.
5. The various physical conditions supposed to increase the virulence of this fungus or the susceptibility of the plant will be considered in a series of experiments.

6. A continuation and duplication of the experiments mentioned in the body of this paper is considered necessary.

Aside from the wet stem-rot of carnations which has taken most of our time, we have undertaken minor investigations on less important carnation diseases.

[To be concluded.]

DAUTS' CARNATION HOUSE.

The accompanying illustration shows one of the carnation houses of Daut Bros., Decatur, Ill., who are successors to Mrs. Katherine Daut. This house was planted July 5 and the photograph taken December 20, 1911. They grow all the Enchantress varieties, Beacon, Victory and Afterglow. Washington, they say, has proved all that was claimed for it and they will plant it in the place of Afterglow next season. Their place consists of ten houses, 35,000 feet of glass. They grow a general line of cut flowers and potted plants for retail trade, for which they find ready sale at their store at 112 East Prairie street.

WASHINGTON CLUB MEETING.

The Florists' Club of Washington, in connection with the regular March meeting, held an election of officers for the ensuing year. Outside of the position of trustee, for which there were a number of candidates, there was little or no contest. The results were as follows: President, David J. Grillbortzer; vice-president, Otto Bauer; secretary, O. A. C. Oehmler; treasurer, William F. Gude; trustees, George Cooke and George Fields.

A report was rendered regarding the coöperation of the club to be given Miss Sipe, who is endeavoring to get the 55,000 public school children interested in the growing of flowers. She recently held a voting contest in which the children endeavored to pick out some flower to be grown in front yards and waste places, in window boxes, etc. They naturally selected roses or carnations, neither of which is suitable for the purpose. Another contest resulted in the nasturtium being the favorite and this flower was adopted as the flower for the District of Columbia for the year 1912. It was then suggested that suitable prizes be offered in this connection and the committee was instructed to use its judgment in this respect. It is believed that this action on the part of Miss Sipe and the work now to be done by the committee and the club will result in considerable advertising for the benefit of the latter.

At the request of the entertainment committee, of which N. L. Hammer is chairman, William F. Stewart, of the Department of Agriculture, addressed the members on the subject of "Carnation Breeding." His lecture was an interesting one and by his consent, from time to time during his talk, questions regarding the various phases of carnation breeding were asked him.

Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., who came to Washington with other visitors, spoke on the coming convention. He asked the support of all and requested that a goodly delegation attend from Washington and that they have the applications of a number of new members. He was heartily greeted, as was Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn. Mr. Pierson got after the retailers hammer and tongs. He told them they were not progressive enough—in common with the retailers of other cities. "The growers are buying glass, because glass is cheap; they are erecting houses and are producing additional stock. The retailers cry 'overproduction,' instead of creating a demand for the additional flowers produced." He referred to the work of Miss Sipe and the action of the florists in that connection and said that was the right kind of a spirit to show. He further recommended the holding of flower shows to awaken public interest in flowers and condemned the present practice of wasting considerable time at elections of the S. A. F. "Use a mail ballot and utilize the balance of the time in the holding of the largest flower show ever," he said.

Prof. Norton, of the Department of Agriculture, displayed a quantity of asparagus, which included specimens sent to the department by agents in foreign countries. He told of the experiments now being carried on with a view to their introduction and use in this country to take the place of Asparagus plumosus and other greens now used in decorations.

The entertainment of the evening having been concluded, the members were invited to view the carnation and rose exhibit which had been furnished. In the large room at the rear of the store of Gude Bros. Co. were shown many of the season's latest. The largest exhibit was made by the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., which included Princess Charming, a light pink carnation, grown by E. A. Stroud, Strafford, Pa.; Benora, variegated, from Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.; Mrs. C. W. Ward, from Dauphin Bros., Washington, D. C.; William Eccles, a red, by Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y.; Comfort, from S. M. Merwarth & Bros., Easton, Pa.; No. 618, a white seedling, from Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., and Wodenethe, an exceptionally fragrant variety, by Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J. Alex B. Garden exhibited Gloriosa and Enchantress, grown by A. F. Faulkner, both of which received commendation, and the Department of Agriculture had a fine display of seedling carnations of various colors.

The roses included Killarney Queen, the Double White Killarney and Lady Hillingdon, shown by A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Golden Gate and Radiance, by Gude Bros. Co.; Cardinal and Mrs. Taft, by Washington Florists' Co., and Stockton & Howe, of Princeton, N. J., exhibited Princeton through Pennoek-Meehan.

The display made by the Department of Agriculture of amaryllis, blossoms from seventeen months old bulbs, in all colors, was exceptionally fine.

The only non-grower exhibiting was George Cooke, who sent in a display of spring flowers which were worthy of commendation.

While partaking of the refreshments which had been provided, the members of the club and their guests discussed the exhibit and various other matters of interest.

The out-of-town guests were Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Jesse King, Mt. Airy, Md., and Messrs. Wagner and Hamilton, of Baltimore, Md.

ANOTHER LUDWIG.

Gilbert Ludwig, whose photograph is reproduced herewith, is with the old firm of Gustav & J. W. Ludwig Floral Co., of Pittsburgh, where he has assisted in the general business management since he graduated from the academic department of the Pittsburgh high school eight months ago. Gilbert Ludwig is the son of Gustav Ludwig, and has the training that should help him in making a name for himself.

Rochester, N. H.—It is reported that David Chalmers, while at work recently in one of his greenhouses, was suddenly taken ill and fell, striking his head and injuring two blood vessels.

A FLATBUSH RANGE.

The accompanying illustration was made from a photograph of what was originally Charles Zeller's range and homestead, at 442 Clarkson street, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y. The property now belongs to Louis Schmutz and is under the management of Louis Schmutz, Jr. The greenhouses are one of the sources of plant supply for the MacNiff Horticultural Co., of which Mr. Schmutz is secretary. NEW YORK.

The Market.

The end of last week was suggestive of spring. Saturday the street merchants were out in swarms and the department stores stocked up heavily, taking away from the congested wholesale market many wagon loads of flowers. Sunday was too chilly for the flower wearing promenaders and the week opened with the temperature below freezing.

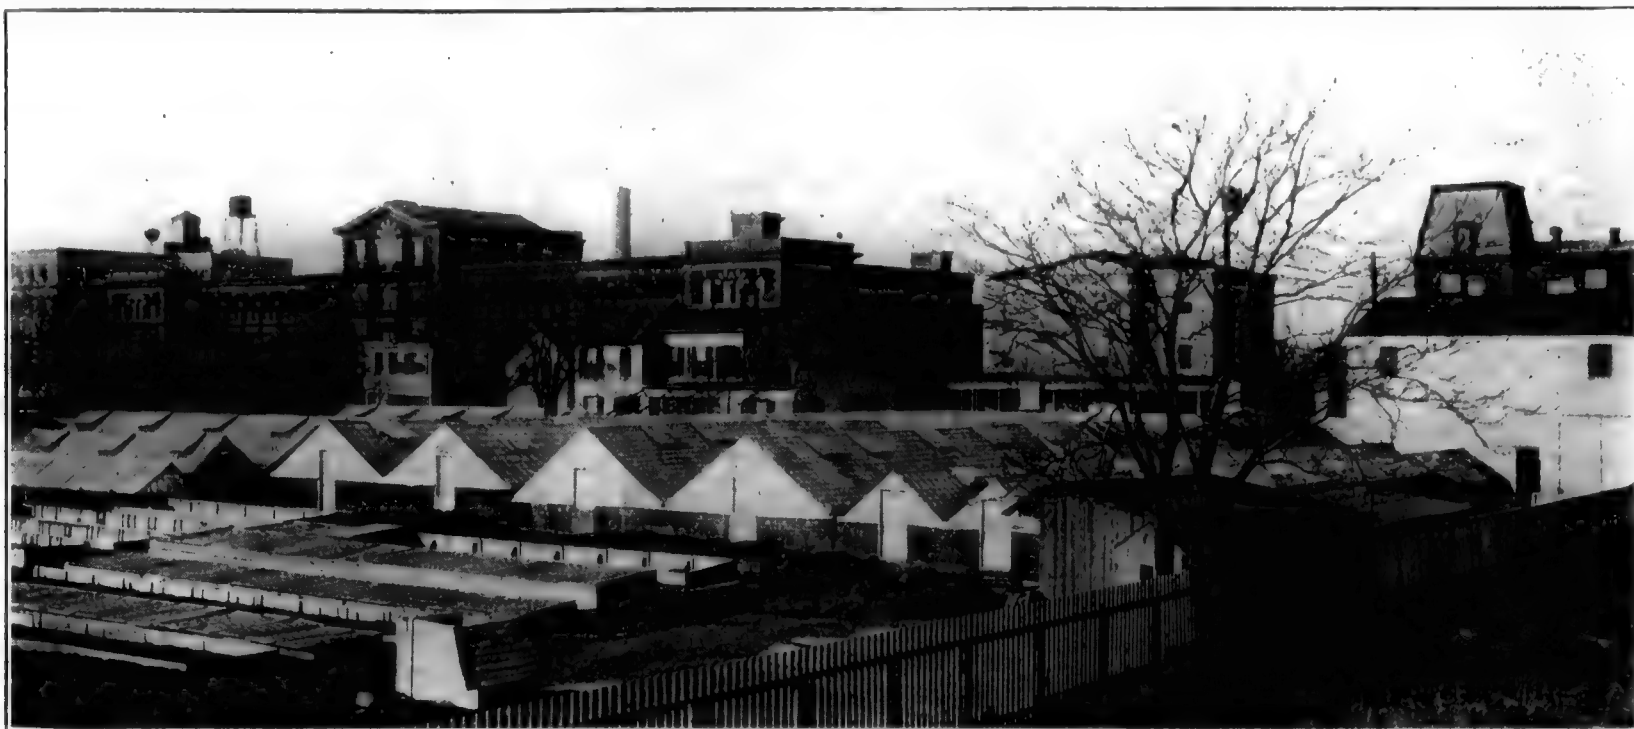

The greatest slump last week was felt in American Beauties. Values commenced to fall March 3 and they went down steadily until March 9; the highest bid was 25 cents for the best of them. Such a rapid tumble had never been seen here and, with the anchor of the market destroyed, prices of everything followed. Lent must be of stronger influence than for years. There is an abundance of every variety of tea roses, even the novelties increasing in quantity. All values have fallen and the price accepted for the lower grade is unmentionable. Carnations do not go above $2 per hundred, even for the novelties, and grand stock has sold as low as $10 per thousand; ordinary stock is disposed of at 50 cents per hundred and under. Lilies were sold as low as 2 cents March 9 and 6 cents has been top for a long time. Contracts for Easter have been made at 10 cents. The supply will be large. There is no possibility of any shortage.

There is no decrease in the arrivals of bulbous stock and prices have not changed. Daisies, sweet peas, mignonette and spring flowers are in every wholesale window. Smilax is bringing better prices. Gardenias are not overabundant. Orchids sell at from 40 cents down. There are a dozen varieties to select from, and the demand is light.

Nothing of special importance in weddings or banquets is on the program. The leading retailers seem to absorb whatever of profit occurs. It has been a hard season for the majority. Many of the smaller establishments are anxiously holding on for an Easter salvation. It has been about as hard sledding for the most of them as Capt. Amundsen experienced on his trip to the south pole.

Club Meeting.

The attendance at the club meeting March 11 was about 100, President Manda in the chair. The following were elected to membership: Peter Buerlein, Oscar Boehler, J. A. Valentine, F. W. Armitage, F. B. Abrams, Julius Chevalley, Wm. F. Kasting, Wm. Nicholson, Jr., Richard Vincent, Jr., Benjamin A. Snyder, Frederick Smith, George Cotsonas, William C. Otte, F. C. Scherer, Max Richter, Frank Whitney, William Sefton, W. N. Rudd, Patrick Welch, George H. Mustoe. Applications were received from John A. Payne, John McArthur, B. H. Goodsell, William Tricker, A. M. Reider, Louis Millett, A. Embury, J. H. Bockmann, Ellwood Brandt, Thos. Roland, W. Rehm, E. B. Ware, Richard Hughes, Geo. T. Laird, Arthur Cockcroft, Wallace R. Pierson, Phil Arzberger, J. F. Wier, Hugo F. Jahn, C. Vermeulin and Philip Cox.

Chairman Hendrickson announced the April meeting, to be known as sweet pea and plant night and suggested a ladies' night for May. Chairman Kessler reported fine prospects for the annual outing.

The discussion as to the elimination of the silver medal from the club's monthly awards was of general interest, Messrs. Bunyard, Lenker, Miller, Totty and O'Mara participating. It was decided to retain it as the highest honor in the club's repertoire.

The legislative committee of the club was instructed to prepare a letter to be sent to all club members and to the members of the legislature in behalf of the $50,000 appropriation for greenhouses at Ithaca. F. R. Pierson suggested a personal committee and offered to cooperate in the interview with the governor, senators and assemblymen.

A telegram of congratulations and best wishes was sent the Baltimore club during the evening.

Committees were appointed to draw up resolutions on the deaths of Bayard Cutting and Mrs. M. C. Ebel.

The speaker of the evening was Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, who held the close attention of the audience to the close. A standing vote of thanks was accorded the talented speaker. Interesting discussion followed and many questions were answered by Mr. Pierson.

Chairman Rickards and his lieutenants had a seductive program of eats and liquid nourishment, as usual.

Exhibits were as follows:

Brant, Hents Flower Co., Madison, N. J., showed Rose Madison; vote of thanks.
Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass., showed Primula malacoides; certificate of merit.
Edward Towill, Roslyn, Pa., Richmond roses of splendid quality; cultural certificate.
Charles Barson, Ossining, N. Y., staged a dark pink carnation, No. 7, scored 85 points, and a light pink seedling, No. 3, given thanks of club.

John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, showed the double yellow calla; honorable mention.

John Stevenson, Oak Lane, Pa., staged a splendid vase of Mrs. Jardine roses, grown by J. Geiger; cultural certificate.

A. A. McDonald, Somerville, N. J., set up a fine vase of Beauties; cultural certificate.

A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., showed Killarney Queen, scoring 88 points, and Double White Killarney, scoring 87 points; preliminary certificates.

Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., showed Odontoglossum eximium; certificate of merit.

Joseph A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., showed Cattleya Schroederæ alba; certificate of merit.

C. G. Roebbing, Trenton, N. J., sent by his grower, James Goodies, a fine collection of orchids; silver medal.

The Plant Growers' Outing.

The annual jaunt of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers to visit the Long Island establishments took place March 7, with G. Dreyer's place as the rendezvous. The day was ideal, and the sight-seeing auto was full, the overflow trailing in A. L. Miller's machine, that gentleman acting as master of ceremonies. There were present F. Marquardt, of Middle Village; A. L. Miller, of Jamaica; G. Dreyer, of Elmhurst; J. H. Fieser, of North Bergen; Heber J. Ware, of New York; H. Schoelzel, of New Durham; C. W. Scott, of Whitestone; H. Schmidt, of Union Hill; Geo. Scott, of Flatbush; Henry Baumann, H. C. Steinhoff and Oscar Boehler, of West Hoboken; Mr. Lehnig, of Hackensack, and Anton Schultheis, Jr., of College Point, and representatives of the press. J. H. Troy and Geo. Stumpp were discovered engaging their Easter plants on the island, and the Rosery man dismissed his taxi and joined the company.

A splendid dinner was served at Meiderstein's, in Middle Village, and the first look at the Easter plants was made at Dreyer's, where everything was as if on dress parade. Leaving Mr. Dreyer's at 10 a. m., the first stop was at the Knight & Struck heather factory, both of the principals being on the road. The Hinode plant was the second diversion, Mr. Scott having provided against chills and pneumonia. Close at hand is the establishment of Pankok & Schumacher, where Mrs. Sander daisies and Tausendschon and Wedding Bells roses were especially attractive. Mr. Schumacher is in Europe. The next visit was at Louis Dupuy's, where all the stock was excellent. Owing to Mrs. Dupuy's illness, the genial Frenchman was unable to join the fraternity. From Dupuy's to the Schultheis plant factory was the next step. The veteran grower was so busy with customers he was obliged to send the "chip off the old block" along to represent him. Mrs. Schultheis and Miss Schultheis are at Palm Beach. Next was John Miesem's. Owing to the severe illness of his 9-year-old son Mr. Miesem was unable to tour with the party. From Elmhurst to Middle Village was the final run before the dinner, and here the retail and wholesale plant of President Marquardt was inspected. After a much appreciated dinner the big machine started for Jamaica, and the big plant of A. L. Miller was visited. From Miller's to John Scott's through east New York and the boulevards, was the next trip and here and at Peter Wagner's everything was perfection. Then came Louis Schmutz's, Alfred Zeller's and Frank Manker's, and the delightful day came to a close. To describe one of these Long Island establishments is to describe them all, as far as up-to-date-ness and skillfully grown stock is concerned.

March 14 the New Jersey members will be visited.

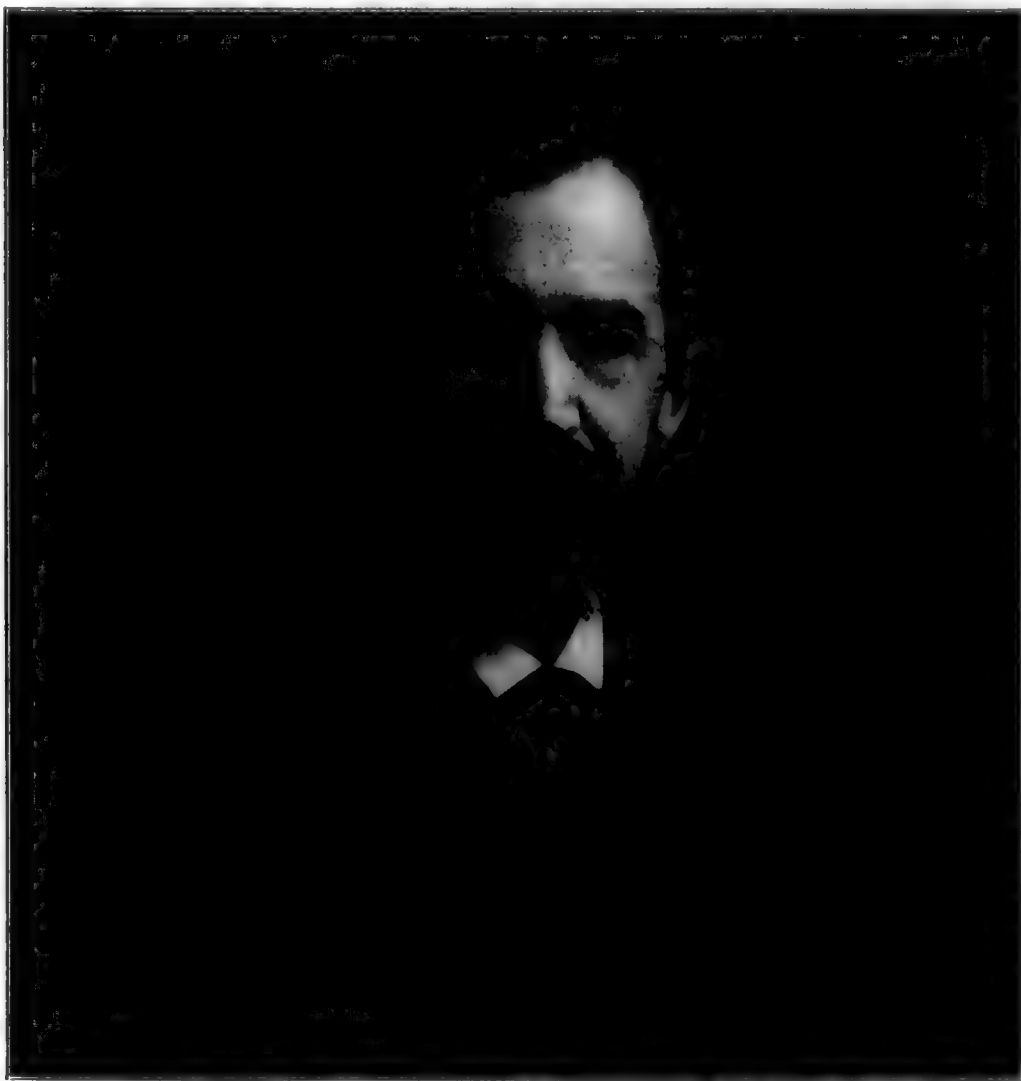

Various Notes.

The Horticultural Society of New York will have an exhibition of orchids and roses, Saturday, March 23, at the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park West and Seventy-seventh street, from 1 to 5 p. m. At 4 p. m. Robert Pyle will deliver his lecture on "Among the Roses in Europe."

Many tables have been engaged for the silver jubilee of the Florists' Club, March 23, and prominent florists from all over the country have responded to the invitation to be with us, President Vincent, of the S. A. F., among them.

Owing to the earlier arrival of a consignment of roses, rhododendrons, boxwood and evergreens than was anticipated, the MacNiff Horticultural Co. held its first auction sale March 12. Sales will continue every Tuesday and Friday until summer.

OBITUARY.

Balthasar Stahl.

Balthasar Stahl, a widely known florist of Philadelphia, died at his home in West Philadelphia on the evening of March 8, after a brief illness. Mr. Stahl was born in Germany a little over sixty-two years ago. He came to this country when 16 years of age, going first to New York. Ten years later, in the Centennial year, he removed to Philadelphia to commence work as a florist. Later he formed a partnership with M. F. LaRoche, under the firm name of LaRoche & Stahl, doing a wholesale and retail cut flower business at the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Chestnut streets, with greenhouses at Collingdale, Pa. The firm did a large business, handling the product of many of the principal growers of the day. Mr. Stahl had charge of the retail department of the business, and by his unfailing courtesy and attention to business won many friends. When the firm dissolved partnership Mr. Stahl opened a retail store at 27 South Eleventh street under his own name, which he continued until the time of his death. A branch store and greenhouses operated by his son, Charles B. Stahl, at Twelfth and Dickinson streets, furnished the foliage plants used in decorating, an important part of the business.

The funeral, which was attended by relatives and friends, took place March 12.

Joseph Heintz.

Joseph Heintz, long prominent in the business life of Jacksonville, Ill., suffered an attack of a paralytic type March 7 and died at midnight March 12.

Joseph Heintz was born January 13, 1838, near Eger on the border line between Bavaria and Austria, and so was 74 years of age at the time of his death. With his parents and three brothers he removed to Toledo, O., in 1856, and four years later he located at Terre Flowers at the Funeral of Nels P. Colberg, Princeton, Ill.

(Designed and Arranged by the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co.)

Haute, Ind., where he engaged in business as a florist and nurseryman. In 1870 he removed to Jacksonville, and March 10 marked the forty-second anniversary of his business career in that city. When he located at Jacksonville he established a florist and nursery business at the present site of the Heintl greenhouses and had his residence there. Later, for a number of years, he had greenhouses on South Main street, and the family residence was on the same property. Subsequently a substantial residence was erected on Greenwood avenue and the business was also transferred to that location.

Mr. Heintl belonged to a family of florists, all of his brothers being engaged in the business and successful. He was a charter member of the Society of American Florists and was widely known. With advancing years he determined to surrender some of his cares and he therefore incorporated the business, associating with him his daughter and three of his sons.

In June, 1866, Mr. Heintl was married in Toledo to Miss Mary Elizabeth Francis, who survives him, with the following children: Frank J., of Jacksonville; Harry, of Toledo; Miss Adele, Edward D., William, Orlando B. and Ernest B., all of Jacksonville. There are two brothers surviving, George A., of Toledo, and John G., of Terre Haute, and two grandchildren, Lorna and Joseph Lawrence, children of Harry Heintl. One son, Albert, died in 1907.

Mr. Heintl had long been identified with lodge life in Jacksonville. He was a member of Harmony lodge No. 3, A. F. & A. M.; Jacksonville chapter, R. & S. M.; Jacksonville council, Hospitaler Commandery, K. T., and Urania lodge, I. O. O. F.

Nels P. Colberg.

Nels P. Colberg, one of the oldest and most respected florists of Illinois, died of pneumonia at his home in Princeton, Ill., on Thursday, February 29, at the age of 69 years. He was born at St. Olaf, Sweden, March 31, 1842. He came to America in 1868 and settled at Princeton. He was the leading florist there until 1901, when he sold his greenhouses to O. Lindstrom and removed to Ottawa, Ill., where he lived for about a year. From there he went to Morris, Ill., where he bought the greenhouses of the Morris Floral Co. On account of his failing health, he sold these in 1909 to Ivend Krohn and Henry Rohmer, and returned to Princeton, where he had since made his home. He is survived by his wife and three children. The offerings of flowers at his funeral were unusually large and fine.

Francis Pentland.

Monday afternoon, March 11, at the ripe old age of 84 years, Francis Pentland, of Lockland, O., was called to his Maker. He was a pioneer of the florists' business of Cincinnati and vicinity. The deceased was born at Edinburgh, Scotland, August 14, 1828. After he grew into young manhood he worked in London a few years. It was soon after 1850 that he came to this country. His first place was with Robert Buist, in Philadelphia. Then he removed to Cincinnati via the Ohio river, taking with him the first Victoria regia in those parts. Upon this plant, while working in 1854 for the Hon. Nicholas Longworth, father of the present congressman, he won with the victoria a diploma at an exposition under the auspices of the O. M. I. The diploma now hangs on the walls of the club rooms of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, of which Mr. Pentland was an honorary member. In 1860 he removed to Lockland and started the plant now occupied by the Bloomhurst Floral Co. Fourteen years ago he sold out to W. K. Partridge and retired from active business. Mr. Pentland, too, was at one time a most prominent member of the Ohio Horticultural Society.

Fred Miesel.

Fred Miesel, of Detroit, Mich., died quite suddenly on Saturday, March 9, at the age of 59 years. He was a charter member of the Detroit Florists' Club and one of the city's pioneer florists. He specialized for some years in cyclamens, begonias, primroses and various potted plants. The business will be continued by his son, Fred Miesel, Jr.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Business last week was good. Design work was plentiful and the usual orders for cut flowers combined to make a busy week. Stock is arriving in good condition, and lots of it. Beauties are seen in small lots. The Darwin tulip is seen in several of the shops and those dealers who have it report an excellent sale for it. Anemones are now arriving and look exceedingly well. Sweet peas and stocks are excellent, also violets. At present there is a large sale for deep red carnations.

Various Notes.

Tidy is showing a fine display of flowering plants in pots and fancy baskets. He reports an excellent trade.

The grip is prevalent throughout the city and the staffs in several of the stores are reduced on this account.

Mrs. Walker, on Avenue road, has sold out and her store has been taken by a tailoring firm.

J. H. Dunlop is showing some of the finest stocks seen here in a long while.

Harry Dillemath and S. A. Frost report an excellent trade in the Spadina College district.

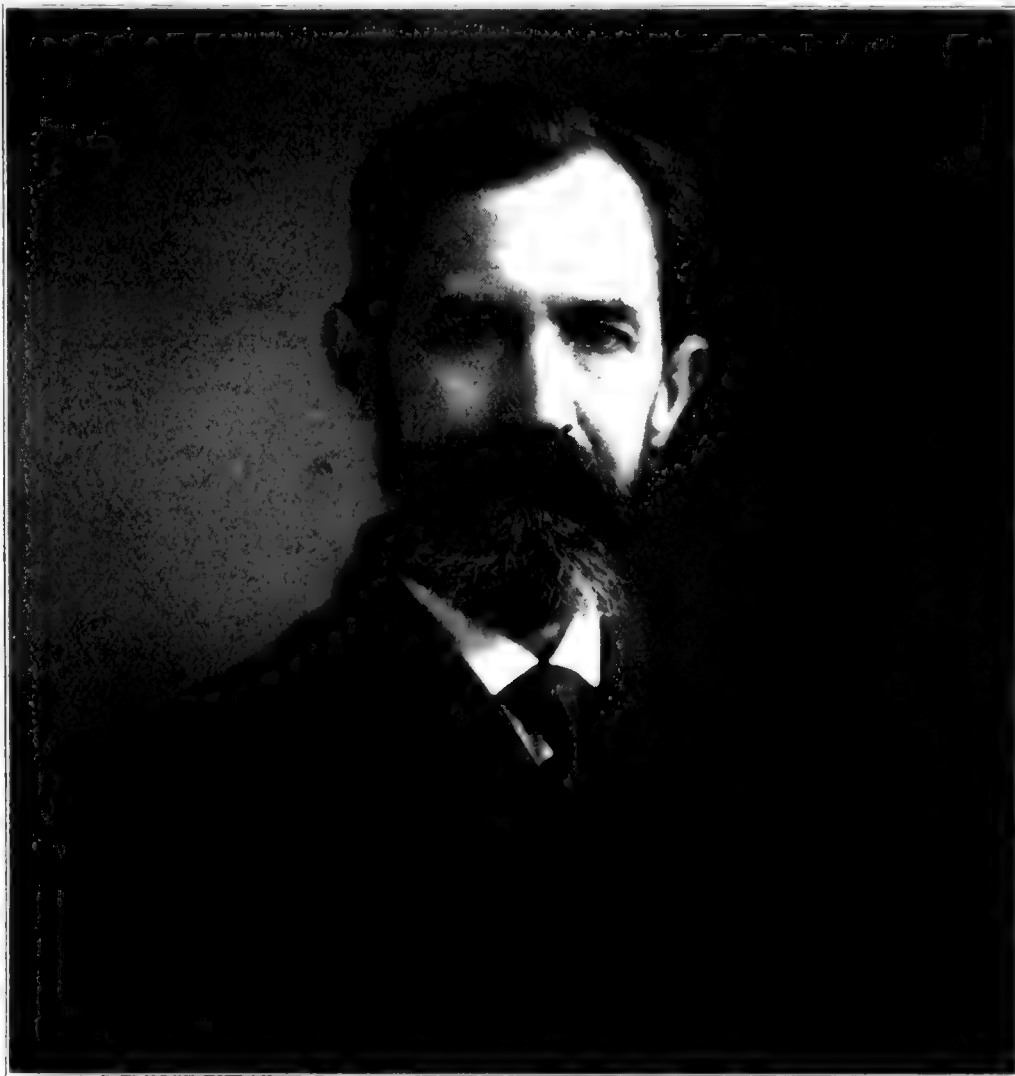

The question of who is to be next park commissioner is still unsettled. There are several applicants, but Chas. Chambers is acting in the meantime.

The plants in the civic greenhouses at Allan gardens and Exhibition park are in fine condition and when the time comes to put them out they will make a good showing. E. A. F.

Ilion, N. Y.—Ward Gordon is rebuilding his greenhouses on Otsego street, which were burned some time ago. When completed, the houses will be much more commodious than the old ones and will enable Mr. Gordon to cope with his increasing business.

Later, for a number of years, he had greenhouses on South Main street, and the family residence was on the same property. Subsequently a substantial residence was erected on Greenwood avenue and the business was also transferred to that location.

Mr. Heintl belonged to a family of florists, all of his brothers being engaged in the business and successful. He was a charter member of the Society of American Florists and was widely known. With advancing years he determined to surrender some of his cares and he therefore incorporated the business, associating with him his daughter and three of his sons.

In June, 1866, Mr. Heintl was married in Toledo to Miss Mary Elizabeth Francis, who survives him, with the following children: Frank J., of Jacksonville; Harry, of Toledo; Miss Adele, Edward D., William, Orlando B. and Ernest B., all of Jacksonville. There are two brothers surviving, George A., of Toledo, and John G., of Terre Haute, and two grandchildren, Lorna and Joseph Lawrence, children of Harry Heintl. One son, Albert, died in 1907.

Mr. Heintl had long been identified with lodge life in Jacksonville. He was a member of Harmony lodge No. 3, A. F. & A. M.; Jacksonville chapter, R. & S. M.; Jacksonville council, Hospitaler Commandery, K. T., and Urania lodge, I. O. O. F.

Nels P. Colberg.

Nels P. Colberg, one of the oldest and most respected florists of Illinois, died of pneumonia at his home in Princeton, Ill., on Thursday, February 29, at the age of 69 years. He was born at St. Olaf, Sweden, March 31, 1842. He came to America in 1868 and settled at Princeton. He was the leading florist there until 1901, when he sold his greenhouses to O. Lindstrom and removed to Ottawa, Ill., where he lived for about a year. From there he went to Morris, Ill., where he bought the greenhouses of the Morris Floral Co. On account of his failing health, he sold these in 1909 to Ivend Krohn and Henry Rohmer, and returned to Princeton, where he had since made his home. He is survived by his wife and three children. The offerings of flowers at his funeral were unusually large and fine.

Francis Pentland.

Monday afternoon, March 11, at the ripe old age of 84 years, Francis Pentland, of Lockland, O., was called to his Maker. He was a pioneer of the florists' business of Cincinnati and vicinity. The deceased was born at Edinburgh, Scotland, August 14, 1828. After he grew into young manhood he worked in London a few years. It was soon after 1850 that he came to this country. His first place was with Robert Buist, in Philadelphia. Then he removed to Cincinnati via the Ohio river, taking with him the first Victoria regia in those parts. Upon this plant, while working in 1854 for the Hon. Nicholas Longworth, father of the present congressman, he won with the victoria a diploma at an exposition under the auspices of the O. M. I. The diploma now hangs on the walls of the club rooms of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, of which Mr. Pentland was an honorary member. In 1860 he removed to Lockland and started the plant now occupied by the Bloomhurst Floral Co. Fourteen years ago he sold out to W. K. Partridge and retired from active business. Mr. Pentland, too, was at one time a most prominent member of the Ohio Horticultural Society.

Fred Miesel.

Fred Miesel, of Detroit, Mich., died quite suddenly on Saturday, March 9, at the age of 59 years. He was a charter member of the Detroit Florists' Club and one of the city's pioneer florists. He specialized for some years in cyclamens, begonias, primroses and various potted plants. The business will be continued by his son, Fred Miesel, Jr.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Business last week was good. Design work was plentiful and the usual orders for cut flowers combined to make a busy week. Stock is arriving in good condition, and lots of it. Beauties are seen in small lots. The Darwin tulip is seen in several of the shops and those dealers who have it report an excellent sale for it. Anemones are now arriving and look exceedingly well. Sweet peas and stocks are excellent, also violets. At present there is a large sale for deep red carnations.

Various Notes.

Tidy is showing a fine display of flowering plants in pots and fancy baskets. He reports an excellent trade.

The grip is prevalent throughout the city and the staffs in several of the stores are reduced on this account.

Mrs. Walker, on Avenue road, has sold out and her store has been taken by a tailoring firm.

J. H. Dunlop is showing some of the finest stocks seen here in a long while.

Harry Dilleuth and S. A. Frost report an excellent trade in the Spadina College district.

The question of who is to be next park commissioner is still unsettled. There are several applicants, but Chas. Chambers is acting in the meantime.

The plants in the civic greenhouses at Allan gardens and Exhibition park are in fine condition and when the time comes to put them out they will make a good showing. E. A. F.

Ilion, N. Y.—Ward Gordon is rebuilding his greenhouses on Otsego street, which were burned some time ago. When completed, the houses will be much more commodious than the old ones and will enable Mr. Gordon to cope with his increasing business.

Gentlemen:

The Florists Review did it all all right. Our two-inch display ad, offering our new gladioli Princeps to the trade, made its first appearance in the F.R. of November 23rd. In December we were corresponding with foreign publishers regarding advertising rates; but, before we had placed our order with them, inquiries came pouring in from home and abroad, therefore we thought best to withdraw our ad from the Review for a let up.
On Jan. 1st we asked you to discontinue our ad until further notice, but there was no let up until all the stock was sold. They did not even leave us any for our retail trade and yet we have to do something which a man hates to do, returning some nice looking checks.

The Review reaches the buyer no matter where he is located.

Yours for Success,

 The Review brings results.

WITH sphagnum so scarce at this date, the design makers are apt to be put to their wits' ends for "stuffing" material before the next season's supply arrives.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
 the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

IN 1886 and 1887 the movement to organize florists into local clubs had its biggest boom, and quarter-century anniversary celebrations therefore are in order. In recent months the Chicago, Boston and St. Louis clubs have celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversaries, March 11 the Baltimore club did the same and March 23 the New York organization will observe its silver jubilee.

THE United States Civil Service Commission has been unable to secure a sufficient number of eligibles qualified in plant pathology for the Department of Agriculture. At the present time there are three vacancies to fill at salaries ranging from $1,200 to $1,600 per annum.
 An examination is to be held April 10 and 11 and those interested should apply to the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

THE investigation of express companies that has been conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission has brought out clearly that the railroads control the express service and operate it in the interest of the railroads rather than in the interest of the public. What we need is a law to divorce the express companies and the railroads; then there will be no such thing as the Wells Fargo turning over about sixty per cent of its gross receipts on that line to the St.
 Paul railroad.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that H. W. Koerner, Station B, R. F. D. No.

 tration the following gladioli. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

 ity; their growth is three feet high, ture, five inches, with five to seven perfect, well opened flowers at one time; very heavy and good substance, with good lasting quality; it has a deep wine color, with a few small dashes of CORRECTION.

W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, asks that it be stated that the prices on caladium bulbs in its advertisement last week, due to a stenographic error (the proofreader was blameless this time), appeared as per 100 and per 1,000 instead of per dozen and per 100.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There has been some improvement in market conditions since last report, but it has been only in the direction of a little larger legitimate demand. A somewhat larger proportion of the daily receipts now are taken into the regular channels of trade, leaving less in the oversupply to be jobbed off or go into the waste. Business is not yet what could be called active, and there is an abundant supply of practically everything now in season. In some lines the supply is the heaviest known at this date, and the quality of most of the stock is excellent. Prices continue to rule extremely low, considering that winter still is with us, the present week opening with an all day's fall of snow.

The least plentiful item is good American Beauty roses. There are considerable quantities now being cut, but most of them are short in stem and poor in flower. A few really first-class long Beauties are being cut, but there is no oversupply of these. The demand, however, is not heavy. Killarneys are excellent; the spring crop is on and better stock could not be asked for. There is an abundant supply of all lengths.
 Roses are decidedly cheaper than they were a few weeks ago, but they are holding their prices better than most other lines of stock. Outside of the Killarneys and Richmond no large

LONG-STEMMED FANCY SWEET PEAS

SPLENDID STOCK—A VERY LARGE SUPPLY

We wish that we had the ability to describe our Peas so that the out-of-town reader could see them as he would if he were to walk into our store—for to see these Peas is to buy them. They are superb. We were the first to offer indoor Sweet Peas in quantity; it was our stock that gave winter Sweet Peas their present popularity, and we have led for quality and quantity season after season, but we never have handled finer Peas, or so many of them as at present. All colors. We can furnish any lengths wanted, up to the special long stems. Acquaint your customers with their fresh fragrance and it will give your sales a nice boost.

KILLARNEYS

White and Pink

Our crop of Killarney and White Killarney is not only large, but the quality is a little extra even for us. It has long been recognized that length for length of stem our Killarneys carried the finest flowers of any in this market. If you are not using our Killarneys, you ought to be, if you want the best.

CARNATIONS

All Colors—Fine Stock

Once a user of our Carnations, always a user is almost always the rule—because ours is the best average large lot of Carnations in this market. There may be others as good, in small lots, but there is no big supply that will compare with ours for quality.

VIOLETS

The Cream of the Crops

Run a special sale on these once a week and you soon will be selling thousands. We can supply in quantity at low prices.

quantities of other varieties are coming on the market.

Carnations have improved in demand, so that prices are not quite so low as they were last week, though they still are far below what such high grade stock usually brings. This week white is held more firmly than the colored varieties, because of the approach of St. Patrick's day and the anticipated large demand for stock for dyeing. With so abundant a supply of first-class carnations there has been extremely little sale for the splits, which have been numerous, and considerable quantities of which have gone to waste, especially of the colored varieties. It has been noted that there is scarcely any demand for the Lawson shade.

Sweet peas are arriving in enormous quantities. The market never before has been so heavily supplied at this date, nor has the quality been so fine. The combination of high quality and large supplies makes it possible to do a big business in peas, but the prices are proving a keen disappointment to the growers. Good peas never before have brought so little money as they are now returning. Pink sells best. Violets have not done any better in the last week than in the fortnight preceding. The best sell fairly well at low prices, and the poorest not at all, with the result that the average returns hardly can afford any cause for cheerfulness at Rhinebeck, and the local singles are doing scarcely any better. Cattleyas have advanced a trifle in price, the supply now being light; there would be a scarcity if there were a brisk demand. Valley continues abundant. Easter lilies are so plentiful that the flowers are selling at the price of the bulb, which does not give much margin for the man whose stock is turning out only one or two flowers per bulb. All bulbous stock is in large supply, but not pressing the market so badly as in the first few days of Lent. Some good snapdragons now are seen, with occasionally a nice lot of mignonette, but miscellaneous flowers are hardly as conspicuous as usual.

A. T. Hey proposed an amendment to the by-laws designating the heading "New Business" as to be the one under which new officers be installed at future January meetings in case the amendment is adopted.

The chairman of several of the special convention committees, constitut-

It was reported that George A. Kuhl, of Pekin, Ill., is sick in the Chicago hospital, and that John Zech, a club member, is ill in a sanitarium, and a remembrance from the club was ordered sent to each. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, was present and made an interesting talk. Other visitors included Harry Balsley, of Detroit, and W. J. Hembreker, Lincoln, Ill.

Various Notes.

Paul Blome, at 1361 North Clark street, reports that he has had a number of large decorations lately and has made up several special tables for north side society people. He has put forth an extra effort to please on these calls, as his success with a valentine table for a north side club was productive of numerous other orders.

George Perdikas, whose main store is at 407 Wabash and who has a branch on Jackson boulevard, has bought the basement store at Wabash avenue and Van Buren street. He claims to be the largest buyer in this market.

Fred Fischer, 2737 North Clark street, is getting his share of funeral work and last week was a busy one. Rush orders started Monday and kept his force on the jump through the week. He has had a Buick delivery car in service for two years and says with the increase of business, brought by its advertising advantages and

Last year the city laid out a park south of Foster avenue, opposite the greenhouses of Peter Reinberg and his brother, George. A plan is under consideration to tear down the greenhouses at the south end of the two ranges and put up two blocks of flats. George Reinberg is said to favor the plan, but the alderman is not yet ready to begin what will in the end be the removal of the entire rose plant to the country place where the carnations have been for several years.

E. A. Kanst, who recently left the south parks after twenty-two years' service to start in the landscaping business for himself, says he has work enough on hand to occupy all his time to July 1. His office is at 5329 Ellis avenue.

The Market.

Business has been good for some time. Roses and carnations are more plentiful, especially carnations, which are in full crop. Roses are coming along more slowly, owing to the continued cloudy winter weather. Tulips, narcissi, daffodils, etc., are plentiful and in good demand.

Various Notes.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The market is disappointing if not disgusting. The volume of good flowers offered is more than necessary for needs. Everything keeps coming in strong, while business last week dropped off and gave us the poorest week since the advent of Lent.

Roses are coming in stronger and better every day. The cut of Bride and Bridesmaid is of best quality. Killarney, too, are good. Richmond sells up every day. Good Beauties do the same. Some of the offerings of the last named, however, have anything but quality to them. Carnations are selling fairly well, but are bringing absolutely no prices. The white usually cleans up nicely while the colored ones trail behind. Bulbous stock and lilies are still in larger supply than necessary. The local growers, on account of the severity of the weather, had considerable trouble in getting their boxes of bulbs inside to force. Sweet peas are still more or less of a glut; only the best ones sell quickly, while many of the poorer grades find their exit via the barrel. There is absolutely no demand for violets. The supply of valley is fair.

Various Notes.

It is a good thing that most of the buyers for the stores are not drinking young men, as they would surely have had the trouble and exertion of signing the pledge. Safely enclosed in a box of Sprenger to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, from Tom Windram, at Leesburg, Fla., was a snake, a real live one, too, which had more colors on its back than the hues of the rainbow. After considerable merriment, at the poor snake's expense, Chas.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market is a shade more encouraging, though perhaps it could be more accurately stated as a shade less depressing than a week ago. Shipping orders, the life of the market, have fallen off; local buyers, except in a few instances, allow longer intervals to elapse between their orders. The weather has been cold and stormy enough to deter many of the enterprising individuals who would otherwise take a chance on the tempting offers seen on all sides. There are too many good flowers coming into the market to meet the requirement. Prices are irregular, with a downward tendency on quantity, particularly where the buyer is not too critical. Violets, especially the New York doubles, and carnations have felt the depressing conditions as much, some say a little more, than other flowers. Tulips are in an unhappy plight, indeed; the dry summer in Europe shows its effect in, some say, ninety-five per cent imperfect flowers. It is generally admitted that the present depression is always the worse. The records show that what the market has been undergoing during the last three weeks is not unusual and that the volume of business is probably fully equal to that of previous years in mid-Lent.

Easter Plants.

Most of the houses of the Robert Craig Co. are filled with Easter plants; there are more plants and better plants than even one familiar with the place expects to see. The varieties and quantities of each give some idea of their respective popularity. The first section in point of numbers is devoted to the lily, the rose and the hydrangea. The lily is entirely Lilium giganteum. They are of excellent height, vigorous and full of buds. The rose, largely of the Wichuraiana type, with a small proportion of hybrids, is cultivated with great success. The leading five varieties are Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Hiawatha and Juanita, considered by M. H. Walsh as his best introduction and an exclusive novelty here. A triumph of culture in these roses is the handle-basket made of strong plants usually grown in 9-inch pots so perfectly trained and flowered that the outline is wonderfully clear. Each basket is formed so that a pot may be dropped inside and held firmly in place. There are also effective umbrellas and globes grown as standards. The Baby Ramblers include all the leading varieties of that type, popular where small plants are desired. Magna Charta is the hybrid par excellence and is well grown.

The hydrangea has come forward into the leading division on its merit. There are four houses, chiefly Otaksa, with a few novelties. They have been brought on without undue haste and show the benefits of cool treatment.

The second division is filled by the azalea, the genista, the rhododendron, the daisy and the spiræa. They were all well represented by fine stock. The principal novelties are Mrs. F. Sander, a wonderfully large flowered daisy, double and pure white; and Pink Pearl, hardly a novelty among rhododendrons, but too scarce to be found in most collections in the past. The genistas are particularly pleasing this season. The third division is filled by foliage plants often used at Easter; Dracæna Massangeana, beautifully colored Dracæna terminalis, Ficus pandurata and all manner of ferns, Boston type. The entire collection is well grown, reflecting credit on Robert A. Craig and Duncan Macaw.

The Scarcity of Dens.

The manager was worried. A number of orders had come in from the family of a railroad magnate, whose death was in all the papers. Most of them called for Dendrobium formosum, a few for white orchids, and they must all be delivered early the next day. Telephones to the wholesale houses in the city had brought runners with all the dens in sight; they had evidently not been received that day or the day before, or even the day before that, and they showed it. The market was absolutely bare of stock of the desired quality. How he blessed the advanced education of the public, so earnestly urged on all his salesmen! Had it not been for this the orders would have been for a wreath, a cross or what-not of white or purple and no one would have thought of Dendrobium formosum. A friend called. The situation was explained; he at once volunteered to go to the nearest flower center, a hundred miles away, in search of dens. Ten minutes later this friend was on the Limited with all the manager's spare cash in his pocket. It was an anxious evening; the designs stood mossed awaiting completion, while the floral artist cleared up every vestige of work possible, awaiting the needed stock. Another friend dropped in. "Oh! I have been over there," he said, "dens are scarcer than here; you can't get them for love or money." The manager was nearly wild. Every form of expedient known in the substituter's art floated through his brain. The telephone bell rang. It was his friend from the distant center. "I have the dens," he said, "all you want and more, at rather less than your limit. I'll be over soon after midnight." The manager felt that life was worth living after all.

Gathering at Bergers'.

There was an informal meeting of floral luminaries at the store of Berger Bros. one day last week that is of more than passing interest. It was purely accidental, no invitations being sent out. Those present were W. W. Crawford, John C. Gracey, Raymond Kester, Paul R. Klingsporn, M. D. Matthews, Bound Brook, N. J.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and William Stevens, Chestnut Hill. Mr. Pierson has the reputation of always saying something worth hearing. On this occasion he said that the growers had made greater strides during the last ten years than had been made in any other business, and that the retailers owed it to themselves and their profession to set aside a portion of their earnings each year to be devoted to advertising in order to broaden their field of usefulness. Mr. Crawford and Mr. Gracey thought that they had earned exemption from such a charge; Mr. Kester looked thoughtfully out of the window and pictured that broad expanse of plate glass "up the street" to which Charles Baxter devotes such untiring attention, while somebody said something about what Joseph Josephs is doing. Mr. Stevens made one of his unanswerable assertions and the meeting adjourned.

appears to be no improvement in sight, although the florists are expecting big things from the Easter trade. Roses and carnations are not in heavy supply and the weather is such that it does not advance the cut materially. The only cut that is overabundant is the lily crop. The sale of spring flowers is rushing, but these are not overabundant, due to the fact that the weather has been too severe to allow the grower to get them in from the outside.

The mornings were divided into two periods, 8:30 to 10 and 10:15 to 11:45; the afternoons into two periods, 2 to 3:30 and 3:45 to 5:15, and the evenings into one commencing at 8 o'clock. During these periods there were from two to six lectures being delivered at one time. There was a printed program and you could take your choice, whether it was lime sulphur as a summer spray, or commercial fattening of poultry, pork production or control of orchard enemies. With one thing I was particularly impressed. It was announced in the opening address that all lectures would be given on time. We found it so. Many of the buildings were considerable distances apart and while there were fifteen minutes between periods, there was a hurrying time to get from one lecture to another, and if not on time we found the lecture had begun. I could not help but compare it with the lack of promptness shown in our meetings of the S. A. F.

Most of the counties of the state were represented by farmers in attendance, and to show how it was appreciated by keen business men, I mention that the Frick Coke Co. had three of its farm managers there learning of better methods of managing their farms.

The subjects were of great variety and embraced such subjects as soil analysis, organic matter, beautifying the home grounds, computing dairy rations, hatching and raising chicks, manures and their economic uses, energy value of feeds, draft of farm ma-life problems, garden irrigation, dairy barn construction, apple culture in Pennsylvania, music for the farm home, peach culture, harness and saddle horses, meadows and pastures, potatoes and potato diseases and many others. It was only possible to hear a part of them, and one had to take his choice. Many of the lectures were repeated, so that if one did not get them at one period there was a chance to get them later. For one whole week they were being delivered and it was remarkable the interest shown in them and the attendance.

The cost of attending is light, as $25 will pay all expenses for the week's outing. The information gained is invaluable and the rest and change from one's labors is of great benefit. It is an old saying, "It is well to get out of sight of the smoke of your own chimney." It is also well to have a change from such steady work as running a florist's business. So well was I pleased with the farmers' week at State College that during the last month I took in farmers' week at Cornell University, where 1,800 of New York's most intelligent farmers came to get new ideas of their business and went home better and wiser men and women.

The man who today does not keep up with the procession of eager and active minds that are engaged in getting a living from the soil will soon be left out of the race.

New Castle, Ind.—Otto L. Benthay has resigned as manager of the Frederick J. Benthay greenhouses and will begin at once the erection of four greenhouses of his own, on ground which he recently purchased on South Fourteenth street. He expects to have at least one house completed and stocked before Memorial day. He will sever his connection with the plant of his cousin, Frederick J. Benthay, of Chicago.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

With the advancement of the season everything has a springlike appearance; longer days and more sunshine are bringing out stock in general, outside as well as inside. Many are taking advantage of the season in preparing their lawns and setting out their rose plants and shrubbery. So far all records have been broken in demand for outside stock. Carnations are overplentiful in all varieties, but roses are a little short in supply. Spring stock of all varieties is in surplus, but afford a large variety of flowers. Sweet peas are to be had in limited quantities and of good quality.

It is unanimously conceded by all that February business was a surprise and far ahead of last year; also far ahead of January.

Various Notes.

F. B. Wright, representing the Wild Rose Nursery Co., Spokane, was a week end caller, securing additional stock.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The long expected rainfall has arrived and everyone welcomed it most cordially. It has proved a boon to outside stock and thousands of narcissi are sent into town daily in consequence. Violets were commencing to show the effects of the dry season before the downpour, and they also have taken a new lease of life. Inside stock of all kinds is up to requirements, with but little excess. Roses are in good supply and of good quality and the same can be said of carnations. Easter lilies, valley and hyacinths are in fair evidence. Freesias are about over for the year and all early varieties of tulips have disappeared from the market. Fruit blossoms and wild flowers are being used in large lots. Potted azaleas are at their best and, from all accounts, there will be plenty for the Easter trade. Business, in comparison with that of last season during Lent, seems to be a shade better, with good prospects for a heavy Easter.

Various Notes.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society gave its annual banquet at the Hotel Fairmount on the evening of March 2. There was a large attendance and a most enjoyable time was had by all.

A visit to the greenhouses of Ferrari Bros. shows a splendid lot of roses in good shape for a heavy Easter cutting.

Robert Miller, recently of New Orleans, is in town and will make an effort to locate himself in this locality if he finds a suitable place for a start in the retail trade.

The Market.

Business has shown a slight improvement over recent conditions. The demand for all kinds of cut flowers has been better, but the prices are none too good yet. Bulb stock has been selling more cheaply this season than ever before; the prices have not been sufficient in some cases to pay the cost of the bulbs and there is not much encouragement to growers to lay out much more money for such poor returns. Carnations are fairly plentiful and in fine condition; the bright sunshine of late has vastly improved their quality. Outside narcissi are now coming in, to add to the joy of the greenhouse growers. Freesias have shown better quality than usual this season. Valley is plentiful, but is not bringing remunerative prices. Roses are selling well, stock of good quality bringing fair prices. Violets are meeting with a ready sale; home-grown stock is now plentiful.

The department stores are conducting special sales of rose plants and nursery stock, as well as spring bedding plants. The class of stock they offer in most cases is of the cheapest grade. In most places the clerks know nothing about the plants they are trying to sell and the public is often misled; this condition does not tend to improve the trade in any way.

Various Notes.

Sam Graff, who was recently called to Columbus, O., owing to the death of his brother, William Graff, has decided to remain in that city. The business which he was conducting successfully on the Marion street viaduct has been purchased by T. G. Niblett, of Green Lake. Mr. Niblett has made a new departure for him, his business previously having been the growing of carnations. He has a most efficient store manager in Eddie O'Neill.

E. Matraia, the Crescent florist, and P. Bertanini, of Queen Ann Hill, have taken a store in the next block to Mr. Matraia's present location, where they intend carrying on a retail business

The residents of Mount Baker Park have resolved to hold a rose show this year. Why not come into line and hold one large show for the whole city and neighborhood? T. W.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The rain that started in with March gave quite an impetus to business in all lines and the florists felt it as soon as anyone. The amount of stock of all kinds that has been pouring into the market is truly remarkable, but it all cleans up and at fair prices. In bulbous stock, daffodils are still the leaders, with hyacinths and tulips running them hard. In daffodils Emperor and Empress have arrived and are beautiful. The northern men still send down their surplus roses, Beauties and fine Bride and Bridesmaid being the best of the importations. In local grown stock My Maryland holds its position and fine stock is shown. Killarney and White Killarney are poor and Radiance seems to hang its head more than ever. Carnations are on the short side. Violets are poor and scentless. Sweet peas keep up fairly well and are useful for all classes of work. Spanish irises are in and gladioli are more plentiful.

In plants there are a few white and colored wistarias that look pretty, though the sales are not heavy. Palms and Boston and Whitmani ferns still have the lead. Greens are on the scarce side, especially long strings of Asparagus plumosus.

Various Notes.

Iris Susiana has caused quite a little interest, being shown in the windows of the Angelus Flower Shop. A fine lot of orchids are always displayed here.

Howard & Smith have invited the Pasadena gardeners to a lunch and general good time at their Montebello nurseries, March 31, together with their wives and sweethearts, and those who know the brand of the Howard & Smith hospitality will not need to be told that an appetite for the good things in life is all that they need to bring with them.

Good business in funeral work and decorations is the report at the Roserie.

At the wedding decorations at Chester place, March 14, Wright's Flower Shop erected a large tent over the garden and the trees were all hung with electric light globes. Daffodils and other flowers were plentifully used to give a springlike effect, and the climbing rose foliage, with Killarney buds inserted, was a pretty idea.

Business is booming at the Freeman-Lewis store. The trade will be sorry to hear of the serious illness of C.

Lewis' mother. She is advanced in years and has suffered a paralytic stroke.

Daffodils still hold the floor at the Los Angeles Flower Market, but Manager Morton has his coat off and they clean up well. One order for 80,000 was filled for a department store for presentation to customers, while trifles of 20,000 are of daily occurrence. Victoria, Emperor, Golden Spur and Trumpet Major are among the best varieties.

The Florists are extremely busy with funeral work. Mrs. Lichtenberg has been absent from the store on account of sickness.

The H. N. Gage Co. is doing a big shipping business. A fine grade of Spanish iris is being handled now.

Creutz & Co. are now shipping elegant tulips and cut lilies to their customers and report a big demand.

On account of the heavy rain there was only a moderate attendance at the March meeting of the Los Angeles Horticultural Society. Mr. Winsel's paper on "Lawns and Lawn Making" was heartily received, however, and caused a lively discussion.

Considerable dissatisfaction is felt in the trade here at the way it has been treated by the management of the land show. They, it appears, wanted a botanical show, but, instead of approaching anyone in the trade, made an appropriation of some $300 to an amateur whose name is frequently before the public on such occasions. He has been asking for assistance from the trade to make and explain his display, but if anyone in the trade wants to make an exhibit he has to pay an exorbitant space rate. It is hardly necessary to say that the nursery trade will not be largely represented.

H. R. Richards.

Eight Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

The Market.

We are slowly emerging from one of the worst gluts the flower market has ever experienced in the lenten season. While the improvement is not marked, it comes as a distinct relief after the last few weeks' experience. The weather has been milder and the street fakers have secured all the flowers they wanted at practically their own prices, but this has helped in some measure to steady conditions. There is no likelihood of an animated market before Easter, as the demand seems entirely inadequate to the heavy receipts during glut periods. Some methods should be devised so that the general buying public could obtain flowers at a moderate cost, which would otherwise go to the rubbish barrels. If it were possible to institute occasional bargain days, those who rarely buy flowers would speedily clean up any surplus.

Roses are much more abundant and from $1 to $6 covers the prices of all but select stock. Carnations, which have been in a parlous condition, are doing a little better, but prices are still much too low to be profitable. Violets are in tremendous supply. An average price is 300 for $1. Some go lower; others as high as 50 cents, but these must be fine. Some superb sweet peas on long stems bring $1.25 to $1.50 per hundred, while some of the short-stemmed stock is worth about these prices per thousand. Bulb stock, which has had a hard road to travel of late, is doing a little better. There is a heavier cut of lilies and callas, with only a light call. English primroses are more plentiful and in favor, as are bachelor's buttons and yellow marguerites. Cattleyas are shortening up, but are ample for the light demand. Gardenias are rather more plentiful. Only a moderate call exists for adiantum and asparagus. Pot plant trade is picking up steadily and leading growers are already pretty well sold out in some lines for Easter.

Pink Delight, Red Prince, a scarlet seedling; Gloriosa, White Wonder and several other seedlings of Mr. Thommen's raising are fine at present.

SWANSON'S, 618 Nicollet Ave.

Shamrocks are a prominent feature in nearly all stores this week. Prices on these at wholesale vary from $3 to $4 per hundred for small pots and up to $10 and $12 for small pans. There is the usual big showing of green carnations on the streets, although some stores also carry them.

E. H. Wilson lectured before the Boston Art Club March 9. March 16 he delivers an illustrated lecture before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on his fourth trip to China.

Visitors last week included W. F. Ross, representing C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; W. R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., and Isaac Bunting, Yokohama, Japan. W. N. Craig.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

It seems that every year the supply of cut flowers becomes abundant about the time Lent sets in, and this year is hardly an exception. This, no doubt, is due to the awakening of nature, which puts new life into vegetation, especially such as is grown under glass during the winter months.

Although there was a good demand for stock last week, the supply was more than sufficient. Consequently, prices have taken a decided drop in a good many instances.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Schulz have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Louise, to Otto Sylvester, Jr., of Oconomowoc, Wis. Otto, Jr., is the eldest son of Otto Sylvester, a florist of that city, and, together with his two brothers, forms the working crew of that establishment, which at one time had no small reputation for fine double violets.

Wm. Zimmermann is a member of the local Eagle Lodge team which will participate in the American Bowling tournament in Chicago, March 19 and 20.

Alex Klokner, of Wauwatosa, is cutting some fine snapdragons these days, which are consigned to Gust. Rusch & Co.

John Zech, of Chicago, who has been troubled with backache, is stopping at the Sacred Heart sanitarium of our city seeking relief; he expects to return home in about a week.

Mrs. A. F. Kellner, who is troubled more or less with rheumatism, is at Waukesha, Wis., taking the mud baths. Mr. Kellner visited there at the end of last week and reports her condition greatly improved.

The J. M. Fox & Son store force was kept busy the best part of Sunday, March 10, with funeral work.

Art Leidiger, of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., is on the sick list.

They came, they saw, they conquered—that is the long and short of it. Fifteen of Chicago's florist bowlers came to Milwaukee, March 10, to roll a friendly game with their local brethren, and they put it all over the local boys in the course of the afternoon. To judge from the way they smiled, sang, etc., one would conclude that they really enjoyed themselves. We admit it was just as it should have been and they can come again.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirtieth annual convention, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1912.

THE Yeager Seed Store has been opened at 2126 Main street, Parsons, Kan.

HOWARD M. EARL, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, enrolled on the sick list in February.

SEVERAL of the Holland bulb exporting firms have established warehouses and offices at Ollioules, the center of the French bulb growing district.

THE situation as regards the supply of seeds is such that much looking about is being done in quest of new districts for seed growing, with a fair prospect that the acreage under seed crops this year will be considerably greater than last season.

AT Rocky Ford, Colo., D. V. Burrell has a collection of envelopes from his seed patrons displayed in his window, representing nearly every section of the globe. The letters are a great curiosity to the people of the town and represent the orders received in three weeks.

THE Binghamton Seed Co., of Binghamton, N. Y., has moved from 161 Water street to 135 Court street. The new store is centrally located, both for city and country trade, and is well equipped and stocked. The firm owns and operates the Tulley greenhouses, on Spring Forest avenue.

THE Japanese bulb exporters still are making shipments of the 1911 crop of lily bulbs, although the exports from January 14 to February 13, 1912, amounted to only 150 cases, shipped as follows: By Yokohama Nursery Co., 67 cases; Arai Shoten, 82; Shiari Shoten, 1. During the month considerable quantities of roots and plants were exported.

REPRESENTATIVE C. A. LOBECK, of Nebraska, has introduced into Congress a bill providing for the appropriation of $100,000 for the purchase and special distribution of field and garden seeds in the western, southwestern and northwestern states, where, on account of the drought last year, the crops were a failure. These seeds are to be distributed at the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture and are to be made available immediately following the passage of the bill.

Owing to the backward season in California, all Winter and late Sweet Pea Seed will be late in maturing. To avoid late deliveries, I will send all early orders of Winter Sweet Pea Seed directly from our ranch in Lompoc, Cal. These will reach my farthest customers not later than August 10th, saving over four weeks' time. Send all letters of importance to Lompoc, Cal. We will have all the leading colors and many novelties. Orders booked now. New complete list will be sent out in May.

Mt. Airy, Md., Feb. 26, 1912.

Dear Sir:—We have been cutting very fine peas this season from your stock. Stems 18 and 20 inches, with 3, 4 and 5 flowers, and in several instances with 6 flowers to a stem. You deserve and receive great honor from the trade for bringing Winter flowering Sweet Peas to their present high position in the market. You have already done more for the florist than the great Burbank will ever do.

JESSE P. KING.

We have also only the best Spencer and Unwin late Sweet Pea Seed on hand now, also other Florists' flower seed. Send for list.

two inches within the week. It has saved many of the flower seed crops.—A. C. Zvolanek.

Santa Ana, Cal., March 7.—Everybody is rejoicing that rains have come and more are promised by the fore-caster. If sufficient moisture falls soon the bean and most crops in this section are assured. Barley can not be much of a crop. Some fields will make a fair yield, but as a whole this crop will be extremely short. Some seed crops are already seriously cut into, but all those which are yet to be planted or which have been under irrigation should make full crops. The rains are falling slowly but continuously, so that the earth absorbs it all.—Haven Seed Co.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 8.—We are pleased to advise that we are having a series of storms during the last three days, which have given relief to the seed growers and farmers in general throughout the state, it being the first rain of any consequence since March 4, 1911. If we had received a little more early in the season it would have made prospects better. They are now extremely late and have made no growth, so we fear they will not blossom and set in time to escape the hot weather in the summer-time, which is always detrimental to this crop. Although these rains are enabling us to commence operations in beans, we have not had sufficient for the season to assure crops on Lima and pole beans, and it will be difficult to determine the future of the bean crop until May.—John Bodger & Sons Co.

ENID, - OKLAHOMA

Are you able to stand on your own pins in the business world or do you belong to the common herd? There are so many of the common kind—followers—dependent on some leader. These dependents are business weaklings—the kind that can't keep anything to themselves—regular old women in long trousers—pewee tattlers and pishmish gabblers. No good on earth except to fill in. Some are mere remittance men—like college sissies; and, by the way, many universities produce just such men—herd men. They dress alike, all have the same mannerisms, the same turn-up to their trousers and even the same tilt to their hat, showing their gray matter is lop-sided. Just the most common clay on earth assisted by a tincture of learning grafted from the think-tank of Professors when their little minds happen to be in a receptive mood and not short-circuited by Anheuser-Busch. Every man should have a college education in order that he may know its worthlessness. Now we come to the independent man—those few and far between—leaders of the herd men; those above the mere commercial riff-raff—men who reason before they act. There are some in the florist business as in other lines, and there will be more each year, leaders in their line whom the other florists come tumbling after. For instance, if a dozen growers see one making money on Dutch bulbs in any one season, about eleven out of the lot, assisted by the Hollanders, will jump right in up to their neck the next season—eleven herd men following on. Of course this makes a glut and none will profit by it. They don't stop to reason. The twelfth man uses his brains. Reason out what you want in any given article, investigate the source of supply, the final and real cost before you invest, and remember the real profit in your business is the difference between the money you pay out and the money which finds its way back to your bank—not merely on your books, but in your bank. In buying lily bulbs and French bulbs especially, you need Horseshoe Brand, because they are absolutely the best produced. None better can be had. Prices reasonable. Ask for the Book of Bulbology.

the J. C. Robinson Seed Co., of Waterloo, Neb., has written to Secretary Monroe, of the Chamber of Commerce, asking his assistance in getting in touch with farmers in this valley who will raise seed. The company wishes to secure pea, watermelon, cucumber, pumpkin, Hubbard squash, onion and other seeds, and states that any farmer who will send his name and address and acreage will receive a blank contract for raising seed at a fair price.

"Montana alfalfa seed has gained a wide reputation not only in the United States but practically all over the world, being used as a standard by many of the leading seed dealers in this country, and it has been demonstrated that many other kinds of seeds can be raised in this state with equal success and of as high quality."

CONDITIONS IN CALIFORNIA.

In last week's issue of The Review general rains were reported over the California seed growing districts, according to telegrams received March 6. Conditions therefore are not what they were when the following letters were written:

San Jose, Cal., March 4.—With regard to weather conditions in California, to begin with, we have had only a fraction over four inches of rain in the Santa Clara valley. This is far below a normal fall. Still, the seed ranches through this section are looking remarkably well, owing to the fact that the ground is in a high state of cultivation. The district about San Juan and Hollister seems to have suffered more from the drought than this particular section. Unless rain falls in that locality in the near future, crops will be below average. Conditions at this writing are favorable for rain.—Braslan Seed Growers' Co.

Gilroy, Cal., March 5.—Concerning the conditions of 1912 crop, will say that so far this winter we have only received about thirty per cent of our normal rainfall to date, and about twenty-five per cent of the rainfall we had to date last year. The crop has been at a standstill for several months, as there has been no moisture in the ground, and the weather has been cold and frosty. I have had my ranches looking much better in early January

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1912

This is the most complete catalog published for MARKET GARDENERS, TRUCKERS and FLORISTS. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye O placed after what is known to be the best. In addition full descriptions are given of many new and most valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1912 contains 148 pages with hundreds of half-tone and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalog we have condensed an experience of thirty-four years, both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market) you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalog, but if you are a private planter please do not ask for a copy, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Trucker and Florist.

than they do today. The conditions are serious, and I understand that the growers have closed their contract books, for it is entirely out of the question to accept business when there is no possible chance of filling same. We are having a slight disturbance today, and we hope and trust we shall get a few inches of rain, which will brighten up prospects considerably. It is now March 5 and the crop should have been fairly well advanced by this time of the season, but I must say there is hardly any growth whatever, and unless it rains in the near future there will be but little seed shipped out of the state this fall.—Waldo Rohnert.

Vegetable Forcing.

WANTS A GOOD HEAD LETTUCE.

Can you tell me whether there is a more effective, simple remedy for aphids than tobacco smoke? There is a big demand for head lettuce in this part of Idaho, but I have not been able to get a good greenhouse variety. Can you suggest a good variety? I have had splendid success with the Grand Rapids lettuce, but the market calls for head lettuce.

M. N. A.

Try Aphid Punk fumigating papers; they will give satisfaction. Other brands may be good, but I know this brand is O. K.; it will kill the aphids quickly. Grand Rapids lettuce pays best, but you should be able to grow the Big Boston hothouse strain. It does better, however, on solid beds than on raised benches and takes a little longer to mature than leaf lettuce.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

ORCHARD planting in the Pacific north-west has not held up to the highwater mark.

THE Hawks Nursery Co., of Wauwatosa, Wis., has purchased a 40-acre tract known as the old Gilbert farm, near North avenue, at the west limits of the town.

PEYTON BROS. & BARNES, proprietors of the Boonville Nurseries, at Boonville, Mo., have added a real estate department to their business, being convinced that the real estate and nursery trades can be carried on together with advantage to both.

THE Lewis & Valentine Co. has been incorporated at East Rockaway, N. Y., with a capital of $50,000, for the purpose of carrying on a general nursery business, landscape gardening, etc. The incorporators are H. C. Lewis, R. K. Valentine and A. A. Lewis.

At a recent meeting of the stockholders of the Salt Lake Nursery Co., Salt Lake, Utah, the following officers were chosen: President and manager, Martin Christopher; vice-president and assistant manager, William J. Horne; secretary and treasurer, Elias A. Smith; additional director, Lorilla L. Horne.

NURSEYMEN in the north are not particularly pleased with the prospect. Here it is the middle of March, with deep snow on the ground in many sections and the certainty that frost will not be out of the soil for some time yet, for it went deep this winter. A late start usually means a short planting season.

FROM the South Dakota Agricultural Experiment Station Prof. N. E. Hansen is this season introducing several new hardy fruits and a new hybrid rose.

THE Mount Arbor Nursery, of Shenandoah, Ia., has filed objections with the state board of horticulture at Laramie, Wyo., against the payment of the state license.

THE stockholders of the Alabama Nursery Co., at Huntsville, Ala., have issued a formal notice of the dissolution of the corporation. Herbert S. Chase, it is said, will hereafter be the sole proprietor of the business, having purchased the interests of Ethan A. Chase, Charles O. Rolfe and Earl Roach, the other stockholders.

J. H. SETTLEMIER, of Woodburn, Ore., is critically ill with organic heart trouble. Mr. Settlemier twice represented Marion county in the legislature, but is more widely known as the owner of the Settlemier nurseries, of Woodburn. In the nursery business Mr. Settlemier accumulated a fortune estimated at more than a half million dollars. Until within the last few months he has enjoyed excellent health and has been living in Portland.

THE nursery business in the southwest this season has enjoyed its usual boom.

J. L. FARMER, nurseryman at Pulaski, N. Y., has issued a book of 100 pages, entitled "The New Strawberry Culture and Fall Bearing Strawberries," half "how to" and half advertisement.

A STANDARD PACKAGE BILL.

high priced cut flower city, but that the last year has proved it to be one of the cheapest cities in the country in which to buy flowers, and all this notwithstanding the immense amount of coal consumed this winter and the higher price of greenhouse labor than in former years. But with the greater amount of flowers grown here and the quantities brought in by the commission men, prices must be made low in order to dispose of the stock.

The last week was a record-breaker for the season for the amount of stock disposed of; the prices were correspondingly low and, of course, the growers are the sufferers. The retailers all seem to be doing something. Several good funerals helped to use up a good deal of fine stock, but they had no trouble securing all they wanted.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, March 5, with a large attendance. Two new members were elected and twenty new names were proposed for membership—a good record for President E. C. Ludwig on his first night in the chair.

Neil McCallum, the sage of the club, talked on "Australian Plants," with which some twenty years in that country made him quite familiar. The talk was interesting and instructive. Some fine Primula obconica plants from R. H. Boggs' conservatories, cinerarias from the Phipps conservatories and sweet peas from the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. were the exhibits for the evening.

Arrangements are being made for another social evening, to include our wives and sweethearts. Prof. John A. Brashear will give his lecture on flowers, with stereopticon views, and Mr. Brashear is famous in both this country and Europe. Further information will be given later.

Various Notes.

A visit was made last week to the new greenhouse plant of P. S. Randolph, at Verona, Pa. Mr. Randolph bought a 47-acre farm, on which he has erected a bungalow, two barns, a water tower and seven greenhouses of Lord & Burnham construction. Six of the greenhouses are each 20x110; the other is 50x200. This first season he is growing lilies, roses, hydrangeas and gardenias in pots. He is also experimenting with sweet peas and Prince of Wales violets, with which he is meeting with great success. The balance of his space is filled with azaleas, crotons and ferns. He built this place largely to give his sons, who are quite young, an opportunity to demonstrate their ability to conduct such a plant, and he has reason to be proud of their success.

The A. W. Smith Co. has arranged a Dutch scene in one of its large windows, using a space 20x30 feet. The background is a painted Dutch scene, reflecting credit on the artist, and the garden is planted in hyacinths and tulips; the lawn is grass which was grown in pans for the purpose, with gravel walks. The garden is surrounded by a concrete wall. As it is an unusually large window display and the general effect is not overdone, it is attracting crowds all day long.

Mike Kronis, who has the flower stand in the Union depot, has opened a new stand in the East Liberty station. Hoo-Hoo.

Gustav & Julius W. Ludwig had on show at the last club meeting three beautiful obconicas. They were grown in Mr. Boggs' conservatory in Sewickley and were acknowledged by the growers and members of the club to be the best ever. Mr. Jones, of Schenley park, said they were the most beautiful primroses that he had ever seen. Each of the plants was about a year old and had no less than twenty-five clusters, each cluster bearing about ten to fifteen flowers. The sight was gorgeous and a certificate of merit was unanimously awarded. Gustav & Julius W. Ludwig are now preparing for the big Easter rush. Business in the Allegheny Market has been unusually dull since Christmas, but business at the store has been extremely good and through all that time the entire force has hardly been relieved one evening out of each week. However, the last week has been a little quieter, especially in the Allegheny Market.

ST. NICHOLAS

You should plant St. Nicholas next season BECAUSE :—

It covers the whole season with top grade blooms.

It does not crop, nor go off in color at any time from September to July.

It is a great keeper and shipper.

It outsells all other scarlets over the counter.

It has been bringing us from 35 to 50 per cent more all season, than the best Beacon we ever grew.

Many growers have come to see it growing, and then placed their orders.

A number of them placed orders early, then came to see it and doubled the original order.

We can still give you cuttings that will make fine stock for blooming next winter. But let's have your order at once.

The Market.

Trade was quiet last week. There seems to be no shortage of any kind of stock. Roses are plentiful and of good quality. Sweet peas are more abundant and move well. Violets are in steady demand. The supply of carnations is more than sufficient to go around and the price is lower than it has been for years at this season. Many of the growers are complaining that out-of-town stock is taken in place of home-grown stock. Owing to the recent low prices, there is considerable cheap competition. One or two of our florists are advertising sales of violets, fifty in a bunch, at 50 cents per bunch, and carnations at 50 cents per dozen. Bulbous stock is plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Smith & Young Co. is looking for larger quarters for its wholesale rooms. The present rooms are entirely inadequate for their rapidly increasing business.

A. F. Longren, with E. H. Hunt, of Chicago, spent several days with the trade here last week.

Quite a number of the Indianapolis florists have signified their intention of attending the Chicago spring show. Among them are A. F. J. Baur, George Wiegand and Irwin Bertermann.

There has been considerable talk of late of another commission house for Indianapolis.

Paul Hoffman, with A. Wiegand & Sons, has been on the sick list.

Albert Pahud, Sr., has offered his greenhouses on Northwestern avenue for sale. He intends to retire from the florists' business.

Visitors last week: Fred Dorner, of La Fayette; A. F. Longren, of Chicago; John Eitel, of Greencastle; H. O. Meikel, of Frankfort; L. E. Hitz, of Madison.

Wm. P. Peirce has recently employed a young lady from Philadelphia, as a clerk in his store. W. L.

Parentage, HARLOWARDEN and ENCHANTRESS

As a medium-priced "red" it has a very promising future

From the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., where this has been grown on trial, we have a letter under date of Nov. 24, 1911, saying: "So far we like the new seedling very much; the color of the flower is fine and the size good. The stems are stiff and the number of blooms to a plant shows it will be a good producer."

E. J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., who has been growing five hundred on trial, writes us under date of Jan. 8, 1912: "So far this season this variety has produced more than double the blooms Beacon has, planted in the same house, and I feel sure it will maintain its lead the balance of the season. It is of a much brighter color than Beacon, flower as large, with a good stem, and a calyx that practically does not split, not averaging more than one split flower a week from the five hundred plants."

WORCESTER, MASS.

The spring exhibition of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, March 7, was a splendid one, bringing out a grand lot of exhibits. The arrangement was pleasing and won many compliments for the committee in charge. For the best display of carnations in twenty vases there was a fine display, the awards going to L. C. Midgley, A. B. Knowlton, Mrs. J. C. Whitin, Wm. McAllister, gardener, and Geo. W. Knowlton. In the single vase class L. C. Midgley had handsome vases of Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward, while A. H. Knight, of Shrewsbury, had fine White Enchantress. L. C. Midgley was awarded the Blake medal for his new seedling, Eureka, which was procured by crossing Old Glory, one of the late F. A. Blake's seedlings, with Robert Craig. The resultant scarlet seedling was crossed with Beacon and gave a deep scarlet flower, which Mr. Midgley now has some thousands of and hopes to introduce.

William Anderson, superintendent to Bayard Thayer, South Lancaster, Mass., also received a Blake medal for a superb table of seedling amaryllis, the finest ever seen in Worcester. Mrs. J. C. Whitin and Geo. W. Knowlton secured the orchid prizes. H. F. A. Lange was first for cyclamen, specimen azalea, three azaleas, Lorraine begonias, general display of cut flowers, basket of flowers, narcissi and tulips. He also received a special prize for a large group of palms and flowering plants. James E. Draper received a special award for a collection of boxwoods.

Edward W. Breed was a large and successful exhibitor, winning classes for hyacinths, Primula Sinensis, Primula obconica and Primula Kewensis. He also had fine lots of narcissi, tulips, cyclamen and other plants and a general display of cut flowers. H. F. A. Lange showed excellent pink and white Killarneys, Mrs. Taft, Richmond and My Maryland roses. In addition to cut flowers and plants there was a fine display of vegetables. W. N. C.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The lenten season and continued cold winter weather have made a change in business and trade is anything but brisk. Prices have dropped to encourage the buyers and the Saturday sales have used up considerable stock. Easter plants are more in evidence, but the demand, as yet, is slight.

Club Meeting.

The annual banquet and election of officers of the Florists' Club was held Tuesday, March 5, and a happier crowd of 100 never gathered together. The committees in charge carried out every detail to the letter and the evening was a most enjoyable one. Speeches, pictures and music entertained the crowd from 9 p. m. till 1:15 a. m.

The election was held during the evening and resulted in a clean sweep for the younger set. Wm. Grever was elected president; Edward Stroh, vice-president; Jos. Streit, treasurer; Robert Scott, secretary, and Charles Sandiford, financial secretary. Directors: E. Brucker, Ed Slattery and C. Guenther. Geo. McClure presided in the absence of Mr. Kasting. Mr. Adams was chosen as toastmaster and he ably filled the bill. He gave a few short remarks on the trip to Ithaca, relative to the meeting of the State Florists' Association, and then proceeded with the program of the evening. Several men were called upon and the views of the different speakers were given regarding the flower show. Much interest is being manifested in this event and it will be a great disappointment to many if the show does not surpass all previous events.

Mr. Gillis again kindly displayed his beautiful collection of views on the canvas.

Various Notes.

Wm. F. Kasting is out of the city for a short stay to regain his health.

The large department store openings have brought heavy sales into some of the stores, as some decorations are quite elaborate. R. A. S.

CLEVELAND.

The Sixth City.

The market has shown a slight improvement during the last few days. The call for stock has been brisk and several large funerals did their part in relieving the glut that has existed for the last two weeks. Good maiden-hair ferns and plumosus are scarce. There is no sale for callas at this date. Easter lilies sell in moderation.

The prospects for cut stock at Easter in this locality are as follows: A scarcity of carnations, owing to the large crop that has been on for the last month; plenty of roses and of better quality than at present; a fair amount of long lilies and a larger proportion of short-stemmed ones. Sweet peas should be in heavy supply. Snapdragons will be fine in limited quantities. Bulb stock should be more than plentiful. Spanish iris, mignonette, etc., will be in moderate supply. These predictions are purely local and are based on the condition of stock noted during the last two weeks.

Various Notes.

There are several men in this town who, should the occasion demand, would testify that John Kirchner is a most excellent host. He proved it to the satisfaction of the eighteen florists who gathered around the festive board at his home on Quincy avenue, March 5. After the dinner the party enjoyed a few hours at cards, while mine host did himself proud presiding at the punch bowl.

The committee appointed by the Florists' Club to arrange the decorations at the banquet of the Chamber of Industry did excellent work. The wholesale houses were more than generous in donating cut stock and several retail firms sent palms and other decorative material. The Chamber of Industry was well pleased with the generous way the florists had treated them and announced that they would be ever ready to render any service that the Florists' Club desired.

Among recent visitors were S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia; C. H. Hudson, representing Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., and John Van Leeuwen, Sassenheim, Holland. F. A. F.

It is said that A. B. Ellsworth, of this city, is forming a corporation, to include himself and D. B. Kroninger, of Emaus, with a view to greatly enlarging Mr. Kroninger's range of greenhouses. Mr. Ellsworth is also planning to convert his former residence, at 320 North Sixth street, into six flats.

A. B. Ellsworth's greenhouses, which have been conducted, under a lease, by Ernest Ashley, have been sold, along with the ground on which they stand. Mr. Ashley will vacate the place this spring and will remove to his new plant, in East Allentown.

O. J. Sawyer, of 432 North Eleventh street, this city, and I. J. Johnson, of Nazareth, have purchased the greenhouses and store stock of the late John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, and will continue the business under the firm name of Sawyer & Johnson. The greenhouses are located on Laurel street and the store at Broad and New streets. Mr. Sawyer will manage the store business and Mr. Johnson will look after the growing end of the business. Mr. Sawyer will continue his residence and business here, devoting a portion of his time to the Bethlehem store.

Chatham, Ont.—D. D. Hanley has taken over the greenhouses and business of the late Mr. Baxter.

Lake Linden, Mich.—Bert Nicholas, who has charge of the greenhouses of the Pearce Floral Co., has added Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward to his carnation stock this season and is highly pleased with the showing they are making.

The old reliable firm, GODFREY ASCHMANN, is not connected with any other firm and is more active than ever

PREPARE FOR EASTER!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

From our old friend, GODFREY ASCHMANN, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past, and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

Stop making those goo-goo eyes!
How can I help it?
Aschmann's Lilies look so charming,
And Aschmann himself is so entrancing—
That I simply can't resist; I must send him an order today.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see,
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow.
The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day.
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.
The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green,
With bulbs, and plumed Spiraea, the best you've ever seen.
And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear,
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear.
If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring,
Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

Niobe, double white, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each. Vervaeana, double variegated, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. De Schryveriana (double variegated), 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Simon Mardner, double pink, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Pres. Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $2.00. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo, best red, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Best mixed varieties, such as Helene Tholemann, Empress of India, Mme. Eichhaute, etc., 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Hydrangea Otaksa never was as good as this year, green as grass, full of buds, every branch stocked up. 5 1/2, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Primula Chinensis, in bloom, 4-in., 10c; 5 1/2-in., $2.00 per doz.

Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Dielytra Spectabilis (Bleeding Heart), 6-in. pots, 35c to 50c.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or 100 the same.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2 1/2-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

HYACINTHS, DAFFODILS, TULIPS.

Bulbs imported by ourselves at high prices from first-class growers in Holland; and cannot be compared with cheap bulbs flooding the market in the fall.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c; 9-in. pans, edged with Asparagus Plumosus, giving them an attractive appearance, 75c; 10-in. pans, filled with first size Grand Maitre hyacinths, 2 to 3 flowers to each bulb, 13 to 15 in. high, also edged with Asparagus Plumosus, $1.00 per pan.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence. 5 1/2 to 6-in. pots, 3 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful ever-green decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

What Florists Say About Our Lilies

Daily visitors to our establishment say: "You have the best lilies we ever have seen on our visits to many florists' establishments. We congratulate you. You certainly can be proud."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Easter Lilies, Lillium multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "cracker-jacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have four houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Vander Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Vander Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tiptop condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each. NOTICE.—A portion of large size Mme. Vander Cruyssen must be ordered in connection with small sizes, because we were able to get only a limited amount of this variety in smaller sizes.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6-in. pots, 75c.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please. Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots. All bulbs are now under cover in cold frame and will bloom in two weeks from time of bringing them in the greenhouse.

The Market.

Mild weather with a great deal of sunshine has brought flowers of all kinds into market and the prices have dropped in proportion to the surplus in stock. Carnations especially are abundant and cheap, while sweet peas in all colors are more than plentiful and go at a low figure. The fine spring weather has also had a quickening effect on the transient trade. For the last few weeks the surplus stock has made it almost necessary for the various florists to have special sales every Saturday to effect a clean-up.

Roses, excepting Killarney, are fairly good, but Richmonds meet with little demand. Beauties are not much in demand during Lent, and that is fortunate, for they are still high in price and scarce. Gardenias are to be had no longer. Cattleyas are much poorer than they have been, and there has been a dropping off in demand for orchids of all kinds. Violets are selling well and are cheap. A few pansies are seen now and then, but it scarcely pays to handle them as early as this in our city. Sweet peas are fine, also valley and other bulbous stock.

Trade in general was good during February, even during the first week in Lent.

Various Notes.

J. E. McDermott, of Ellwanger & Barry, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his son, Joseph E. McDermott, who died March 4 at his home, 98 Sanford street.

Charles Sharp has left the employ of H. E. Wilson.

The Richland Nurseries have put out an attractive nursery stock catalogue for spring, 1912.

The Vegetable Growers' Association of America will hold its convention and exhibition here September 4 to 6.

The Buffalo bowlers came down to our city February 26 to bowl the first half of a match game. They were entertained at dinner at the Osburn House, after which they went directly to the bowling alleys on Elm street. Our boys were victors in three straight games. The second half of the match will be bowled at a later date.

Ramsford Wilson, of the Rochester Floral Co., has been suffering with a severe case of tonsillitis, but is improving rapidly.

Chas. Vick called a meeting of the exhibition committee March 5 to determine whether there would be a flower show next fall. The announcement of the decision will be made at the next meeting of the Florists' Association.

Ellwanger & Barry finished the propagation of 30,000 lilac plants recently. Fred Ahrens is the man in charge of this work.

Mrs. Carrie L. Webb will erect a greenhouse at 133 Saratoga avenue in the near future.

Charles A. Green, president and treasurer of Green's Nurseries, is spending the early spring in Florida.

H. E. Wilson has two new clerks in his store at 88 East Main street.

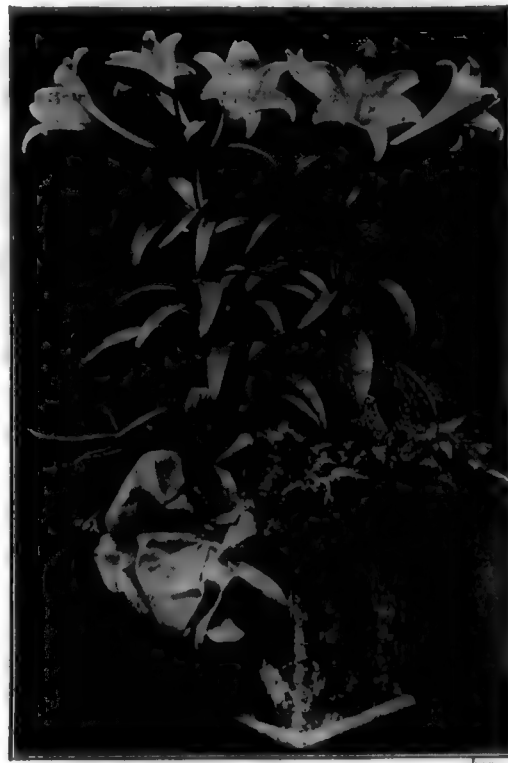

Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, visited us last week with his usual stock of "good" stories.

F. J. Keller went to New York city and Philadelphia last week on a business trip.

The Aphine Manufacturing Co., Madison, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of Jan. 27, will say that we have been using Fungine on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the Aphine for lice on lettuce instead of [a nicotine preparation] and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots; if so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this Fungine as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

Yours very truly,

Greenhouse Heating.

THE price of coal in eastern markets has advanced sharply since the English miners went on strike, affecting to a certain extent the prices in the west. The miners' wage contracts with the employers in this country, both east and west, expire March 31 and a general suspension of operations in April is predicted by those familiar with the situation. This means advancing prices if nothing worse, so it is important that growers have fuel for the balance of the season on hand April 1. It is almost certain to be All Fools' day for those who take chances.

MORE ABOUT THAT OIL BURNER.

I noticed in The Review of February 15, page 15, an article on "Oil for Fuel and How to Use It," by W. H. Culp. While the brother from Kansas gives us a good idea of how to make the burner, etc., he does not say how much oil it burns per hour. I shall consider it a great favor if the Kansas gentleman will tell us, through The Review, something about the cost and other such details.
R. L. I.

Besides the foregoing letter from R. L. I., we have received other inquiries from several different states concerning the fuel consumption of the oil burner described in The Review of February 15. We find it hard to give complete answers at this time as to the comparative cost of burning oil and coal. One reason for this is the fact that this winter has given us more severe weather than any for several years past, and we have been compelled to crowd the already overworked boiler using this burner. This we know: We are able to run a hotter fire, and get much more steam from the same boiler with this burner than was ever possible with coal for fuel, no matter how skillful or hard-working the fireman in charge.

We are not able to get track facilities to handle oil in car lots, and we pay from $2.25 to $2.50 per hundred gallons, delivered in tank wagon lots. The Standard Oil Co. tells us that 100 gallons of this residual fuel oil which we use is equal to one ton of ordinary slack coal, but we believe it takes nearer 120 gallons to equal one ton of the best steam coal, which formerly cost us about $3.25 to $3.50 per ton. In our case, ashes represented an expense in handling that far exceeded their value to us, and we have some other work the night man can do instead of being continually busy with the fires. Both of these items represented an additional saving in labor.

The amount of oil burned by one of these burners will depend largely on the steam pressure behind it. A pair which will loaf along with a forty horsepower boiler, running at thirty pounds of pressure, will handle a 150 horsepower boiler just as easily, running at little over 20,000 feet of glass, exposed to the full sweep of the wind. The temperatures inside ranged from 50 to 60 degrees, as wanted in the various houses.

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Better than All Others

I have fired boilers for the last forty years. The Kroeschell is the best I have ever used. I have two cast iron boilers, also a locomotive boiler coupled with yours, but did not need to use the cast iron boilers this winter. Your No. 7 boiler is rated at 15,000 sq. ft. of glass and carries 25,000 sq. ft. of glass until the outside temperature goes down to 10° of frost. We have no trouble to keep temperatures in our houses with easy firing since we installed your boiler. From the boiler to the farthest end of our violet houses and return is 800 feet, and circulates very quickly.

To figure the comparative cost of oil and coal, each grower will have to consider his cost of coal, cost of oil, whether his coal ashes are a nuisance or a useful commodity, the saving in labor cost, and other things which will be peculiar to his own situation. In some cases the increased capacity of the heating plant may make it possible to hook on that extra house without having to increase the now fully loaded boiler capacity. We believed the easiest way to figure it out was to go ahead and try it, which we are doing. We have previously burned natural gas and coal, and so far in this test the oil has proved the most satisfactory fuel of the three. W. H. Culp.

TWO CUCUMBER HOUSES.

I am building two greenhouses, each 12x100 and eight feet to the ridge, for forcing cucumbers. I am located near Seattle, Wash., and want a night temperature of 60 to 62 degrees. I expect to put in a hot water system. Please give me information as to the placing of the boiler so as to secure the best results. Also state the right size of the flow and return pipes. I have a ten horse-power boiler, with eighteen return flues. W. A. S.

Whenever possible, the boiler should be so placed that it will be entirely below the level of the greenhouse floor, and if it can be several feet lower it will be all the better. The best way of heating the houses will be to run 2½-inch pipes upon each of the plates as flows, and connect each flow pipe at the farther end of the house with two 2-inch returns. This, of course, will give two 2½-inch flows and four 2-inch returns to each of the houses. Run a 3-inch main flow, and a return of the same size, from the boiler to each of the houses. Have the flows run downhill and connect the highest point in each flow pipe with the expansion tank.

A NARROW HOUSE FOR ROSES.

We have a range of three houses, one 20x76½, one 21x87½ and one 11x87½. We are going to build another house this spring, 27½x76½. We should like to know whether the small house could be used for roses, or is it too narrow and low? It is five and one-half feet high at the sides and eight and one-half feet to the ridge. We are thinking of putting a partition on both sides of this house, as all the houses are connected and the small house has a row of stationary sashes up to it, with a solid bench below. This house contains one 5-foot bench and one 3-foot bench; both are raised wooden benches, about eighteen inches high. The houses all run northeast to southwest. Would one 2½-inch flow and six 2-inch returns, three under each bench, heat the narrow house sufficiently for roses, and would it be all right for roses, with these changes? This house is the southeast house, or south house, as some would call it. We use hot water heat. Our location is western Indiana. W. S. K.

This is the second article of a series describing machines used in our factory. The one shown here is known as a Revolving Sifter, to which the semi-liquid clay flows from the Blunger Mill. It performs a most important function. Its covering is a fine copper wire screen, 1600 meshes to the square inch, through which the clay is strained as the cylinder revolves. All the sand and grit is thus removed, leaving a fine smooth body; it is the same as clay is treated for dinner ware.

The next operation will be described later.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Flowers of all varieties were plentiful here last week; in fact, far in excess of the demand. The lenten season has had a marked effect on business. Violets and sweet peas came into the local market in large quantities and on fair days the street men were offering good sized bunches at little money. Killarneys, white and pink, could be had at from $3 for the poorer grades to $12 for the best. White roses, such as Bride, Ivory, etc., brought from $5 to $12 per hundred, and pink roses cost $1 more by the hundred. The newer and odd varieties of roses, Radiance, Wellesley, Enchanter and Mrs. Taft, due to a shortage in the supply, brought better prices. There has been an exceptionally plentiful production of carnations and $5 per hundred can be considered as the top-notch price, while poor stock could be had for much less. Sweet peas could be had at the wholesale houses at any price from $2.50 to $10 per thousand, as never before have they been seen in this city in such large quantities as now. The supply of lilies has shortened considerably, although callas are in heavy supply but small demand. Gardenias are plentiful and can be had at from $25 down to almost nothing, but cattleyas are quite scarce and are bringing 50 to 75 cents each.

The growers are all doing their utmost to bring their stock in right for the Easter business and it would seem, from the present indications, that most of them will be successful. At this writing the lilies are in good shape and at the proper time there will be a good supply of these, as well as of hydrangeas, spiræas, rhododendrons and lilacs. A great many of the lilies, however, will be short.

The Market.

Not for many months, and perhaps not for years, has there been anything to compare with the conditions of the last few weeks. There has been practically no business, and the quantity of stock coming in has been simply appalling. The grower, as well as the retailer, has been kept busy dumping his surplus. Carnations have been brought in by the wagon load, but most of the time they could not be sold at any price. They have been offered at retail at 25 cents a dozen, but did not sell even at that figure. Tea roses are more plentiful, but the demand is so slight as to make absolutely no impression. There are plenty of long and short Beauties, but none of a medium grade. On account of the cold weather, corsage bouquets for street wear have been out of the question and the sale of violets has dropped off materially.

The long, hard winter has had a depressing effect on greenhouse men. The greater part of the time since last November the thermometers have registered near the zero mark, and all that has been obtained from the sale of flowers, and in some instances more, has been spent for coal.

Various Notes.

The last meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club, held March 4 at T. M. A. hall, was only fairly well attended, probably on account of the extremely cold weather. In the absence of President A. H. Bush, E. S. Kennedy presided. W. Wilmore, Jr., read a paper on "Dahlias." It was found necessary to change the meeting place, and a committee was appointed to find one before the next meeting, which will be held April 1.

Several florists have been on the sick list recently. A. H. Bush, of the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co., was home for a week with a slight attack of appendicitis. B. E. Gillis, of the Park Floral Co., has been confined to the house for a week. Frank Fraser, of the Alpha Floral Co., has returned to work, after being out about two weeks.

Milton Freeman, an employee of C. F. Maler, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife. A short time ago his little daughter was killed by a fall from a moving street car.

The Elitch-Long Co. has taken a third interest in the Dutch Mill, the other members of the firm being Jane Pearse and T. C. Bennett. Additional space has been obtained, and a full line of plants has been put in.

Visitors: S. Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., New York; G. Fleischer, Pueblo; D. E. Dungan, Limon; Ed. Johnson, John Berry, J. W. Smith and Henry Monaghan, Colorado Springs, Colo.

BASKET ON PEDESTAL.

One of the best sellers in the store of Myers Bros., Altoona, Pa., is the basket on pedestal made up after the fashion of the design shown in the accompanying illustration. The arrangement is original with Eugene S. Myers, store manager for the firm, who says it has given excellent satisfaction, especially as a funeral piece for use where a number of people contribute to the purchase fund. The outline of the piece is exceedingly graceful, but the framework is merely an ordinary high-handled basket with a wire stand as a pedestal. The pedestal is mossed and filled with any material in season and has a solid and substantial look, while its outlines give it grace. The style of decoration and filling for the basket may be varied according to the stock available and the price secured. The basket illustrated stood five feet six inches high. The prices obtained by Myers Bros. for such arrangements have usually been from $20 to $50 when ordinary stock was used, with from $100 to as much as $200 on special orders.

USE GLUTS FOR ADVERTISING.

Of course the question of how to handle a surplus must be decided by every florist according to his own conditions, but the way The Newburys, of Mitchell, S. D., have solved the problem may be of interest. This is their description:

"When we have a glut, this is the way we handle it. We send out packages of flowers to those who boost for us; to the expressmen, long distance and local telephone girls, and to others that favor us, and more especially to regular customers with their orders. We fill the order as given and then add something different and put in a card reading: 'We have more than our share of flowers today and we are dividing with you. We appreciate and thank you for the favors you have extended us, and we hope the flowers will bring to you the same pleasure the sending of them does to us.' We think it better to do so and keep our prices up, than to cut every time we have a surplus."

The Review will be pleased to have the opinion of other retailers on this subject.

STORE-FRONT DECORATIONS.

Seasonable Outdoor Displays.

Seasonable displays of plants out-of-doors are matters of no small concern in the spring days. Well accomplished, they attract immensely and of course sell the goods. But how to manage these shifting exhibits; how to hold them under the nose of the passer-by, but keep them from under his feet; how to have all the plants of a large collection within easy reach; how to avoid spoiling the window display within—all these questions must be disposed of quickly by the busy store man. More than this—the plants just out of the greenhouse must be kept outdoors if they are to remain in salable condition.

According to the space allowed by city ordinances and as much more as space permits, make the bench a double-decker, with protected edges, to keep small plants from being pulled off and soil and litter from being scattered on the sidewalk.

Baskets and Window Boxes.

On ordinary city fronts there is often a wall space between the windows of adjoining stores. This space can usually be obtained if the stock you propose to exhibit is in good condition and well arranged. Brackets for hanging baskets might occupy these up-and-down spaces, and serve to display them and ornament the building. In mild weather and during all but the hottest summer days, these brackets may be used for displaying fern plants, Sprengeri, etc., in wire pot hangers.

If it is preferred to exhibit blooming or fancy foliage vines, put up window the friendly policeman on your beat will shut his eyes to, proceed with your plans. If you have a window which does not reach the sidewalk below, fit out the space below with a low bench or benches on rollers. If the height of the boxes instead of brackets. These ought to sell lots of vincas, flowering ivies, vining geraniums and other such stock. If spaces are to be had on both sides of the store front, a uniform design in planting makes an attractive frame for the window. With some fronts a window box might be arranged farther up and, if well chosen, the plants and vines might fill a long-felt vacancy so often seen in the upper part of the show window. In this arrangement, do not use a plant with a pronounced color of flower, as you would often kill the color effects of the window display. Flowers of white, cream or a light tint of pink, with green and white foliage and soft greens, would be the best choice for exterior front decorations.

A Sidewalk Pergola.

If obliged to handle miscellaneous stock outside, keep warring colors widely separated. Your heliotropes and petunias may be close together, while the brilliant geraniums, marguerites and abutilons may be grouped "side by side."

scheme, if only temporarily used, would be a good carnival decoration.

If the entrance to your store retires from a level with the window front, the upper vestibule space may be used in much the same manner as the pergola; that is, hung with ferns and hanging baskets and bordered with window boxes.

In Unison with One's Neighbors.

It is often possible to interest all the merchants in one block on one or both sides of the street in the hanging basket and porch box decoration, so that your portion of the street shall be known by its special feature, even year after year. With a surplus of stock on hand or in sight, as the season advances or trade is not all that it might be, advance this idea to your neighboring merchants and, if made attractive enough, it is likely to take. A florist in a residence district might work up the same kind of a decorated block. The character of the sample decoration which you put up at your own place will have much to do with your success in extending it.

The pergola and wall decorations will make a fine appearance both up and down and across the street, and beats a dozen electric signs.

Another plan which would admit of a fine display is that of which a canopy in the shape of an awning, supported from above, is the principal feature. Decorate this after the style of the pergola.

If you have a surplus of any special plant, make your entire outside display of that one thing and specialize for the day. A day for one color of geraniums, of marguerites, of salvias, of pansies, of petunias or heliotropes, could not help but attract trade your way. Well carried out, such a display will keep you busy in finding enough stock. G. B.

THE NEW KNOBLE STORE.

The accompanying illustrations afford three excellent views of the remodeled store and conservatory of Knoble Bros., 1836 West Twenty-fifth street, Cleveland, O. The place was completely overhauled last fall and already in the present season has demonstrated the practical thoroughness of the arrangements, for the display of stock, for waiting on trade and for handling the behind-the-scenes part of the work.

The Knoble store not only is in the center of the west side activity in Cleveland, and recognized as one of the most attractive in the city, but it is known far and wide for its three-dollar spray. The Knobles are firm believers in advertising—they advertise in season and out of season, and when there is nothing else they would rather advertise, they advertise the three-dollar spray of carnations. It is remarkable the number of them they sell. It is said to run from three or four to a dozen or twenty a day, sometimes a great many more than that. And, on the average, they nearly double their Show Window of Knoble Bros., Cleveland.

For displaying considerably more outside stock a pergola may be added, extending from the building to the edge of the sidewalk. Baskets and ferns may be suspended from the corner posts next to the street, without interfering with the window.

According to the season of the year and the special occasions, change the decoration of the pergola. Just now, as we are concerned with the spring displays, schemes for showing blooming plants are in order. A group of hanging baskets, of different sizes and lengths of wire, may be fastened at the two outside upper corners of the pergola. A number of others can be hung on rather short wires from different points under the roof timbers. Window boxes around the three edges will complete the upper decoration. A cluster of blooming plants—for example, lilies, rhododendrons, hydrangeas or spiræas—may be arranged at the base of each of the outside timbers on the curb.

The pergola should be painted or stained to harmonize with the exterior finish of the building. For holiday or evening specials, the whole thing may be decorated with shaded lights. This money, the profit varying, of course, with the condition of the cut flower market, the quantity of stock used for different sections of the city, and the cost of delivery. A large number of the orders come by telephone, but the offer of the cheap spray is the means of calling in a steady stream of people who never before have visited the store.

A BIG LILY.

The Formosa lily bulbs have proved to be an excellent addition to the supply, especially for early flowering. The well ripened bulbs not only can be brought into bloom at double quick, but the stock is free from disease. Apparently only two things are the matter with the Formosa bulbs—there are not enough of them and they are a little bit erratic in the matter of development; the crop is not so easy to get in all at once and the plants are inclined to vary a good deal in height. There is none of the kind that flowers with too short a stem to be salable; on the other hand, a good many are unnecessarily tall. Now and then one shoots far above its fellows and becomes quite a curiosity, like the one shown in the accompanying illustration. The photograph reached The Review from A. Henderson & Co., who received it from C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, to whom Henderson & Co. had supplied the bulbs. One plant of the lot shot up to six feet eight inches. It carried eight flowers. The picture shows how the lily towered above the ice-box in the store. A roll of crepe paper was used for a background. As an advertisement it was a tremendous success, attracting wide attention.

PALM LEAVES TURN BROWN.

I should like to know what makes the leaves of palms turn brown and roll up, like the enclosed sample. F. D.

Palm leaves usually turn brown at their ends if they have had one or two bad dryings out at the roots. They must never be allowed to become dry at the root. Furthermore, they should be given a warm, moist house, should be freely syringed and not be exposed to direct sunshine. C. W.

Andover, Mass.—Plans are already well under way for the 1912 flower show, to be held in the town hall September 6 and 7, under the auspices of the Andover Florists' and Gardeners' Club and some other societies. J. H. Playdon is chairman of the committee in charge.

CHICAGO'S FIRST SPRING SHOW

A HIT WITH THE PUBLIC.

Demonstration of Decorative Values.

Although the spring show at Chicago shared the financial fate of the exhibitions held in other cities last autumn, the success from the viewpoint of the public was beyond question and, if there is value in educating the people in the use of plants and flowers, as we all believe, the Horticultural Society and the two score exhibitors who gave their support are entitled to full measure of credit for a demonstration of decorative possibilities and values that attracted more people than have attended any other flower show held in Chicago.

The roses were rearranged the second day and made a wonderful display. The big vases of 100 blooms were broken up into smaller vases and these grouped, getting a much better effect. As the flowers opened they made a showing that gave many of the visitors an entirely new conception of modern roses. The show was enlarged, also, by the addition of a number of new vases, from Peter Reinberg, W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co., and others.

Hunt Bros., Park Ridge, Ill., staged a group that attracted much attention. In it were antirrhinums and stocks in several colors, sweet peas, Pink Beauty lupine, mignonette, calendulas, Shasta and African daisies.

G. Swenson, Elmhurst, Ill., set up a vase of winter-flowering type of Spencer sweet pea that the growers all thought an important addition to the list of money-makers.

Schiller the Florist staged several groups of decorative plants, maintained an admirably arranged large basket of roses, several brides' bouquets and a bride's muff that made a hit with the ladies.

One of the aids in making the show the success that it was, from the point of view of the public, was the stock from Lincoln park, which was scattered through the rooms in effective groups.

The Carnations.

It was in the carnation classes that the only real competition of the show was witnessed, and here it was about as keen as ever is seen, even in the most successful exhibitions of the American Carnation Society, there being fourteen vases of 100 blooms each staged in the class of standard whites, with eight entries for red, seven for light pink, six for flesh pink and five for dark pink. Of course, with fourteen vases staged, one or two of the exhibitors got their eyes opened, but in general the stock was exceptionally good. The exhibitors and their varieties were:

Wietor Bros. White Enchantress
Wietor Bros. White Perfection

Chicago Carnation Co. White Enchantress
Chicago Carnation Co. White Perfection
W. J. & M. S. Vesey White Enchantress
Fred H. Lemon & Co. White Enchantress
Poehlmann Bros. Co. White Enchantress
Poehlmann Bros. Co. White Perfection
Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Assn. No. 140-09-A Riverbank Greenhouses White Enchantress
Northwestern Floral Co. White Perfection
C. C. Pollworth Co. Alma Ward
C. H. Totty Wodenethe
E. G. Hill Co. Wodenethe

It is interesting to note that White Wonder was not shown. Wodenethe was much the largest flower and took both first and second. Pollworth's Alma Ward, for perfection of form and finish, stood head and shoulders above all the White Enchantress and White Perfection.

In flesh pink, Enchantress simply was not in it. Witterstaetter's J. A. Valentine was easily the finest of the six vases in the class, with second going to Princess Charming, a variety little grown, and third to Pink Delight. Mrs. C. W. Ward swept the light pink class; Winsor could not reach up to it. Washington eclipsed Lawson. In red there was a fine competition, Beacon taking first, with Scarlet Glow distancing the others.

Wodenethe was the only new white shown, except Mt. Greenwood's fragrant seedling which probably will be held for the originator's own use. The only new flesh pink was Valentine, which was fine. In reds there was St. Nicholas, from Baur & Steinkamp, looking well; Commodore, thought highly of by the E. G. Hill Co.; The Herald, which the Chicago Carnation Co. will send out next year, and a seedling, No. 154, from Arvid Anderson, a private gardener at Moline, Ill. In variegated, Mt. Greenwood had a flushed variety and the Chicago Carnation Co. showed its penciled seedling, No. 94.

The awards were as follows, 100 blooms being called for except in the classes for undissected varieties only, where twenty-five were needed:

White—E. G. Hill Co. first, C. H. Totty second, both showing Wodenethe; C. C. Pollworth Co. third, on Alma Ward.

Flesh pink—R. Witterstaetter first, on J. A. Valentine; Chicago Carnation Co. second, showing Princess Charming; E. G. Hill Co. third, on Pink Delight.

Light pink—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second, C. C. Pollworth Co. third, all showing Mrs. C. W. Ward.

Dark pink—Chicago Carnation Co. first, for Washington; Wietor Bros. second, on Lawson; Poehlmann Bros. Co. third, on Lawson.

Red—E. G. Hill Co. first, on Beacon; Chicago Carnation Co. second, for Scarlet Glow; Poehlmann Bros. Co. third, on Scarlet Glow.

White variegated—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association first, on a seedling flushed like Prosperity; Chicago Carnation Co. second, on No. 94, penciled pink.

Undissected white—E. G. Hill Co. first, C. H. Totty second, both showing Wodenethe.

Undissected flesh pink—Chicago Carnation Co. first, on No. 78.

Undissected dark pink—Chicago Carnation Co. first, on No. 150.

Undissected red—E. G. Hill Co. first, on Commodore.

Sweepstakes for undissected varieties—E. G. Hill Co., silver cup, on Wodenethe.

Miscellaneous Cut Flowers.

The miscellaneous cut flowers were the final feature of the program. Some excellent stock was shown, but there was little competition, except on violets, which were of exceptional quality. The awards were:

Mignonette, 50 spikes—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first.

Lily of the valley, 250 spikes—H. N. Bruns first.

Antirrhinum, 25 spikes, white—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association first.

Antirrhinum, 25 spikes, yellow—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association first.

Antirrhinum, 25 spikes, any other color—Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association first.

Violets, best bunch of 100 doubles—Des Plaines Violet Co. first, Loeffler & Benke second.

Violets, best bunch of 100 singles—Loeffler & Benke first, Riverbank Greenhouses second.

The showing of sweet peas was disappointing, especially in view of the fact that the third premiums equaled the market value of the finest flowers, with second prizes twice the value and firsts three times the worth of the stock. In addition to the Sim display staged on the opening day, two exhibitors set up splendid flowers in the competitive classes March 14, but there now are dozens of growers who have good peas and who could have given the flower a good boost by entering. The awards, for vases of 100 in each color, were:

White—Frank Felke first, on Watchung.

Pink and white—Frank Felke first, on Christmas Pink.

Salmon—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, on Wm. Sim.

Lavender—Frank Felke first, on Mrs. Wallace.

Any other color—Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, on Capt. of Blues; second, on Greenbrook.

The Attendance.

The attendance broke all records for a Chicago flower show, although the gate receipts were light because of the free days and the nominal fee the Art Institute charges on pay days. Here are the figures, showing how show week compared with the regular attendance at the Institute:

	Previous week.	Show week.
Tuesday	569	1,622
Wednesday	2,965	9,052
Thursday	593	3,109
Friday	286	1,888
Saturday	5,176	13,620
Sunday	5,872	17,116
Total	15,461	47,407

Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday are the free days at the Art Institute and the attendants from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. on those days brought in no money. In the evening 50 cents was charged.

Lectures.

A series of illustrated lectures were given that attracted fair audiences, as follows:

Wednesday evening, "Home Floriculture," by H. B. Dorner.

Friday evening, "Illinois Floriculture," by O. C. Simonds.

Saturday evening, "Planting Home Grounds," by W. N. Rudd.

Sunday afternoon, "Bulb Fields of Holland," by R. Vincent, Jr.

Club Banquet.

At its meeting March 7, the Chicago Florists' Club authorized a committee consisting of E. F. Winterson, D. A. Robertson and H. N. Bruns to offer the club's hospitalities to the S. A. F. board of directors, who were in session at Chicago last week and who acted as judges of the flower show. The committee broadened the invitation to include all the trade visitors, giving a banquet at the La Salle on the evening of March 14. The notice was so short that a large attendance was impossible, but seventy-four were present and the affair was one that was thoroughly enjoyed. P. J. Foley, president of the club, acted as toastmaster. He first called on Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., followed by Vice-President Poehlmann, Secretary Young, Robert Craig, E. Allan Peirce, J. A. Evans, George Asmus, W. N. Rudd, C. C. Pollworth, Joe Hill, W. W. Coles, H. A. Bunyard, Harry Balsley, E. F. Winterson and others. Robert Craig and D. A. Robertson sang Scottish songs and, indoors, there was not the slightest indication of the blizzard raging outside.

CYRTOMIUM FALCATUM.

Enclosed please find a fern leaf. I wish you would tell me what it is called, and also do you know where I can get some young plants? A. D.

The fern in question is Cyrtomium falcatum, an excellent species for table ferneries when grown in short and stocky plants, and may be purchased from any of the large dealers in florists' ferns who advertise in The Review. W. H. T.

Joplin, Mo.—The Troutman Floral Co. is reported to have secured the contract at $3,000 for the landscape work and planting about the new union station.

Primula Malacoides.

GLASS BLOWERS GET RAISE.

Five thousand hand window glass workmen employed throughout Kansas, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, March 13 received notice that beginning March 15 their wages would be increased an average of thirty-five per cent, all branches of the industry being affected. This decision was reached at a conference between the wage committee of the National Window Glass Workers' and a committee representing the manufacturers, held in Cleveland, March 6 and 7. It will remain in effect until May 29, when another adjustment is expected.

THE PRICE OF GLASS.

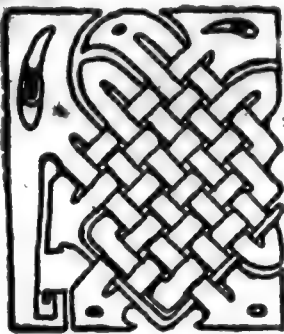

The new price of window glass has been announced. The independent factories made known their new discounts Wednesday, March 13, and the American Window Glass Co., which controls the machine method of blowing, made its announcement next day. The advance was greater than had been anticipated, amounting to 50 cents a box on greenhouse sizes, or rather more than twenty-five per cent. This is the advance the jobbers are required to pay to the factories and of course they are passing the advance on to the consumer, for the jobber's margin, except when he has made a lucky speculation, never is more than a few pennies per box.

Greenhouse glass under $2 per box was too cheap for anyone's good. It caused the depreciation of every greenhouse property the country over, and it caused production of greenhouse stock to increase faster than the demand, thus depreciating the value of the output of every growing establishment. The new prices are not too high, but what is wanted is stability; the wide fluctuations of the glass market are a menace to the florists' trade.

PRIMULA MALACOIDES.

One of the newer plants that has gained immediate popularity is Primula malacoides, a native of the mountains of China that is commonly known as the giant baby primrose. It is a profuse bloomer and is excellent for sale in pots or to use in the now largely sold made-up baskets of mixed plants. The specimen illustrated is in a 4-inch pot. It was photographed at the establishment of Henry Schmidt, Union Hill, N. J., where primulas are a leading specialty.

STATE AID FOR FLORICULTURE

WORK AT EXPERIMENT STATION.

[A report by Prof. H. B. Dorner, of the experiment station at Urbana, Ill., read at the convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Joliet, March 5, 1912.]

As a representative of the University of Illinois, I beg to present the following report on the work being carried on at the florists' experimental greenhouses at Urbana. This work is a continuation of that of the last two years and is under the direction of your advisory committee.

Department Staff.

During the last year it was thought advisable to add a pathologist to the staff of the department. As a result, H. W. Anderson was appointed an assistant in the department and is devoting his time to the study of the diseases of floricultural crops. At the present time he is studying the stem-rot and other diseases of the carnation. More will be said about this subject later.

The increase of work in the department, in the instructional as well as the experimental side, has made it necessary to secure additional assistance in the greenhouses. The services of James Hutchinson, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., have been secured and he is taking charge of the greenhouse and outdoor work.

As the instructional work has greatly increased, it is necessary to devote more time to it and so an attempt is being made to secure a scientifically trained man to assist in the experimental work.

Instructional Work.

During the last year sixty-eight students received instruction in several of the lines of work offered in floriculture. During the present year ninety-one students have enrolled for various lines of work. It is hoped that this number will increase from year to year. The work offered will be much improved when the new houses, for which money was appropriated this past year, are erected.

New Greenhouses.

The new houses to be erected will consist of show houses and will be connected with the experimental range. It is hoped that these houses will not only aid in the instruction of students intending to follow commercial work, but will admit of the offering of courses of interest to students wishing to take up work on private estates.

The work on the construction of the new houses has been delayed, owing to the question of the future development of the university campus. The rearrangement of the campus and the location of new buildings may make it necessary to move the present experimental houses. It is expected that this will be decided soon and so will in no way affect the experimental work. If the houses are moved it will be to the opposite side of the campus, on a site much better fitted for the work than that at present occupied.

Experimental Work.

The experimental work on fertilizers has been carried on by Mr. Nehrling and the writer. Mr. Nehrling for the last two years has been in charge of the greater portion of the experimental work. The report on the following work, then, is to be considered as a joint report with Mr. Nehrling.

Carnation Experiment.

The experiment with commercial fertilizers in the growing of carnations may be divided into three sections. The work in one house is a repetition of the work carried on for the last two years. This is a test of varying quantities of manure. The second house, this year, is being devoted to a comparison of carnations grown with natural manures and carnations grown with commercial fertilizers. Part of the house is also devoted to an experiment to determine the effects of an excess of fertilizer upon the plants.

parison of carnations grown with natural manures and carnations grown with commercial fertilizers. Part of the house is also devoted to an experiment to determine the effects of an excess of fertilizer upon the plants.

Varying Quantities of Fertilizer.

The work in this part of the experiment is a duplication of the work of 1909-10 and 1910-11. This duplication is necessary, for in all experimental work of this type it is necessary to repeat the work for three or four years before any definite conclusions can be drawn. The report upon this part of the work will be brief, as a circular is now in preparation and it is hoped that it will be ready for distribution this spring. During the season of 1909-10 records were taken on 47,729 carnations, and during 1910-11 on 42,425. This data must be studied and many tables constructed for comparison.

The Object.

The object of the experiment is to determine whether as good or better carnations can be grown with the use of commercial fertilizers instead of natural manures. It must be kept in mind that humus is necessary in all soils for the best results, and so all manure cannot be dispensed with unless the humus is applied in some other form. This humus is necessary for the development of the bacteria which help to make available the nutritive substances in the soil. For the experiment a small quantity of manure was used to supply this necessary humus.

By previous experiments it was decided that the best commercial fertilizers to supply the needed elements were dried blood and ammonium sulphate for nitrogen, acid phosphate for phosphorus and potassium sulphate for potassium. In the experiment these were applied to all but the control sections, in order to determine if possible in what proportion they are best suited to the carnation.

For the experiment the following amounts of fertilizer were selected as units of application:

Dried blood, 2 lbs. per 100 sq. ft. bench, soil 5 in. deep.
Am. sulphate, 1½ lbs. per 100 sq. ft.
Acid phosphate, ½ lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Potassium sulphate, ½ lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Manure, 115 lbs. or about 3½ bu. per 100 sq. ft.

The standard application, then, included these fertilizers at the rates mentioned. Dried blood was used for the nitrogen except in a few sections, where ammonium sulphate was used in its place. The control sections had the same amount of manure, but no commercial fertilizers.

The commercial fertilizers in the other sections were doubled and quadrupled singly, in pairs and all together. This, then, gave combinations of varying amounts for the study of the quantity of each necessary.

The Cut.

The varieties originally selected for this work were White Perfection, Beacon, Enchantress and Winsor. Winsor was discarded at the end of the second year, on account of the excessive amount of stem-rot. It was replaced by White Enchantress, which does not appear in the tables, as it was used for the comparison of the commercial fertilizers and natural manures.

The following table shows the entire cut by varieties for the two years and also the average number of flowers per plant. These numbers are not as great as they would be if all the plants were under the best possible cultural conditions.

NUMBER OF CARNATION FLOWERS.

	1909-1910		1910-1911
	Total.	Av. plt.	Total.	Av. plt.

W. Perfection..	11,672	15.2	8,450	11.0
Enchantress ...	11,289	14.5	11,242	14.6

Average for 1909-10 is for November to May 1.
Average for 1910-11 is for October to May 1.

It is interesting to note that in the Enchantress rust is more abundant in the sections containing four units of nitrogen. This is in accordance with the observations of other experimentalists.

As far as can be determined at present, the results verify the statement made last year, that just as good flowers can be grown with commercial fertilizers. It yet remains to be determined whether better flowers can be obtained.

Commercial Fertilizers Are Strong.

However, in the case of commercial fertilizers, it must be borne in mind that they are extremely concentrated and so must be used with caution. An injudicious use of these fertilizers will be followed by greater disaster than in the case of natural manures.

According to the results secured from the work at the experiment station, we consider that it would be advisable to use chemical fertilizers in the growing of carnations. We recommend, however, that only a small area be devoted to their trial during the first year. This is essential, as there must, first, be a decision as to what amount may be applied to the particular soil used. A chemical analysis will not show how much fertilizer need be applied, as an analysis shows the entire amount of an element in the soil and not the amount that will be available during the year. The amount required must, then, be determined by experimentation.

What Florists Should Try.

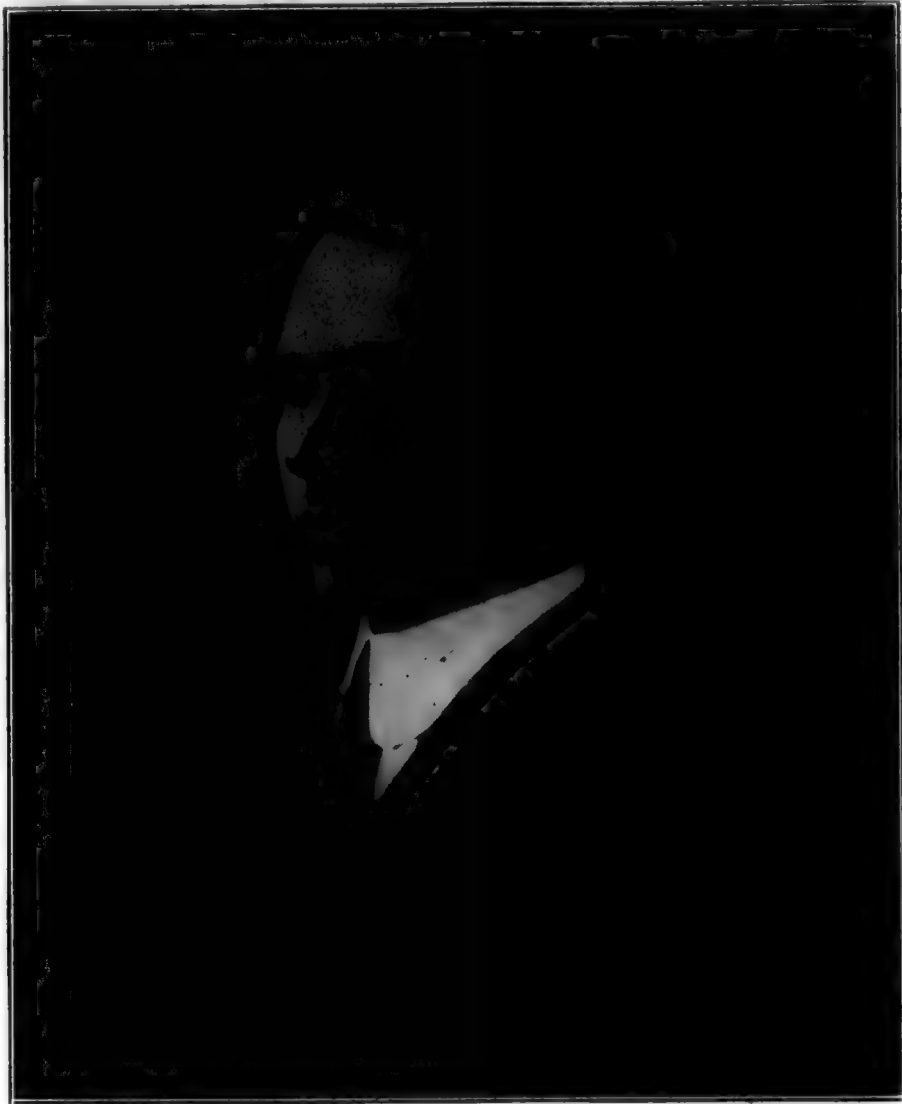

We suggest that the florists of the state devote a small amount of space to the use of commercial fertilizers, and we recommend that the following applications be the basis of the work, as they may be considered safe in the average soil:

- Dried blood, 2 to 4 lbs. per 100 sq. ft. bench, 5 in. deep.
- Ammonium sulphate, 1½ to 3 lbs. per 100 sq. ft.
- Acid phosphate, ½ to 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.
- Potassium sulphate, ½ to 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.
- Manure to be applied at rate of about 3 to 4 bu. per 100 sq. ft.

From the work carried on, it has been found that ammonium sulphate gives the same results as dried blood and so the two may be used interchangeably. Both are used to supply nitrogen. The only noticeable difference in the use of the two substances is that the soil dries out sooner where ammonium sulphate is used.

In applying these fertilizers we recommend that the entire amounts of acid phosphate, potassium sulphate and about one-fourth of the dried blood or ammonium sulphate be incorporated with the soil before planting. If the fertilizer be applied after the soil is in the bench, it should be allowed to stand for a day or two before planting, to avoid any possible corrosive action on the roots by the fertilizer. The remainder of the dried blood may be added in two or three applications, as desired.

If it is found, as the season advances, that the amount of fertilizer applied is insufficient, more may be added as a top-dressing and worked into the soil. In this case, as in the first application, care must be exercised not to apply it in too large a quantity, or damage will result.

Effects of Excess of Fertilizer.

In rearranging the experiments in house No. 2, it was found advisable to devote some space to a test of the effects of an overapplication of fertilizer. Eighty feet of bench was set aside for this purpose. This was divided into eight sections, four of which were planted with White Perfection and four with White Enchantress. Fertilizers were applied as follows:

- Manure at rate 125 lbs. per 100 sq. ft.
- Dried blood, 4 lbs. per 100 sq. ft.
- Acid phosphate, 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.
- Potassium sulphate, 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.

This combination was applied to all the sections with the exception of one control in each variety, which contained only the amount of natural manure applied to all. After the plants were established, two sections were given weekly applications of dried blood, two were given acid phosphate and two potassium sulphate. Up to date, fourteen applications, amounting to fifteen pounds per forty square feet of bench space, have been applied. This is at the rate of thirty-seven and one-half pounds per 100 square feet.

Observations taken in the house show no appreciable differences as yet in the sections with large quantities of phosphorus and potassium.

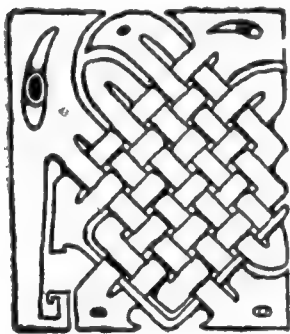

In the heavy nitrogen sections the foliage appears to be a little bluer. The stems, however, are much weaker, as is shown by the table, and more flowers are soft and imperfect. The petals do not have the finish of those of the control sections.

Commercial vs. Natural Manures.

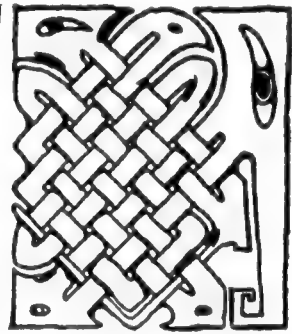

The object of this experiment is to compare carnations grown with commercial fertilizers with those grown with natural manures. In this experiment, as in the former, White Perfection and White Enchantress were used. Each variety had two sections, containing 264 plants. One section in each variety was devoted to commercial fertilizers and the other to natural manures.

In the commercial fertilizer section the following quantities were used:

STATE AID FOR FLORICULTURE

WORK AT EXPERIMENT STATION.

[A report by Prof. H. B. Dörner, of the experiment station at Urbana, Ill., read at the convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Joliet, March 5, 1912.]

As a representative of the University of Illinois, I beg to present the following report on the work being carried on at the florists' experimental greenhouses at Urbana. This work is a continuation of that of the last two years and is under the direction of your advisory committee.

Department Staff.

During the last year it was thought advisable to add a pathologist to the staff of the department. As a result, H. W. Anderson was appointed an assistant in the department and is devoting his time to the study of the diseases of floricultural crops. At the present time he is studying the stem rot and other diseases of the carnation. More will be said about this subject later.

The increase of work in the department, in the instructional as well as the experimental side, has made it necessary to secure additional assistance in the greenhouses. The services of James Hutchinson, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., have been secured and he is taking charge of the greenhouse and outdoor work.

As the instructional work has greatly increased, it is necessary to devote more time to it and so an attempt is being made to secure a scientifically trained man to assist in the experimental work.

Instructional Work.

During the last year sixty-eight students received instruction in several of the lines of work offered in floriculture. During the present year ninety-one students have enrolled for various lines of work. It is hoped that this number will increase from year to year. The work offered will be much improved when the new houses, for which money was appropriated this past year, are erected.

New Greenhouses.

The new houses to be erected will consist of show houses and will be connected with the experimental range. It is hoped that these houses will not only aid in the instruction of students intending to follow commercial work, but will admit of the offering of courses of interest to students wishing to take up work on private estates.

The work on the construction of the new houses has been delayed, owing to the question of the future development of the university campus. The rearrangement of the campus and the location of new buildings may make it necessary to move the present experimental houses. It is expected that this will be decided soon and so will in no way affect the experimental work. If the houses are moved it will be to the opposite side of the campus, on a site much better fitted for the work than that at present occupied.

The experimental work on fertilizers has been carried on by Mr. Nehrling and the writer. Mr. Nehrling for the last two years has been in charge of the greater portion of the experimental work. The report on the following work, then, is to be considered as a joint report with Mr. Nehrling.

Varying Quantities of Fertilizer.

The work in this part of the experiment is a duplication of the work of 1909-10 and 1910-11. This duplication is necessary, for in all experimental work of this type it is necessary to repeat the work for three or four years before any definite conclusions can be drawn. The report upon this part of the work will be brief, as a circular is now in preparation and it is hoped that it will be ready for distribution this spring. During the season of 1909-10 records were taken on 47,729 carnations, and during 1910-11 on 42,425. This data must be studied and many tables constructed for comparison.

The Object.

The object of the experiment is to determine whether as good or better carnations can be grown with the use of commercial fertilizers instead of natural manures. It must be kept in mind that humus is necessary in all soils for the best results, and so all manure cannot be dispensed with unless the humus is applied in some other form. This humus is necessary for the development of the bacteria which help to make available the nutritive substances in the soil. For the experiment a small quantity of manure was used to supply this necessary humus.

By previous experiments it was decided that the best commercial fertilizers to supply the needed elements were dried blood and ammonium sulphate for nitrogen, acid phosphate for phosphorus and potassium sulphate for potassium. In the experiment these were applied to all but the control sections, in order to determine if possible in what proportion they are best suited to the carnation.

For the experiment the following amounts of fertilizer were selected as units of application:

Dried blood, 2 lbs. per 100 sq. ft. bench, soil 5 in. deep.
Am. sulphate, 1½ lbs. per 100 sq. ft.
Acid phosphate, ½ lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Potassium sulphate, ½ lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Manure, 115 lbs. or about 3½ bu. per 100 sq. ft.

The standard application, then, included these fertilizers at the rates mentioned. Dried blood was used for the nitrogen except in a few sections, where ammonium sulphate was used in its place. The control sections had the same amount of manure, but no commercial fertilizers.

The commercial fertilizers in the other sections were doubled and quadrupled singly, in pairs and all together. This, then, gave combinations of varying amounts for the study of the quantity of each necessary.

The Cut.

The varieties originally selected for this work were White Perfection, Beacon, Enchantress and Winsor. Winsor was discarded at the end of the second year, on account of the excessive amount of stem-rot. It was replaced by White Enchantress, which does not appear in the tables, as it was used for the comparison of the commercial fertilizers and natural manures.

The following table shows the entire cut by varieties for the two years and also the average number of flowers per plant. These numbers are not as great as they would be if all the plants were under the best possible cultural conditions.

Average for 1910-11 is for October to May 1.

It is interesting to note that in the Enchantress rust is more abundant in the sections containing four units of nitrogen. This is in accordance with the observations of other experimentalists.

As far as can be determined at present, the results verify the statement made last year, that just as good flowers can be grown with commercial fertilizers. It yet remains to be determined whether better flowers can be obtained.

Commercial Fertilizers Are Strong.

However, in the case of commercial fertilizers, it must be borne in mind that they are extremely concentrated and so must be used with caution. An injudicious use of these fertilizers will be followed by greater disaster than in the case of natural manures.

According to the results secured from the work at the experiment station, we consider that it would be advisable to use chemical fertilizers in the growing of carnations. We recommend, however, that only a small area be devoted to their trial during the first year. This is essential, as there must, first, be a decision as to what amount may be applied to the particular soil used. A chemical analysis will not show how much fertilizer need be applied, as an analysis shows the entire amount of an element in the soil and not the amount that will be available during the year. The amount required must, then, be determined by experimentation.

What Florists Should Try.

We suggest that the florists of the state devote a small amount of space to the use of commercial fertilizers, and we recommend that the following applications be the basis of the work, as they may be considered safe in the average soil:

Dried blood, 2 to 4 lbs. per 100 sq. ft. bench, 5 in. deep.
Ammonium sulphate, 1½ to 3 lbs. per 100 sq. ft.
Acid phosphate, ½ to 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Potassium sulphate, ½ to 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Manure to be applied at rate of about 3 to 4 bu. per 100 sq. ft.

From the work carried on, it has been found that ammonium sulphate gives the same results as dried blood and so the two may be used interchangeably. Both are used to supply nitrogen. The only noticeable difference in the use of the two substances is that the soil dries out sooner where ammonium sulphate is used.

In applying these fertilizers we recommend that the entire amounts of acid phosphate, potassium sulphate and about one-fourth of the dried blood or ammonium sulphate be incorporated with the soil before planting. If the fertilizer be applied after the soil is in the bench, it should be allowed to stand for a day or two before planting, to avoid any possible corrosive action on the roots by the fertilizer. The remainder of the dried blood may be added in two or three applications, as desired.

If it is found, as the season advances, that the amount of fertilizer applied is insufficient, more may be added as a top-dressing and worked into the soil. In this case, as in the first application, care must be exercised not to apply it in too large a quantity, or damage will result.

Effects of Excess of Fertilizer.

In rearranging the experiments in house No. 2, it was found advisable to devote some space to a test of the effects of an overapplication of fertilizer. Eighty feet of bench was set aside for this purpose. This was divided into eight sections, four of which were planted with White Perfection and four with White Enchantress. Fertilizers were applied as follows:

Manure at rate 125 lbs. per 100 sq. ft.
Dried blood, 4 lbs. per 100 sq. ft.
Acid phosphate, 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Potassium sulphate, 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.

This combination was applied to all the sections with the exception of one control in each variety, which contained only the amount of natural manure applied to all. After the plants were established, two sections were given weekly applications of dried blood, two were given acid phosphate and two potassium sulphate. Up to date, fourteen applications, amounting to fifteen pounds per forty square feet of bench space, have been applied. This is at the rate of thirty seven and one-half pounds per 100 square feet.

A HOUSE OF HYDRANGEAS.

The Floracraft Greenhouses, erected by Walter P. Stokes on the grounds adjoining his home at Moorestown, N. J., are famous for lily of the valley, for ferns and for hydrangeas. The hydran-geas for several years have been marvels of cultural skill—dwarf, uniform, many large flowers, finely colored. Edward Ross is justly proud of the stock under his care, which is worth going a long way to see. Phil.

Killarney splendid varieties to grow instead of Bride and Bridesmaid. They succeed best in a night temperature of 56 to 58 degrees, but will be more satisfactory than the two older sorts you now have at the warmer end of your carnation house. C. W.

RAMBLER ROSES.

Rambler roses which are now showing color will be all right for Easter. They will stand a brisk, moist heat until the flowers are expanding, but are, of course, better not grown under these conditions. Plants grown in a night temperature of not over 55 degrees are far better than such as are grown 5 to 10 degrees warmer. Tausendschon flowers earlier than any of the other ramblers and continues as popular as ever. The demand for it the coming Easter promises to be greater than ever. Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay produce larger trusses of smaller flowers, but somehow the larger flowers of the Tausendschon seem to add to its popularity. Crimson Rambler, which once filled the center of the stage, is now seen but little. How have the mighty fallen! Who, a decade ago, could have predicted that this popular rose would be practically dropped commercially? American Pillar is a coming rose. Those who have not got it should secure stock for another season, as it is the finest single rose we have today for pot culture.

The present is an opportune time to do some propagating of ramblers. Select wood which is about half ripened; the cuttings can have two eyes each. Shorten back the leaves and insert the cuttings in a cutting bench where a bottom heat of 60 to 65 degrees is maintained. Keep the cuttings well watered and shaded and keep indoors in pots until the middle of June. If at that time they are plunged in an old hotbed up to the brims and can be watered and syringed when necessary, they will make a surprising growth before fall, far better than if they were planted outdoors, and furthermore, when kept in pots, they are much better adapted for early forcing than field-grown stock.

SUNBURST IN ENGLAND.

M. Pernet-Ducher could not have entrusted the American rights for selling his new rose, Sunburst, to better hands than those of E. G. Hill, of Richmond, U. S. A., as this gentleman just knows how to make a rose move, and, from what I hear, its sale over there is going strong. And can we wonder at it? Why, those who have seen the rose in its home at Lyons, and also as exhibited by Messrs. G. Beckwith & Sons, of Hoddesden, would not hesitate to go in largely for it. It was quite amusing, were there no other motive behind it, to see some of the trade growers trying to ban the rose by withholding the gold medal. As if such petty jealousy could keep back such a variety from popular favor! I say that gold medal or no gold medal, if a rose has real merit, it is bound to forge ahead. Why, this gold medal business is a farce, and the way the work is scrambled through by the judges is anything but creditable to the great society, the National Rose Society of England.—Rosarian in H. T. J.

IN LIEU OF BRIDE AND MAID.

The small grower sometimes finds it necessary to grow a few roses on the warmest bench in his carnation house. Bride and Maid seem to be "playing out." Will any of the newer roses give as good results as these two varieties in a carnation temperature? If so, please name them and give any special treatment they require.

TRAINED ROSES.

The desire for novelty in Easter plants has found effective expression in the trained rose. Strong plants of the Wichuraiana type readily adapt themselves to this purpose. The basket rose has been more in demand this season than ever before in Philadelphia. Its success depends on the growers absolutely, for the symmetrical shape depends on propagating, selection and pruning. The basket rose is trained so that the basket is a reality, heavy shoots forming the base in such a way as to support a medium sized pot in the center. This enables the use of a blooming plant of some other variety in the rose basket, so that the other flowers look as though growing in a bed of roses. The covered umbrella is an umbrella trained rose with the stem or handle garlanded or twined with roses. This requires skill, and for these plants an additional $2 is paid over that paid for the plain umbrellas. I am indebted to Robert A. Craig for the photographs of named roses. They have proved extremely popular this season, all his plants being ordered by March 16, and he had a good many of them. Phil.

IMPERFECT W. R. SMITH BUDS.

I have four beds of roses planted outside for cut flowers. The varieties are Cochet, white and pink; Wm. R. Smith and Rhea Reid. They were planted last spring from 2½-inch pots. The soil is good clay subsoil. Two years ago I cleared the ground, which had never been cultivated, and planted it in potatoes. I had the ground well cultivated and in fine shape before planting the roses. Then I put them in beds six feet wide and 200 feet long, leaving three feet between the beds. They were planted twelve inches apart in the bed. I cultivated them until about August, when I gave them a 3-inch mulch of manure from the horse stable, which had lost most of its heat. In the latter part of the season I was prepared to water them, pumping from a pond and watering with a hose. The plants for the most part grew finely and blossomed profusely, throwing up good canes. This was especially true of the Wm. R. Smith. Many of the best buds, however, opened with a green center, looking as though the leaves were going to come out of the center of the blossom and would spoil it. I should like to know what caused that and what would be the remedy.

When the ground became frozen I put on a covering of straw for winter protection. I notice now that the plants have winter-killed back to within about three or four inches of the ground. Will it be necessary to remove the covering entirely and cultivate the ground, or can it remain to assist in keeping down vegetation? Will the mulch of horse manure be sufficient fertilizer, or should something more be added? I do not want to spare any pains that would give me best results. Any information or suggestion will be appreciated. I am located in eastern Missouri. F. M. D.

The soil in which these roses are planted is apparently lacking in the necessary constituents to develop perfect flowers. Judicious use of air-slaked lime from time to time, spread over the surface of the soil and worked in, might be beneficial. If possible, water these beds with nitrate of soda in liquid form, using the equivalent of a 3-inch pot of this fertilizer to a barrel of water. Water them once a week after vigorous root action has commenced, for about five weeks.

Do not remove the winter protection too soon. Let it stay on until early in April; then take it off entirely, giving a good mulching of well rotted cow manure. Stir the soil well near the surface, and this is to be incorporated into the soil, as it rots with the application of air-slaked lime, followed by the watering with liquid nitrate of soda. BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Abraham Moltz, doing business as A. Moltz & Co., wholesale florist, at 57 West Twenty-sixth street, by these creditors: Jacob Kopp, $200; Alfred Gill, $200, and David Urdang, $200. Liabilities are said to be $6,000 and assets $2,500. A petition in bankruptcy was filed January 12 against the firm of A. Moltz & Co., which was dismissed shortly afterwards, as it was claimed they were solvent. The increase in liabilities since then has in part been due to certain newspaper publishers letting their desire to make a showing outweigh their natural caution.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—William H. Gilbert has been appointed receiver of the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., under a bond for $10,000. The court made the appointing order upon the petition of Samuel J. Perry and Edward E. Taylor, two of the principal stockholders in the concern. It is claimed in the petition that the winter has been disastrous, the excessive and protracted cold weather costing the company thousands of dollars in anticipated profits. The receiver will be expected to conduct the business until next fall, when it is thought that the property controlled by the company can be disposed of to the best advantage, at which time it is probable that the company will be dissolved and the assets divided among the stockholders.

TREATMENT OF FREESIAS.

I was much interested in the article on page 21 of The Review of March 7, about D. F. C.'s Purity freesias that did not flower. We grew Purity freesias this winter and had splendid success with them. They had 12-inch spikes, in fine form. Perhaps it will do no harm to tell something about our experience with them. Freesias are an African bulb and not in any way hardy. We get the first-size bulbs from an eastern wholesaler in August.

The Umbrella Handle is Entwined.

We plant them in flats, fairly close, and then leave them in the greenhouse in a temperature of about 60 degrees. A slightly higher temperature does not harm them; 45 degrees is too cold and they will blast at 30 degrees.

We never water any of our bulbs with ice-cold water, but keep a few barrels filled; it pays. This winter, being in a hurry one January day, I watered a batch of tulips with ice-cold water from the hose, and every one of them blasted. Cold weather or frost does not hurt a bulb until it starts to grow; after that it pays to keep them growing. Use water from which the chill has been removed. Give liquid manure twice a week, about the color of brandy. One must always remember that success cannot be achieved without work. Fred Clark.

NO FREESIAS AND FEW LILIES.

We noticed in The Review of March 7, page 21, an inquiry under the head of "Freesias Not Flowering," and we have some of the same experience to report. Our freesias made a fine start after being planted in 4-inch pots and they duly developed a splendid growth, attaining a height of fourteen to sixteen inches, but never a flower! The soil was a fine, sandy compost, containing plenty of humus, and excellent hyacinths, daffodils, etc., were grown in the same soil.

Our Formosa lilies also seemed to be quite erratic, only about one-sixth of them blooming; the few flowers we got were beautiful. They all made a start and they were all planted at the same time, with conditions precisely alike. Some of them grew two inches and then stopped; others grew six or eight inches and stopped. Those which bloomed made fine plants, averaging eighteen inches tall. Can any reader of The Review tell us the reason for the trouble?

G. G. & S.

HYACINTHS DOING POORLY.

I am sending you, under separate cover, three hyacinth bulbs. Any information as to what is wrong with them will be greatly appreciated. The hyacinths were planted in October in flats and buried in about eight inches of soil. Early in November we had severe weather and upon examining is no removal of snow, straw coverings or frozen earth necessary before they can be removed. Another year see if you cannot find space in a cellar for your Dutch bulbs and you will save yourself labor and have first-class bulbs which the frost cannot injure. C. W.

ASTER BEETLES.

I have been much troubled with the yellows among asters on clay ground, losing an average of one-third of the crop. I tried a light sprinkling of lime on clay ground, working it in before planting. As a result, the disease was confined to about five per cent of the crop. There are some in the trade offering prepared lime for florists' use, and I presume it would be worth while for those who grow in quantity to give the lime a trial. Of course, plenty of manure is necessary for asters in every case, but, needless to say, it should be well rotted. Above all other flower crops, asters need a change of soil every season.

In all that is written on the aster, no one seems to tell us the cheapest and best way to get rid of the black bug that gives so much trouble late in the season. E. F.

Where a few plants only are grown, hand-picking for the aster beetle is usually resorted to, but this is impossible where large batches are grown. I find that the best remedy, and one which never fails to work satisfactorily, is to spray the plants with Paris green and water, at the rate of one ounce to fifteen gallons of water. A little lime added to the water lessens the danger of burning the flowers or foliage. Do not spray during bright sunshine. Always use a fine spray nozzle and be sure, especially, to wet every flower. The beetles will not trouble you after one good spraying. The Paris green may slightly color the white flowers, but dip them in a pail or tub of water and they will lose all trace of it. Arsenate of lead can not be used, as it whitens the foliage and spoils colored flowers. C. W.

FARQUHAR'S ITALIAN GARDEN.

Horticultural hall, in Boston, surely never presented a more beautiful and better furnished appearance than when the doors were thrown open March 15 for a view of the elaborate and tastefully arranged Italian garden which occupies the entire main exhibition hall and loggia. Work on this mammoth undertaking has been in progress for about a month. The structural work was in itself a big task, as a wide balcony has been built, which, entered from the loggia, goes around the entire hall except where the musicians' gallery is located. On the outer side of the balcony is a balustrade covered with a beautiful arrangement of flowering plants and vines, while at the back is a towering mass of evergreens and deciduous flowering shrubs, among them found that they had made good roots but were frozen solid. We then set them in a cold house, covering them lightly. The weather became more severe and froze them harder. We then took them into a house at 45 degrees and buried them about six inches deep under a bench, which has no radiation under it. You can see by sample in what condition they came out. Did the freezing do the harm? S. C.

The two hard freezings to which the hyacinths were subjected were undoubtedly the principal reason for the failure. They will withstand severe freezings outdoors and come through all right if well mulched, but in flats or pans it is otherwise. It is still a common practice to bury bulbs outdoors, cover with soil and later protect them with straw, leaves, boards and other material. While bulbs thus treated do well, it is often a disagreeable matter to get them out in winter, and many of the most up-to-date growers, at least in the colder states, now stand all their bulbs in cellars which are frostproof, or nearly so, without the use of fire heat. Stock of just as fine quality can be grown from bulbs stored in this way. They are readily accessible at all times and there which large numbers of splendidly flowered forsythias, ten to twelve feet high, are notable. At the extreme end of the hall an immense painting of an Italian villa, with cypresses and other necessary settings, rises to the top of the hall, and, on either side, the great banks of growing trees and shrubs are so effectively grouped that it is hard to tell where the living trees end and the painting begins. At one end of the balcony, running parallel with the stairs, is a stepped balustrade of dripping water falling down shell-like troughs into one of the many pools on the floor of the hall.

Around the hall, including the steps leading from the loggia, are a number of statues quite recently imported from Italy and loaned for this occasion, including life-sized figures of men and women symbolic of horticulture, and various animals, including lions, wolves, horses and bulls in combat. Thousands upon thousands of pots, pans and boxes of flowering and foliage plants were necessary to give the desired floral display. Immense numbers of tulips, both early and Darwin varieties; hyacinths, narcissi, Primula vulgaris, Primula obconica, schizanthus, Azalea Kämpferi, Elliottiana and Godfrey callas, Lilium candidum and the newer L. myriophyllum, Lorraine begonias, cyclamens, Daphne cneorum, acacias, marguerites, wistarias, clivias, amaryllis, lilacs, lily of the valley, kerrias, roses and other blooming plants were used, while vines in great numbers, cedars, bays, boxes and other evergreens in hundreds were needed.

An electrical fountain facing the loggia, with ever changing lights, was quite an attraction, and several other fountains were playing in the various pools of water. The lights were so arranged around the sides of the balcony and elsewhere as to give the best possible effect, and under artificial light the scene was simply enchanting.

All of this immense undertaking was carried out by the firm of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. James Farquhar worked like a veritable Trojan throughout, and both he and his brother, John, richly deserve the many encomiums heaped upon them, for this is unquestionably the biggest individual horticultural exhibit ever put up in America, and we doubt if even in Europe it has been surpassed. This exhibition will be open until March 31, and all proceeds will go to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to form the nucleus of a fund for the reconstruction of Horticultural hall. The Japanese garden, constructed three years ago and run in conjunction with the spring flower show, netted the society $5,000 and from the way the public is visiting this much bigger exhibit, a handsome sum will be cleared. VALUE OF DAHLIA CUTTINGS.

Could you please give me some information in regard to what it is worth to root dahlia cuttings? The party is to furnish the tubers, and I to take cuttings and root them. Any information in regard to this will be thankfully received. T. H.

It is worth more to root dahlias than geraniums, chrysanthemums or carnations. You should get $3 per hundred for all rooted cuttings, and when the likelihood of considerable numbers damping off is considered, this price is a moderate one. W. C.

A POOR HYACINTH CROP.

Will you kindly inform us what to do for hyacinths, to make them bloom more heavily? We potted them in October in good, rich hotbed soil and put them in a dark basement, and have been taking them out since the first part of February. The blooms seem to be too scattering on the stalk. The temperature in the house has been about 50 degrees in the daytime and 48 degrees at night. Do you think it the fault of the bulbs or have we not handled them right? L. A. E. & S.

If by hotbed soil you mean the decayed manure from the beds, you have been using compost which is a little too strong for your bulbs. If you had taken two-thirds loam, one-third of the thoroughly decayed hotbed manure and a good dash of sharp sand, you would have had an excellent soil for hyacinths. Bulbs planted in October should, in proper compost and with the right treatment, flower well. Are you sure they had plenty of water? Did you cover them with cinders, and were they standing where they could get any drying heat from a furnace? They should have a cellar or basement which is cool and where no fire heat is used. In a warm cellar they would do unsatisfactorily. Your soil may be at fault, you may have given insufficient water, or you may have kept them too warm. Perhaps all three causes may have combined to cause the failure. C. W.

Carnations

A FORMULA FOR THRIPS.

What is a good method of keeping thrips off carnations after planting them outdoors? Some time ago the following was recommended to me for thrips, for inside use: One pound of Paris green, one pound of brown sugar and twenty gallons of water. Isn't this pretty strong? Was 200 gallons of water intended? R. E. M.

The formula recommended to you is correct and, if applied with a very fine spray, will not injure your plants. Be sure that the solution is even, as the Paris green does not mix with water readily. The brown sugar will help to do that, however. A. F. J. B.

FIT FOR PROPAGATION?

Today I am sending you some shoots of carnations and should like to know whether they are affected with stigmonose. If so, are they too much affected to be propagated from? S. H.

The specimens forwarded were slightly affected with stigmonose, but unless the growth shows more than these shoots do, I would not hesitate to propagate from the plants, avoiding those which show more spots than others. If you can get enough shoots which are entirely free from these spots, it will, of course, be wise to use them. It is getting a trifle late to put in carnation cuttings for best results, but if the cuttings are strong and they receive proper care, they will make fair stock. I do not know what variety these specimens are, but if you bought new stock you would probably get cuttings with as much or more of this disease in them than yours have. It is almost impossible to find any considerable amount of stock of a few of the older varieties which is entirely free from this disease. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE AND FAIRY RING.

Under separate cover I am mailing you samples of Lady Bountiful stems, which are affected with disease. There seem to be two different diseases. Please tell whether I am correct or not. I call one a fungous disease and the other bacteria. Any information will be greatly appreciated. F. A. C.

There are two distinct diseases on the specimens forwarded, namely, stigmonose and fairy ring. The fairy ring is a fungous disease and will need vigorous action without delay, or you will suffer great damage from it. Spray your plants heavily with Bordeaux mixture, after first picking off all the affected leaves. After a week wash them off with the hose, and apply another dose as soon as the plants have dried off somewhat. The stigmonose you can eradicate only through the selection of your cuttings. Take only such as show no traces of these light spots and in a few seasons you will have your stock clean, providing you keep away the same agents that introduced the disease this time. A. F. J. B.

INSECT APPARENTLY HARMLESS.

On the soil in my benches and pots I find hundreds of small "hoppers" of a dark slate color. They are about the size of thrips, but plumper and wingless. The eggs seem to be at the surface of the soil. The microscope does not reveal any punctures in the plants. Fumigation does not seem to affect them. What are they and are they injurious? They are most abundant where the soil contains the most manure. R. E. M.

I am not acquainted with the insects which you describe. If you can see no damage done by them, I would not worry over their presence. Possibly a dressing of pulverized tobacco would destroy them. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE.

Knowing that you answer questions for those who are in trouble, I am taking the liberty of sending you some leaves of Enchantress carnations. You will see they are dried up at the ends. I can not find any red spider, but I do see an occasional green fly. It seems to me, however, that the green flies would have to be quite plentiful to cause this trouble, as it appears here and there all over two benches in one house. This house is 20x100, three-quarter span, with the long span to the south. It is five feet high to the gutters, and boarded. The ventilators are hinged to the ridge, and on bright days they could not be opened wide enough on account of drafts, so the temperature would sometimes run to 75 or 80 degrees. The soil is a clay loam, mixed with rotted cow manure, and was mulched with rotted cow manure about February 15. H. G. A.

The specimens were affected with stigmonose, and it is just a question of how much stigmonose there is in your stock as to whether you can safely propagate from it for next season. When the tip of a leaf dries up, it is because the disease has spread across the entire breadth of the leaf and shut off the sap from the end of the leaf. The green fly is most likely the agent which inoculated the plants with the disease. A. F. J. B.

DETERIORATION OF STOCK.

I am sending under separate cover three Bassett carnations and one White Lawson. Why do about one-third of the blooms in the Bassett bench come striped and of poor color, like the sample? Would too much radiation under this bench, necessitating heavy watering, cause this? If so, does the dryness or the moisture cause the poor color? The soil is the same as on other benches in the same house, where the stock is doing finely. We keep the temperature at 48 to 52 degrees at night and ventilate freely during warm days. We gave the Bassetts some soot, with no effect. Among our White Lawson, White Enchantress and White Perfection we have, however, about one bloom in fifty affected in the same way as this one. The outside petals seem to be soft and of no substance, drying up before the rest of the flower matures. The carnation does not close up, as in the case of thrips. We have examined them closely and can find no cause. L. A. H.

The specimens forwarded did not reach me, but from your description of your trouble I judge that it is caused by deterioration of the variety. O. P. Bassett is quite susceptible to stigmonose, and we found the same trouble with it when we grew it. Unless the variety does better with you in the way of freedom in flowering than with most of the growers who tried it, I would advise you to discard it and get a better one. A. F. J. B.

DISEASE STUDIES AT URBANA.

A Disease of Enchantress.

One disease, the cause of which is not yet known, has been especially destructive to the foliage of the Pink Enchantress in the station greenhouse. On the leaves of many of these plants pale green areas, circular in form, varying from 1/16-inch to 1/4-inch, were first observed some weeks ago. These areas became more sharply defined and turned to a yellowish green and finally to a yellow color. They also enlarged and elongated. The epidermis over the younger spots remained unbroken and the leaf was normal, but later the tissue beneath these areas collapsed and soon the epidermis became yellow and broken. As a result of these many diseased areas, the leaf often wilted and shriveled up. At first this was thought to be the disease known as "stigmomose" or "bacteriose," but samples of the plant sent to the authority who worked out the cause of the above disease, brought the answer that it was not the same disease. Further observation on these plants reveal the fact that many of them had been attacked by red spider, but whether this was the cause of this peculiar disease or not we will not attempt to say at this time. We attempted to transfer this disease to other plants, but failed. No fungus or bacterium could be found associated with it. Cuttings from plants so affected died before they had a chance to form roots.

Another disease sent me by a well known florist has been received from two other sources since. The carnation plants suffering from this disease have an unusually large stem from the branches down and there are often swellings or tumors—rough, wart-like bodies arising from the stem near the surface of the ground. These tumors remind one of the galls in the disease known as the crown gall. But not all plants have these galls, although affected by this disease. The roots of these plants are unusually large and stalky, but when broken they reveal a brown rotted area in the center which extends from the end of the roots up to the main stem. A cross section of the stem also shows a brown rotted area beneath the bark and often extending well into the wood of the stem. The cause of this disease was not determined, since at the time of receiving these specimens our laboratory was not yet equipped with apparatus necessary for this sort of work.

Material Wanted for Study.

The two diseases of carnations given above are of especial interest to us, since they have never been described, and they may later become of great economic importance to the carnation growers of the state. For this reason we would appreciate material or information concerning these troubles. Especially would we like some plants sent to us suffering from either of the above diseases.

One of the Houses of the Dille Floral Co., Greensburg, Ind.

Diseases of various other plants have been given attention in our laboratory, but for the most part these have been either local or well known diseases, and we have answered inquiries concerning them by letter. A disease of palm (Kentia Belmoreana), due to a fungus called Gloeosporium, which caused a rotting off of the plant at the surface of the ground, was of especial interest.

Our laboratory is now fully equipped and we desire material of all sorts from the florists of the state. Our desire is to become acquainted with your troubles, and although we cannot promise instant relief we hope to be able to give you definite information upon which you can depend. All material sent to us should be packed in the same manner you would prepare cut flowers for shipment. We concern ourselves only with diseases due to fungous attacks, but plants will be examined and if we believe the trouble is due to insects we will place the material in the hands of the entomologist, who will answer your inquiries. Material may be sent by express at our expense. The address is Floricultural Experiment Station, University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill. Pack plants to arrive in a fresh condition.

AN INDIANA PLANT.

The middle west is becoming thickly dotted with prosperous establishments of moderate size, catering to the wholesale and retail demand, a typical one of these being shown in the accompanying illustrations. This is the range of the Dille Floral Co., of Greensburg, Ind. The business was built up through the joint efforts of J. L. Dille and his wife, but Mrs. Dille died February 3, leaving Mr. Dille not only with the care of the plant but also with two small children. A married daughter, Mrs. Max Bardoch, lives at 1306 Granville avenue, Chicago.

The range consists of four up-to-date houses each 27x145, a violet house on the north 6x75, and a propagating house. The range is heated by a No. 13 Kroe-schell boiler with the threaded boiler tube system of piping and a generator to put the water under pressure. The property, which directly adjoins the city limits, consists of twenty acres of fine soil. The principal crop is carnations, with a few roses, violets and some early mums.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Marguerites.

Few plants require a larger supply of water than marguerites. Several waterings daily are necessary to keep them fresh. One good drying out means the loss of many flowers. On the other hand, be careful if you use saucers under your plants not to allow them to become water-logged or the foliage will speedily become golden. There are few better Easter plants than marguerites. It is true they need considerable bench space to do them justice, and watering can never be neglected, but they are easily grown plants, decorative and last exceptionally well in dwelling houses. The new double white marguerite, Mrs. Sander, when it really comes double, is fine. The flowers resemble a good double pyrethrum, but a large proportion come single. Personally, however, I think the singles are an improvement on Queen Alexandra and make splendid Easter plants. If it were only possible to grow the yellow varieties as easily, and if they made as symmetrical plants as the white varieties, they would have a great sale. As a rule, however, they do not produce shapely plants and are better adapted for cutting than for forcing into salable plants. Any late rooted stock should not be left in the cutting bench or in small pots too long. These will sell well at the bedding out season, and even if all are not sold then they can be planted outdoors and will make fine, bushy plants for lifting in the fall.

Dutch Bulbs for Easter.

All the Dutch bulbs should have been housed before this time. Much depends upon the weather in forcing this class of stock. It is, of course, better grown in a cool house, as it is then so much more stocky, but with a cold, dark spell, such as not infrequently occurs near Easter, some additional heat may be necessary. Many letters have come to hand of late describing bulbs plunged outdoors as doing poorly. The trouble has been that the severe frost has penetrated through coverings which it was imagined would be impervious, with the result that numerous batches have been frozen solid and either destroyed altogether or seriously injured. This plunging of bulbs outdoors may answer well when the winter is mild in the northern states, and may do nicely for the warmer states, but when the labor involved is considered, the trouble of digging out the stock in winter and the danger of losing a lot of it from frost, it is a wonder that any up-to-date growers can be found who will persist in carrying out what is largely an obsolete practice. Use a cellar without fire heat for the same bulbs and they will do just as well, can be retarded as late and are always get-at-able.

Easter Lilies.

March has given us some good sunshine, with more genial temperatures than we sometimes get, and lilies, in common with other plants, have come on quickly of late. Any with flowers opening must be kept quite cool. Those with buds showing white will also want to be held back a little, but those on which the buds are still green are a trifle late and must be hurried. Do not spare the fire heat and moisture on these laggards; 70 to 75 degrees at night is not too warm and the house can be closed early in the afternoon and the plants kept well sprayed. This sweating culture will soon open a lot of flowers. Remove the plants to cooler quarters when the first two flowers open. Be sure to keep the pollen masses removed, or, when syringing, the flowers will be much discolored. The best plan is to go over the plants once a day and remove the pollen wherever found.

Made up Lilies.

There are calls for pans and large pots of Easter lilies containing several stalks each. If these have not yet been made up, now is the time to do it, always selecting stalks carrying buds which will open simultaneously. If plants are tall, they must be staked. In fact, it is not safe to leave any lilies unsupported except the dwarf ones. Always use green painted stakes and do not tie them with white twine or even common raffia if you have green raffia. Don't be afraid to shake the soil off the roots when making up the lilies. Preserve, however, as many roots as you can and be sure to thoroughly soak the soil after potting.

Rhododendrons.

Rhododendrons open more rapidly than azaleas and when the trusses have their first flowers open they should be given a cool house in which to expand. Discontinue syringing when the flowers start to expand and be sure to always give the plants an adequate water supply. For the last few years Pink Pearl and White Pearl have brought fancy prices. They are certainly magnificent varieties and at the high class stores they always sell out quickly. Considering what the plants cost, there is not any too much profit in retailing them at $5 each, while the more every-day sorts can be sold at half this figure.

Lily of the Valley.

In the way of small plants, lily of the valley in pots or pans is one of the most popular at Easter. In order to have it in good condition the pips should not be kept in the dark too long. The long, weak, spindling specimens almost devoid of foliage none want, but plants plentifully clothed with rich, dark leaves will sell on sight. Give the plants a brisk heat, but near the light, until the flowers are partially expanded. Then place them in a house 10 degrees cooler. This will make the foliage and flowers stiffer and there will not be that wilting which is characteristic of the hard forced article. For cutting, the pips can be kept in the dark longer, but always admit more light after the flowers start to open or the foliage will be scant and the flower spikes will not stand up. Under benches is not the proper place to force valley. It may be all right to get the pips over the heating pipes, but either lift them to a lighter position in which to open, or better still, keep them up on a bench, where, while they can be darkened in the early stages of growth, they will have good light when it is really needed.

A HOUSE OF LILIES.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph taken March 12 at the establishment of Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia. The lilies are all of the multiflorum type, especially selected stock. They are perfectly healthy, of good height, and average five flowers to the plant. The house when photographed contained 4,000 plants. Phil.

TURNING WASTE TO PROFIT.

In the language of the epigrammatist, there is none so wise or capable that his equal or superior may not be found. Hence it is fair to assume that there is no process of the world's work so perfect that it cannot be improved upon. Every avenue of industry has gone through its various stages of evolution from primitive methods to the highest exemplification of mechanical labor-saving devices. This is an age of close investigation into matters touching men and methods; of searching, watching and probing; of instant application of means for reducing productive costs and increasing profits. This condition is the result of a gradual development under our competitive business system, wherein all of us are straining to escape the fate of the ninety-five per cent who fail.

Fortunes are made and lost every year in experimenting, having for its object the providing of short-cuts and quick-cuts, if we may use the term, between raw material and finished product. The elimination of human hands, skill and brains is being rapidly accomplished in all industrial pursuits, being replaced wherever possible by mechanical processes ranging from simple devices to complicated machinery of marvelous capacity. Edward Mott Woolley, in a recent number of System, has a highly instructive article on "The Wanton Waste of Labor," in which he calls attention to flagrant violation of accepted business ethics and points out how thousands of dollars annually could be saved by adopting mechanical means in many of our most important industries, in which the human equation is still an expensive and time-consuming factor.

Just as an illustration of how the florist may participate in the benefits of inventive activity, a picture is shown which nearly tells its own story. The device illustrated is known as the Mathews gravity soil carrier. Its function is to furnish a quicker and cheaper method of changing the soil in greenhouse benches. The carrier consists of ball-bearing steel rollers made of seamless steel tubing, the rollers being assembled in a rigidly braced steel frame, the frames being of a length easily handled. The photograph was taken in the greenhouses of Peirce Bros., Waltham, Mass., who, in reply to a letter from The Review asking how the apparatus works, write as follows: "We can say that this device has been found extremely satisfactory by us for removing soil from houses that can be opened at the sides. It is made in suitable lengths to be easily handled in moving from one place to another, is all ball-bearing and requires only the raising of one end to convey boxes full of soil to the outside of the house without handling, being carried by gravity. For a number of years we used a similar device with wood rollers, but must say that the ball-bearings and light though rigid construction of our present apparatus make it a much more satisfactory machine for the reduction of labor. We find it thoroughly practical and that it pays for itself many times over in its saving of labor."

The work of emptying and refilling the benches is the most laborious in the whole round of greenhouse operations and the big growers have tried a number of mechanical conveyors without finding anything heretofore that was sufficiently practical to be continued long in use. Hence the special interest that attaches to the Peirce use of the simple gravity device.

Geraniums

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I have some geraniums that are coming in bloom. When shall I quit taking buds in order to have nice blooms for Memorial day? — L. C.

Keep the flower trusses picked off your geraniums until five weeks before Memorial day. Give them a feeding with liquid manure or apply a little fine bone to the surface of the pots if they have the pots well filled with roots. The bone is excellent for promoting a short, stocky growth, productive of flowers rather than foliage. Apply a little once a fortnight to plants which require some feeding. C. W.

GERANIUM STOCK PLANTS.

I have 700 geraniums planted in the bench, from which I have taken cuttings this winter. Now I wish to use the bench and I wish to know what I should do with the plants. I have been thinking of taking them up, packing them in boxes and storing them in a light cellar until time to plant them out and use them for cuttings this fall.

G. L. E.

You could lift the stock plants, plant them in boxes and store them in a cool greenhouse or light cellar; or, better still, you could pot them singly. The latter plan would be much the better, as by using pots of moderate size and keeping the plants a few weeks in a greenhouse they would become nicely established and could then be moved to a coldframe to be gradually hardened off. If you do not care to go to the trouble of potting each off, you can adopt the boxing plan, but if you can spare a place for them in a cool house for a short time it would be a decided advantage.
C. W.

DISEASED FOLIAGE.

Kindly tell me what the white disease is on the edge of the enclosed leaves. Please state also the cause and remedy.
A. E. B.

The geranium leaf was attacked by a fungoid growth not uncommon at this season. Keep water off the foliage as much as you can, pick off affected leaves, keep the plants well spaced and run them a little drier at the root. A dry and airy atmosphere, with plenty of sun, is what the plants need. On the cyclamen and other leaves I could not detect any disease, but I noticed quite a few white flies on them. You should try to exterminate this pest, or it will speedily ruin much of your stock. Hydrocyanic acid gas, used as often recommended in The Review, is the only sure remedy for it. Choose a cool night for the operation, and, as this is a deadly gas, use the greatest caution when applying it.
C. W.

GERANIUM LEAVES TURN RED.

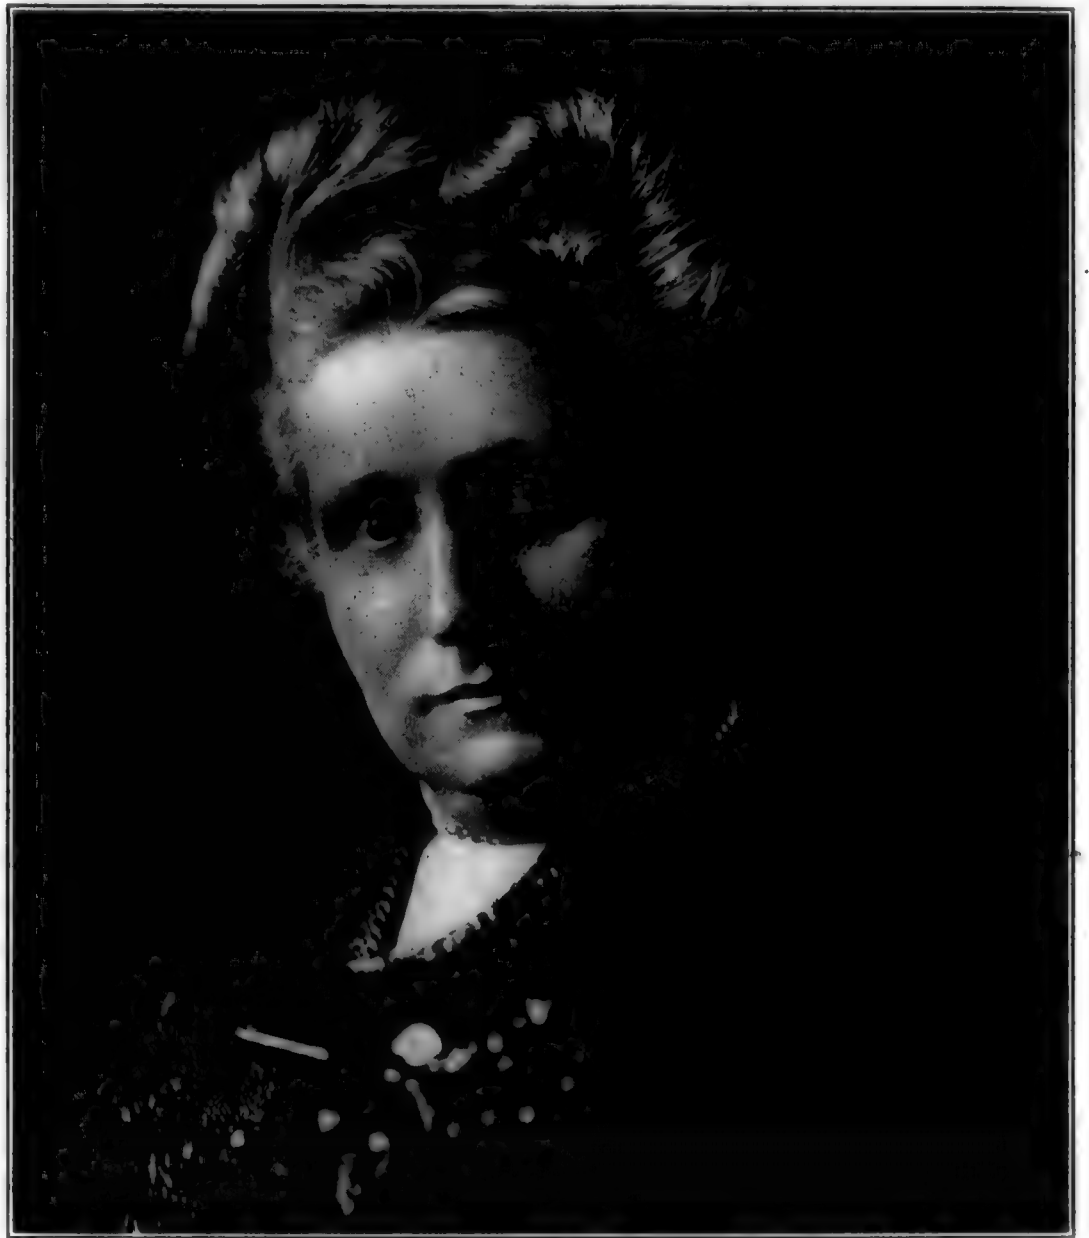

I should like to know what causes geranium leaves to turn red, like the enclosed sample.
F. D.

The most likely causes for the foliage turning red on geraniums are an inadequate water supply and lack of food in the soil. Some varieties, however, seem naturally to put on these autumnal foliage tints in winter and it is not always caused by either too little water or lack of feeding.
C. W.

DAISIES FOR THE GREENHOUSE.

Is there any kind of daisy that can be grown in the greenhouse?
C. G. P.

The word daisy, as a popular name, is applied more or less to quite a number of plants. The white and yellow marguerites are often called daisies and have the greatest commercial value of any of their class of flowers. Articles dealing on their culture appear from time to time in the columns of The Review. There are now both single and double forms of marguerites. The little double daisies which flower in spring, and are used in cemeteries and for spring bedding, can be grown in a cold greenhouse with pansies and violets. They are usually carried over, however, in coldframes. The Barber-ton daisy or gerbera and the newer dimorphothecas, also called South African daisies, are other representatives which are grown commercially in a moderate way; also various forms of Chrysanthemum maximum, commonly known as the Shasta daisy. The marguerites, however, are by far the most important from a florist's point of view.

C. W.

ANNUAL LUPINES FOR FORCING.

Can you give us information regarding the culture of lupines, stating how they are propagated and grown, the right temperatures and the varieties best suited for forcing?
L. C. S. & S.

Annual lupines are becoming more popular each year for forcing purposes. Of course, there is not the same demand for them as for roses, carnations and some other staples, but they are popular with critical flower buyers. Their culture is not at all difficult. They succeed well with snapdragons and annual larkspurs. A night temperature of 45 to 48 degrees is better than 50 to 52 degrees in winter, and during the darkest months I find they do particularly well on raised benches.

The early forcing varieties, such as Pink Beauty, Snowdrop and others, are easily flowered for Christmas. Seed should be sown in pots outdoors about August 10 and they should be transplanted into the benches a month or five weeks later. Succession batches can be started in pots or may be sown thinly in rows eighteen inches apart in the benches. L. mutabilis, pink and white, are not good midwinter bloomers, but after the end of February are fine. These require considerably more space than the more slender growing, early forcing sorts. After the main stem has been cut the plants break strongly and will furnish quite a number more flowering shoots. These do best in a night temperature of 45 degrees, although some growers get good success in a carnation temperature. The annual lupines are always propagated from seeds.

Gentlemen:

We wish to compliment you on the business getting ability of your paper.

It is with much pleasure that we write that the RESULTS of our Easter specialty ads in the recent issues of the Florists' Review have been very LARGE and EXCEEDED OUR EXPECTATIONS, helping to make this Easter season the most successful in our history.

Orders coming from all parts of the country show that The Review is read EVERYWHERE.

Those who want to reach the Florists "everywhere" NOW, when all the trade is buying, should use strong display in the Easter Special Number coming out next week.

Advertisements cannot be accepted after 5 p. m. Tuesday, March 26.

Bristol, Conn.—J. Ernest Andrew and H. W. Andrew have opened a flower store in the Curtiss building, next to the Bristol National Bank. They will handle seeds and nursery stock as well as flowers. J. E. Andrew will be the active manager. The firm name will be Andrew Bros.

Olean, N. Y.—Elmer Rawlings finds lupines a most satisfactory crop. He grows them naturally, leaving all the branches to bloom, where sprays are wanted for local retail design work. For long, fancy spikes he disbuds and grows to one stem just as with mums. In this way they can be planted three or four inches apart. He feeds with bone meal.

Lenox, Mass.—Frank Elsner, for five years in charge of the Locustwood Greenhouses, on Col. W. L. Brown's estate at Great Barrington, and later in charge of those at Brookside, has taken a position at the Holmes Road Greenhouses, near this city.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—A local newspaper states that the florists and gardeners of the neighborhood are organizing a society, to be known as the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society. Among those actively interested in the formation of the new club are John T. Ingram, James Duthie and John Miller, and the newspaper adds that "when such leading florists get together, every one knows there'll be something doing."

Southbridge, Mass.—Geo. C. Butler has erected another greenhouse, 25x100. A. H. Faxon has also built an addition.

Laramie, Wyo.—L. B. Westholder, manager of the downtown store of the Garwood Floral Co., also undertook the management of the greenhouses of the Overland Gardens Co., February 1, and restocked them with 10,000 plants. Mr. Westholder thinks that the growers in this part of the far west have a considerable advantage as far as the climate is concerned, as there is an average of twenty-five days of sunshine here per month. "Mildew and other such diseases of stock are almost unknown here," he says, "but we have many high winds."

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
 Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Posh-
 mann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting,
 Buffalo, N. Y.
 Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to

Don't Forget:—

❑ The ANNUAL SPECIAL EASTER NUMBER will be out next week, March 28.

❑ Last forms close at 5 p. m. Tuesday, March 26. Don't delay or you'll miss it.

Results bring advertising.
 The Review brings results.

It was a white St. Patrick's day—no
 "wearing of the green" for nature.

DON'T spell it "lillies" this Easter.
 One "l" between the "i's" is all that is sanctioned by the best usage.

Not a few subscribers save themselves
 the bother of annual renewal by sending
 The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-
 two visits of the paper.

THIS has been a hard winter on a good many growers, but the first business failure to be laid to the severity of the season is that of the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., which went into the hands of a receiver last week.

THERE are four double-page spreads in this issue of The Review. When the retail florists make as good use of the papers that reach the public as the growers and wholesalers do of The Review the use of plants and cut flowers will be many times what it now is.

THE fall exhibitions of the American Institute of the City of New York will be held in the Berkeley Lyceum building, 19 and 21 West Forty-fourth streets, as follows: Dahlia, fruit and vegetable exhibition, September 24 to 26; chrysanthemum exhibition of the American Institute and the Chrysanthemum Society of America, November 6 to 8.

IT once was thought of the sweet pea that its market usefulness as a cut flower was limited because it would not ship
 well, but at last week's show at Chicago
 Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., staged several vases of peas, 1,100 miles from where they were grown, which stood up in good shape for two days in an overheated room. That rather goes to show that the flower has shipping qualities only second to those of the Rhinebeck violet, does it not?

NOT THE "SPECIAL."

No, valued reader, this is not the Special Number of The Review—the
 "Special" comes out next week—this one is all in the day's work. But it contains 128 pages and the white paper used in printing the edition weighed 9,152 pounds, or just a little less than five tons.

GENERAL BUSINESS GOOD.

In a review of the general business situation, published March 16, R. G.
 Dun & Co. say: "Aside from the climatic handicaps, trade generally dis-closes large and well sustained volume.
 The improving developments find testimony in heavy exchanges through the banks, decreased insolvencies, increasing demands upon the leading industries, and growing confidence in the outlook. New business, as a whole, equals expectation in most branches of production, although seasonable activity in leading retail lines is hampered by unsettled weather, and crop marketings again show decline, owing to storms throughout the west and blockaded transportation."

A HUNDRED DOLLARS TOO MUCH.

One of the unfortunate features of the use of the classified advertisements in The Review is that the orders often overrun the advertiser's supply of stock—in that case one has to return a lot of good money.

Please discontinue my advertisement of vincas.
 The first insertion cleaned me up and I had to return nearly $100 besides. I enclose 40 cents to pay for the advertisement.—D. R. White, Sandusky, O., March 16, 1912.

Note that 40 cents was what it cost
 this advertiser to clean up his surplus.
 Would it be worth that much to you to turn some batch of plants into cash?
 Do it now.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business improved slowly last week,
 until Saturday, March 16 proving much the best day the market has enjoyed since the advent of Lent. There was some reduction in the supplies of stock, many growers asserting that the heaviest part of the spring crop has been cut, but in no department was the reduction in supplies sufficient to cause any embarrassment in the filling of orders; the improvement was rather in the nature of less stock being jobbed off; there was no pronounced advance in the prices paid by the retailers. This week opened with a good Monday business, prices stiffening slightly, and after the Sunday extra cut had been disposed of the market was in condition for some advance in prices Tuesday, but a belated blizzard Wednesday gave the market another setback.

If there is any item that is scarce it is Beauties. Those of strictly first-class quality are not abundant. Eastern Beauties are again coming to this market, indicating that the supply here is not so large as in the east, and that the prices average higher. There is no shortage of roses. Killarney and White Killarney may be had in any grade,
 some of the stems running to five feet.
 Sales of these within the week have been reported at 25 cents per flower.
 The principal demand is for stock at from 3 cents to 8 cents, and the longer

WE ARE NOW BOOKING ORDERS FOR LILIES

FOR EASTER

Really good Lilies will not be plentiful this Easter—too many that have been forced too hard to get them in, and too many that are short of stem. But our Lilies will be fine—all true Giganteums, clean, healthy and even. They will run 3 to 5 flowers to the stem and will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100, for shipment without rehandling. We can furnish any length of stem your trade calls for. Don't fail to get our quotation before you let anyone else book your order.

KILLARNEYS

These are very fine and plentiful.

We ask retailers to order freely of our Killarney and White Killarney, for we are certain that these roses will win friends for us by making friends for those who buy of us. It has long been recognized that length for length of stem our Killarneys carried the finest flowers of any in this market. If you are not using our Killarneys, you ought to be, if you want the best.

SWEET PEAS

For years we have been headquarters for Sweet Peas, but we never have had at this date such fine stock or such large quantities as now. Extra long stems, carrying large, perfect flowers. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

CARNATIONS

Once a user of our Carnations, always a user is almost always the rule—because ours is the best average large lot of Carnations in this market. There may be others as good, in small lots, but there is no big supply that will compare with ours for quality. Send us your order for Easter.

VIOLETS

The Easter Violets promise to be better than usual this year, because of the late spring. We handle the cream of the crops. Shall be especially strong on doubles.

OURS IS THE PRIZE-WINNING VALLEY

For current prices on all cut flowers see last week's advertisement.

Results bring advertising.
 The Review brings results.

It was a white St. Patrick's day—no
 "wearing of the green" for nature.

DON'T spell it "lillies" this Easter.
 One "l" between the "i's" is all that is sanctioned by the best usage.

Not a few subscribers save themselves
 the bother of annual renewal by sending
 The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-
 two visits of the paper.

THIS has been a hard winter on a good many growers, but the first business failure to be laid to the severity of the season is that of the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., which went into the hands of a receiver last week.

THERE are four double-page spreads in this issue of The Review. When the retail florists make as good use of the papers that reach the public as the growers and wholesalers do of The Review the use of plants and cut flowers will be many times what it now is.

THE fall exhibitions of the American Institute of the City of New York will be held in the Berkeley Lyceum building, 19 and 21 West Forty-fourth streets, as follows: Dahlia, fruit and vegetable exhibition, September 24 to 26; chrysanthemum exhibition of the American Institute and the Chrysanthemum Society of America, November 6 to 8.

It once was thought of the sweet pea
 that its market usefulness as a cut flower
 was limited because it would not ship
 well, but at last week's show at Chicago
 Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., staged several vases of peas, 1,100 miles from where they were grown, which stood up in good shape for two days in an overheated room. That rather goes to show that the flower has shipping qualities
 only second to those of the Rhinebeck violet, does it not?

NOT THE "SPECIAL."

No, valued reader, this is not the Special Number of The Review—the
 "Special" comes out next week—this one is all in the day's work. But it contains 128 pages and the white paper used in printing the edition weighed 9,152 pounds, or just a little less than five tons.

GENERAL BUSINESS GOOD.

In a review of the general business situation, published March 16, R. G.
 Dun & Co. say: "Aside from the climatic handicaps, trade generally dis-closes large and well sustained volume.
 The improving developments find testimony in heavy exchanges through the banks, decreased insolvencies, increasing demands upon the leading industries, and growing confidence in the outlook. New business, as a whole, equals expectation in most branches of production, although seasonable activity in leading retail lines is hampered by unsettled weather, and crop marketings again show decline, owing to storms throughout the west and blockaded transportation."

A HUNDRED DOLLARS TOO MUCH.

One of the unfortunate features of the use of the classified advertisements
 in The Review is that the orders often overrun the advertiser's supply of stock—in that case one has to return a lot of good money.

Please discontinue my advertisement of vincas.
 The first insertion cleaned me up and I had to return nearly $100 besides. I enclose 40 cents to pay for the advertisement.—D. R. White, Sandusky, O., March 16, 1912.

Note that 40 cents was what it cost
 this advertiser to clean up his surplus.
 Would it be worth that much to you to turn some batch of plants into cash?
 Do it now.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business improved slowly last week,
 until Saturday, March 16 proving much
 the best day the market has enjoyed since the advent of Lent. There was some reduction in the supplies of stock,
 many growers asserting that the heaviest part of the spring crop has been cut, but in no department was the reduction in supplies sufficient to cause any embarrassment in the filling of orders; the improvement was rather in the nature of less stock being jobbed off; there was no pronounced advance in the prices paid by the retailers. This week opened with a good Monday business, prices stiffening slightly, and after the Sunday extra cut had been disposed of the market was in condition for some advance in prices Tuesday, but a belated blizzard Wednesday
 gave the market another setback.

If there is any item that is scarce it is Beauties. Those of strictly first-class quality are not abundant. Eastern Beauties are again coming to this market, indicating that the supply here is not so large as in the east, and that the prices average higher. There is no shortage of roses. Killarney and White Killarney may be had in any grade,
 some of the stems running to five feet.
 Sales of these within the week have been reported at 25 cents per flower.
 The principal demand is for stock at
 from 3 cents to 8 cents, and the longer

WE ARE NOW BOOKING ORDERS FOR LILIES

FOR EASTER

Really good Lilies will not be plentiful this Easter—too many that have been forced too hard to get them in, and too many that are short of stem. But our Lilies will be fine—all true Giganteums, clean, healthy and even. They will run 3 to 5 flowers to the stem and will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100, for shipment without rehandling. We can furnish any length of stem your trade calls for. Don't fail to get our quotation before you let anyone else book your order.

KILLARNEYS

These are very fine and plentiful.

We ask retailers to order freely of our Killarney and White Killarney, for we are certain that these roses will win friends for us by making friends for those who buy of us. It has long been recognized that length for length of stem our Killarneys carried the finest flowers of any in this market. If you are not using our Killarneys, you ought to be, if you want the best.

SWEET PEAS

For years we have been headquarters for Sweet Peas, but we never have had at this date such fine stock or such large quantities as now. Extra long stems, carrying large, perfect flowers. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

CARNATIONS

Once a user of our Carnations, always a user is almost always the rule—because ours is the best average large lot of Carnations in this market. There may be others as good, in small lots, but there is no big supply that will compare with ours for quality. Send us your order for Easter.

VIOLETS

The Easter Violets promise to be better than usual this year, because of the late spring. We handle the cream of the crops. Shall be especially strong on doubles.

OURS IS THE PRIZE-WINNING VALLEY

For current prices on all cut flowers see last week's advertisement.

LILIES FOR EASTER

NOW BOOKING ORDERS

$8.00 TO $12.50 PER 100

Year after year we have had the finest Lilies in the market—our grower tells us they will be, if anything, a little better than usual this season.

These are all true Giganteums, the same stock that has given such good satisfaction in the past. They will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100—packed, mind you, by men who know HOW to pack Lilies, and shipped without rehandling, so that they reach the retailer in the same perfect condition that they came out of the greenhouse. We say without fear of contradiction that any florist who has had these Lilies and other Lilies in past years has found our Lilies not only the best but the most profitable Lilies he has handled. The supply will be larger than ever this year, so that we shall be able to take care of quite a few new customers. Now booking orders.

ROSES, CARNATIONS, ORCHIDS, VIOLETS, SWEET PEAS, PUSSY WILLOWS, WHITE LILAC, VALLEY, BULB STOCK, GREENS—a large supply for present needs—fine quality—and a big cut assured for Easter.

Let us quote you on your entire Easter order. Write today.

grades do not appear to be returning money in proportion to their quality. Richmond is abundant. One house has a good crop of Jardine, another has a nice lot of Rivoire, while a third is cutting Rhea Reid. A few growers have the Double Killarney, the Dark Pink Killarney and Melody, but in general all these varieties are in small supply, particularly compared to the quantities of Killarney. One or two growers are cutting Bride and Bridesmaid of fair quality, but these probably will completely disappear in another season.

Carnations are slightly less abundant than they were and prices are averaging a little better. The quality of carnations leaves little to be desired. Neither are sweet peas so abundant as in the last fortnight, but there still are more than the trade requires and the prices rule much too low for the fine grade of stock. Violets have done slightly better in the last few days and both violets and peas are expected to sell more briskly now that the weather is such that flowers can be worn on the street. The single violets are rapidly running out. Cattleyas are not abundant, but the demand for these has not yet sprung up. Valley is plentiful. Bulbous stock is cutting less figure than it did, though prices continue to make an extremely low average. Among the miscellaneous items seen in small quantity but good quality are snapdragons, stocks, mignonette, daisies and pansies. There is nothing of special note in the green goods market.

Various Notes.

It is reported that Sharp, Partridge & Co., who have done a big business on greenhouse glass this season, have made a ten-strike by having on hand, when the factory-price advance took place, the largest stock in their history.

Frank Johnson, sales manager and treasurer of the A. L. Randall Co., is in Kentucky this week.

Winterson's Seed Store received the first car of Holland nursery stock of the season March 18. The boxwoods went to a cold storage warehouse, but a basement in the neighborhood was rented for the storage of the shrubs, etc.

The Boston Store had a special sale of shamrocks in 1¼-inch pots at 2½ cents each. It is said their first order was 15,000 and that in the end they took all Frank Oechslin could supply.

John Kruchten says that double stocks are excellent property, but that the singles are a difficult proposition.

John P. Risch is devoting the greater part of his time to the new Weiland's retail store in the Venetian building, with Peter Risch and Herman Rodgers looking out for the wholesale store of Weiland & Risch. Peter Risch, who is in close touch with the growers, predicts that carnations will be pretty well off crop by Easter.

A leak in the gas main in front of the greenhouse of the Des Plaines Floral Co., about a month ago, damaged the carnations considerably before it was discovered and repaired. Mr. Blewitt says one bench had to be entirely thrown out, while the balance of the plants were retarded about three weeks in blooming, but are now practically recovered. The total loss is estimated at about $300 and a claim for that amount has been filed with the North Shore Consolidated Gas Co., which owns the main that caused the trouble.

C. W. McKellar is entertaining his cousin, Robert Becker, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

George Reinberg has begun wrecking the greenhouses along Foster avenue that are to be replaced by a flat building. He also is cleaning out some of the houses damaged by the tornado last autumn, but not then rebuilt, intending to put them into shape for early planting.

Harry Garland, manager for the Geo. M. Garland Co., at Des Plaines, was ill last week and confined to his bed for several days from overwork. T. B. Gray, the sales manager, says the inquiries are exceptionally heavy, and another draughtsman, Fred R. Coe, has been added to the force.

The latest addition to the staff of Hoerber Bros., March 18, is Laurene Mathes, who for nearly four years has been with Weiland & Risch.

At Kyle & Foerster's it is reported that Mrs. W. P. Kyle has completely recovered her health, following her recent operation.

"Like another Easter" is H. N. Bruns' characterization of the Sunday business, March 17, and it kept up all day Monday. Mr. Bruns has purchased the 50-foot lot east of his present property and contemplates building another greenhouse this summer for the growing of valley, well known as his specialty.

E. B. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, entertained J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, March 16. Mr. Wilcox was in Chicago for the flower show and to place orders for material for the big addition to his range that is to be built this season.

Mrs. E. E. Pieser is so seriously ill that Mr. Pieser is extremely worried.

Peter Reinberg is using all the wood from his Wards in working up stock for next season.

Otto W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., who, since his marriage, has lived at Western Springs, has tired of commuting and moved his household back to the city March 16.

The W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co., of Princeton, Ill., has opened a wholesale store at 56 East Randolph street, on the same floor with Percy Jones and Henry Wittbold. At the flower show last week the Trimble Co. exhibited one-year-old Killarney and White Killarney roses.

N. J. Wietor was well pleased with the showing the roses of Wietor Bros. made at last week's local show, espe-

The Market.

Spring chose St. Patrick's day for its opening. The passing of the long winter brings general rejoicing, especially to the growers, whose coal bills in many cases have almost eaten up the profits of the season.

As to prices, there has been little change from last week's quotations, but the retail demand became aggressive March 16 and a general clean-up resulted. Beauties held at 25 cents for the selects last week, and large shipments of them make any advance improbable. All varieties of roses are in unlimited supply, Killarney especially. In large lots these have been disposed of at summer prices. The carnation receipts last week were enormous and the surplus went to the street men as low as $5 per thousand. Even in small quantities $2 per hundred seemed to be the limit. Quality is superb. Of violets there is no end. The curb merchants offer them at 5 cents a bunch. In cattleyas some fine Mossie, Triane and Schroederm are arriving. Prices are fairly well maintained, and the bookings for Easter shipments have begun. Valley and lilies have not improved as yet. Orders for lilies for Easter, being booked at 40 cents. Gardenias have advanced a trifle. There is no decrease in the flood of bulbous stock, and snapdragon, wallflowers, daisies, pansies, lilac and all spring flowers are here in abundance.

tion enjoyed their annual visit to the Jersey growers March 14, meeting at Hoboken and taking autos for the journey, as usual. There were present C. W. Scott, of Whitestone; Gerard and Henry Dreyer, of Elmhurst; Oscar Boehler, H. C. Steinhoff, Chas. Engeln and H. Baumann, of West Hoboken; Fritz Dressel, of Weehawken; H. Schoelzel, of New Durham; J. H. Fieser, of North Bergen; Julius Roehrs, Jr., of Rutherford; H. Ware, of North Bergen; Wm. Pankok, of Whitestone; F. W. Marquardt, of Middle Village; Louis Schmutz and Phil Manker, of Flatbush; Henry Schmidt, of Union Hill; Mr. Lehnig, of Hackensack; W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., of Astoria, and representatives of the press.

The first call was at Fritz Dressel's, in Weehawken, at one time the rubber king. Next to H. C. Steinhoff's, where A. Dwyer is foreman. The next stop was at John Reichert's, at North Bergen, where the fat man has a fine general assortment. At J. H. Fieser's a call was made, and then on to New Durham and Herman Schoelzel's, where Mrs. Schoelzel was the generous hostess, serving an elaborate lunch to her hungry and thirsty visitors. Two new ferns, sports of Scholzei, were greatly admired. Both are distinct types. Then came Hackensack and Lehnig & Winnifield's big plant. Woodsen & Christensen, of Woodridge, came next, where the big daisies are grown that are handled by Wm. Kessler and Jas. McManus. Then a call was made on the Julius Roehrs Co., although a whole day is needed to do the 100 big greenhouses. The plant of Bobbink & Atkins drew the travelers across the way and it would take another day to do this establishment justice. Komitsch & Junge and Emil Savoy, of Secaucus, were the next places visited. The Exotic Nursery was the last establishment at which a stop was made. Good stock was the rule everywhere, and most of it was already sold, we were told.

The banquet in the evening was a fitting close to a delightful day.

The Market.

It is cheering to be able to report somewhat improved conditions in the market. The supplies of one or two staples have fallen off, but the milder weather, with the street fakers all busily employed, is the main cause of improvement. There has been a good demand for short-stemmed roses and prices have improved on these, but the better grades are almost unchanged. The warmer weather has caused a considerable increase in the supplies and, if it continues, lower prices are probable. Carnations are doing better, select grades making up to $3 and $4 per hundred. There was a heavy call for coloring purposes for St. Patrick's day, which boomed the price on these, quite a few growers making $3 per hundred. There is a veritable avalanche of violets daily, singles, of course, predominating. The color and size still are good. Prospects are for a good crop of doubles, but only a moderate pick of singles for Easter.

Lilies are selling at $10 to $12.50 per hundred for Easter delivery. The demand is rather light. Formosas are much in evidence among the cut lilies. Bulbous stock is cleaning up better. Sweet peas are now of superb quality and quite a number of varieties are to be seen. Pink, white and lavender are, however, the selling colors. Marguerites are increasing in numbers and improving in quality. Yellow sells well; white goes harder. Valley is in oversupply. Cattleya Triana is scarce, but there are quite a few Schroeders coming in, sufficient for the rather scant demand at present. Wallflowers, bachelor's buttons and pink snapdragon sell best among miscellaneous flowers. There has been a fair call for green goods, especially Asparagus Sprenger.

Pot plant trade is becoming quite brisk. Tausendschon roses are more in evidence than ever, while acacias, azaleas, ericas, lilacs, genistas, boronias and many other varieties are seen. Lilies are in strong demand and most of the leading growers are already quite well cleaned out.

William Sim was the lecturer at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 19, when there was an attendance of 175 members. He gave an eminently practical talk on sweet peas and their culture, which brought out

Fred Holbrow, of Dorchester, has a fine crop of sweet peas, which he is sending to the Flower Growers' Sales Co.

W. H. Elliott is getting some splendid roses from his Madbury establishment. Rhea Reid, Mrs. Ward, the Killarneys and Mrs. Waddell are extra fine now.

Local nurserymen are hoping that the ground will open up sufficiently to allow the digging of trees and shrubs by the end of the present week. It is too early yet to estimate what winter losses have been, but the abundance of moisture in the ground has been a great advantage to evergreens.

So far growers have burned much more coal this year than they did for the same period last year and they are anxiously awaiting the arrival of spring. An unusual number of funerals kept the florists busy last week.

The carnations were pronounced exceptionally good by all who attended, and did great credit to the carnation growers of Rochester and vicinity.

Pursell & Cragg had a fine exhibit of roses, comprising Killarney, Richmond, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Taft and Kaiserin.

It was voted to hold the flower show during the week of November 3.

The members of the association who went to Ithaca last month to represent the florists of this city at the State Federation of Florists' Clubs reported on the various phases of the gathering and recommended that the Rochester organization affiliate itself with it. The recommendation was adopted. E. R. Fry and William Logan gave interesting reports and stated that the next meeting of the federation will be held early in September, during the state fair at Syracuse, N. Y. E. R. Fry was elected vice-president of the State Federation of Florists' Clubs.

Charles N. White, of Gasport, N. Y., was the speaker of the evening and gave a talk on "Carnations." Besides his large establishment in Gasport, Mr. White has 35,000 square feet of glass in Medina, N. Y., and during the coming summer he expects to move his entire plant to Medina, which is on the main line of a railroad, and this will facilitate matters greatly in transportation and obtaining coal. He has experimented in sterilizing soil with live steam, but did not get satisfactory results. A number of the florists present asked questions on carnation culture, which were answered by Mr. White.

A lively discussion took place on the pernicious practice of the free distribution of seeds by our government, and several members were in favor of taking action to try to abolish this custom. They believe it is a great detriment to the seed trade in general.

The next meeting of the association will be held April 8, and John Dunbar will give a talk on "Fall Pruning."

It was decided to hold a banquet at Hotel Powers, March 26, to which the ladies and the friends of the members of the association are invited. A big time is expected.

This experiment, as far as it has gone, would also tend to prove that as good carnations can be grown with commercial fertilizers as with manure, as there is practically no difference in the number of flowers cut or in the strength of stem. As far as the growth is concerned, there is little if any difference.

Rose Experiments.

The work on roses has been continued along the same lines as during the last year; namely, a test of grafted and own-root stock and fertilizer work similar to that of the carnation experiment.

Fertilizer Experiment.

The varieties used for this purpose are Killarney and Bride, each occupying two benches 4x100 feet. Each bench was divided into ten sections and each section was used for a different quantity of commercial fertilizer.

As roses are considered heavy feeders, the units selected for this work are double the amount used with the carnations. The same fertilizers were also used. Here, as in the carnation, the quantities were doubled and quadrupled singly, in pairs and all together.

Well decayed manure was also used to supply the necessary humus. The unit of application was as follows:

Dried blood at rate 4 lbs. per 100 sq. ft. bench, soil 5 in. deep.
Acid phosphate at rate 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Potassium sulphate at rate 1 lb. per 100 sq. ft.
Manure at rate 125 lbs. per 100 sq. ft., or about 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ bu.

Not much can be said as yet regarding the general results of the work, as it requires this year's and an additional year's work to verify the results. There are, however, a few results that are so plainly evident that there can be no mistake concerning their accuracy.

The most evident results in the experiment show that in some sections too much fertilizer has been used. This is true where four units (twelve pounds per 100 square feet) of dried blood have been used. The own-root plants in these sections have been badly affected by an overdose of nitrogen, which shows in the leaves, which have become a light yellow-green with darker venation. It is interesting to note that the grafted plants in the same section are not so badly affected, showing that roses on Manetti stock can stand more nitrogen.

Also where nitrogen is used in excess there is a greater number of seconds during the months when the excess begins to take effect.

The plants in the control section made vigorous growth, but did not produce as many flowers as the fertilized sections. The number per plant, in the Brides for the past year, was nineteen as against the general average of twenty-five, and in Killarney it was twenty and four-fifths against the general average of twenty-three. The leaves were also smaller and of a yellowish color, but not the sickly color of the high nitrogen sections.

In checking up the character of growth of the plants this year with those of last, it was found that the sections with the smaller amount of nitrogen give the best results.

Grafted vs. Own-root Roses.

In planting the house for the fertilizer experiment, each section contained thirty-two plants. It was decided to put one-half of these in own-root stock and the other half in grafted stock, to determine the comparative value of each. The results of the past year, 1910-11, are shown in the following table. Whether this year's results will bear them out remains to be seen.

COMPARISON OF GRAFTED AND OWN-ROOT.

Brides, grafted—Firsts, 6,588; seconds, 1,700; culls, 279; total, 8,567; difference, 913.

The number of flowers was not as great as where all are under best conditions.

If the results of the past year are borne out by those of the present year, there can be no doubt that grafted plants produce more flowers, as is shown by the differences of 913 in the Brides and 1,223 in the Killarneys in favor of the grafted plants. These differences are in the cut from 320 grafted and 320 own-root plants in each case.

One of the most interesting facts is that in the experiments the grafted plants, in nearly every case, were larger than the own-root.

In our estimation, the most interesting result is the one mentioned before; namely, that the grafted plants can stand more fertilizer.

tended that a circular be published each year with the results of the season's work, which, we hope, will be of value to the rose grower as well as the general public.

In closing, I again wish to ask the co-operation of the florists of the state. In making criticisms, be kind enough to remember that we started a few years ago along lines that were entirely new and that any line of work must be carried on to completion before it is of any value to the grower.

tended that a circular be published each year with the results of the season's work, which, we hope, will be of value to the rose grower as well as the general public.

In closing, I again wish to ask the co-operation of the florists of the state. In making criticisms, be kind enough to remember that we started a few years ago along lines that were entirely new and that any line of work must be carried on to completion before it is of any value to the grower.

If you have any troubles, let us co-operate with you and help you solve your problems. Please remember that any information that you give us is confidential. A plain statement of your difficulties not only helps to get a line on the distribution of the trouble, but brings to light new difficulties, which, if caught in time, will save much loss in the future. We are here to help you and you help both yourself and your brother florist when you give us a chance to be of service to you.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market shows an improvement that makes the big money spent in coal a little less terrible to the growers. The buyers have been taking hold a little more freely at the moderate prices that prevail. The milder weather has been a factor. New buyers for quantity lots have appeared with the signs of spring and the outlook is brighter. St. Patrick's day saw a good demand for white carnations, the better grades selling well at from $3 to $4, occasionally $5. The whole carnation market improved, due partly to heavy out-of-town buying, with prices firmer.

The feature of the rose market is the decline in Beauties. While receipts are not heavy, the demand is so light that prices are fast falling to the point where the market broadens, or in plain English, to $25 per hundred. That is the figure at which many buyers who do not handle Beauties regularly in winter will take a chance. The other roses are, fortunately, more plentiful in the medium than in the fancy grades. Unfortunately, they are most plentiful in the shorter grades; just as well in white but by no means as well in pink.

The sweet pea is a popular flower when well grown. The heavy crop of short-stemmed, poor blossoms is profitless. Cattleyas are cheap. Trianae holds up fairly well, but don't make a low offer for Schroederæ when not needed. Gardenias are in better supply; prices rule low. Valley is dull. Daisies are neglected. The violet market reports are contradictory. A good many are sold; some are not. Prices are modest. Easter lilies and callas are coming forward, but snapdragon is on the back track. There is decided improvement in tulips. Some excellent stock is coming into town. Emperor daffodils are also well done. Prices on all bulbous flowers are low. Greens are more plentiful. Wild smilax is scarce.

Easter Plants.

Godfrey Aschmann has his place completely filled with as fine a lot of Easter plants as he has ever grown. His lilies, from bulbs especially selected for him, are clean, vigorous, well-flowered and of excellent height, stock of which he is justly proud. His azaleas are numerous, of the best varieties and well timed for Easter. His spiræas, all Gladstone, I think, are a splendid sight; two sizes, the larger on the center tables, the smaller on the side, well clothed with glossy foliage and well set with buds—most gratifying, as spiræa is scarce this season.

These three varieties of Easter blooming plants, forming the leading trio in most collections, are Mr. Aschmann's leaders. Close after them come Hydrangea Otaksa, well set with buds, and those dear little begonias that appeal to the heart of every flower lover; some call them Vernon, some Erfordii, some semperflorens; all know the type and value it for its vigor and freedom of bloom. Then there was an excellent lot of cinerarias, the early bloomers showing large flowers with distinct color marking.

Bulbous flowers are also given a place at Mr. Aschmann's. A neighboring greenhouse has been rented for the benefit of 3,000 of his hyacinths. The main body of his hyacinths, tulips and daffodils are on his own place. A few forced early give promise of fine flowers, the colors of the hyacinths being particularly bright.

The foliage plants grown by Mr. Aschmann for Easter include some excellent araucarias, kentias, ficus, cocos, asparagus and ferns of the Boston family. The quality of the stock and its numbers lead to the belief that Easter, 1912, will be the best in the history of Ontario street.

Easter Plants

A selection of the very best plants the market affords can be had from us, and the selection will be the P M quality. Early shipments are an advantage both to the customer and the grower.

Potted Lilies For Easter

For shipment either in bud before Easter, or in more advanced stage for Easter Delivery, we have as choice and selected a lot of Lily Plants as we have ever offered. The quality of the stock shows that it will be very much above the average in every way, grown fairly cool, insuring safe carrying, and much better satisfaction to the consumer than highly forced stock.

Easter coming April 7th will allow shipments to be made by freight. Can supply in carload lots or in quantity at $10.00 per hundred flowers and buds, for shipment to be made before March 25th. After that date, $12.50 per hundred flowers and buds.

Various Notes.

Eugene Bernheimer has the warm sympathy of his friends in his sad loss. His infant son died last week.

It is stated on good authority that Adolph Farenwald, president of the American Rose Society, will plant American Beauties largely for next season.

A prominent florist who wished to describe the standing of a leader in another field said: "He is as well known as H. H. Battles."

The death of Mrs. Gaehring, mother of Elmer W. Gaehring, which occurred early this month, removes one of our old-time and well-known florists. Mrs. Gaehring, who retired about a year ago, had two stores in Frankford, where her son now carries on business.

Florists' Review,

Gentlemen:

"The Florists' Review did it all right." Our two-inch display ad, offering our new gladiolus Princeps to the trade, made its first appearance in the F.R. of November 23rd. In December we were corresponding with foreign publishers regarding advertising rates, but, before we had placed our order with them, inquiries came pouring in from home and abroad, therefore we thought best to withdraw our ad from the Review for a lot up. On Jan. 1st we asked you to discontinue our ad until further notice, but there was no letup until all the stock was sold. They did not even leave us any for our retail trade and yet we have to do something which a man hates to do, returning some nice looking checks.

"The Review reaches the buyer no matter where he is located."

Yours for Success,

W. A. Seeger and sister, of Mullanphy the Florist, St. Louis; Fred Fleischman, New York city; A. Humphries, with Charles Thorley, New York city, and Fred Berger, Baltimore, are among the visitors reported by H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

Leo Niessen believes that this winter season has been a good one with the florists who kept pace with the times.

M. Rice & Co. are employing more basket makers than ever before; they are preparing to feature the beautiful new ivory effect in baskets.

Carl C. Lange, of Worcester, Mass., was a recent visitor.

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., are introducing many new roses in addition to those of their own raising. Those imported include Wichmoss, Alice Rothschild and Jonkheer J. L. Mock.

Lord & Burnham Co. reports material ordered for the following houses: Isaac A. Passmore, West Chester, Pa., one house 43x160; H. M. Weiss & Sons, Hatboro, Pa., one house 35x300; Joseph Heacock Co., Roelofs, Pa., iron frame greenhouse 72x600, supplied with the new rack and pinion ventilator apparatus; George I. Michell's Asters

New Aster, Michell's "Pink Superb"

The flowers are of immense size, petals long and broad; those in the center lie curled and incurved to such an extent that the crown is completely covered; the general appearance of the flower being that of an immense flat Chrysanthemum; color, a beautiful light, or shell pink. The exceedingly long stems, which usually measure 34 to 36 inches in length, make it a valuable sort for cutting. Per trade pkt., 50c; $1.50 per 1/4 oz.; per oz., $5.00.

Eight Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

The condition of the local market last week was far from satisfactory; stock was overplentiful, to say the least, and the demand was far below the supply, and no flower, regardless of variety or condition, brought prices that would tend to encourage the grower. Roses have been especially plentiful and jobbers and growers alike were willing to accept almost any price offered, and this was true also of valley. The prevailing price for American Beauties was $5 per dozen, and the demand was poor at that figure. Greens have moved fairly well. The dealers forgot to count sweet peas and these were sold in bunches at almost any figure, although some extra fine stock brought good money. The highest grade of Easter lilies sold all right at about $10 per hundred, but it was impossible to give away the poor ones. Double violets were a glut on the market; singles went fairly well. Daffodils moved along at moderate prices. Some of the dealers were afraid that there was to be a scarcity of white carnations in the local market due to the demand for green ones for St. Patrick's day. Their fears proved to be unfounded, although it must be said that few went to waste. Pink and red carnations were to be seen in great profusion and large quantities were sold to the street men at ridiculously low prices. In this connection it may be said that on Saturday, the only fair day in the week, these men reaped a harvest along the promenade streets. The best price for carnations was about $3 per hundred. Orchids have not been of as good quality as desired and the best brought but $6 per dozen. Gardenias were plentiful, the average price being $25 per hundred. Mignonette could not be sold at any price and you could get all the daisies in the market at $2 or less per hundred. Were it not for funeral work, of which there is a quantity, the last week, with its low prices, would start something in the way of worry. The coming week, however, should bring forth a change for the better.

Various Notes.

Upon the completion of the work on their stall in the Center market, J. M. Hammer & Son intend to put in a full line of cut flowers. This firm has heretofore specialized on potted plants. Their new stand is one of the best in the market and, being of tiles, is sanitary and easy to keep clean and attractive.

John R. Morgan has removed to stand No. 279 in the Center market, having a part of the section occupied by J. M. Hammer & Son.

President Grillbortzer, of the Florists' Club, has appointed Messrs. William F. Gude, Otto Bauer and A. O. C. Oehmler as members of the committee to have charge of the banquet to be held by the club next month. Messrs. Bauer, Oehmler and Elmer C. Mayberry will look after the entertainment features of the club during the next twelve months.

The exhibit of cut flowers placed in the Franklin school by the club was viewed by thousands of people and is bound to act as a good piece of advertising, to the benefit of the local retailers. The flowers were those submitted from local and out-of-town growers at the last meeting of the club and consisted of roses, carnations and amaryllis.

Fred H. Kramer spent several days last week in Richmond, Va., where he visited a number of growers and retailers.

Will Lacey will hereafter have charge of the rose growing operations of Fred H. Kramer, having succeeded his brother, Robert, in that position. Robert Lacey has started out for himself.

The Market.

The market last week showed little activity, although the wholesale houses had plenty of stock in all the seasonable lines. While there was much more than the demand could consume, the glut was not nearly so great as the week previous. The weather was dark nearly all the week and that caused a let-up in the great quantities of stock being consigned to this market.

With Easter only two weeks away, we shall need lots of clear weather to bring along the lilies and other Easter blooming plants. Prices have stiffened only a little. White carnations took a jump to $3 per hundred the latter part of last week, as there was a great demand for them for coloring for St. Patrick's day. Other colors went begging.

Sweet peas and violets are seen in great quantities at prices that are exceptionally cheap where large lots are

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held an interesting meeting and exhibition Thursday afternoon, March 14, the meeting in Odd Fellows' hall and the exhibition at Kuehn's wholesale house.
Both were well attended.

All the officers were present at the meeting and it was announced that only new varieties of roses and carnations would be judged at the exhibition and no prizes were offered for any of the exhibits. Among the communications received and read was one from the New York Florists' Club inviting our president to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary of that club March 23.

President Windler appointed Frank Weber, Pierre Schneider and Hugo Werner to judge any new varieties that were at the exhibition. Then came the big discussion on "Easter Plants," led by Geo. B. Windler, John Held and Jules Bourdet.

The exhibition was not as large as expected, but was attractive, the following florists showing stock as grown by them:

Various Notes.

The many friends of August Koch, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, were much pleased on learning that he was the successful candidate for the position of head gardener at Garfield park, Chicago. Mr. Koch has made many warm friends while at the garden, who wish him well in his new position.

Chas. Beyer, Wm. Schray & Sons, C. Young & Sons Co. and F. W. Bruenig were among those who had large plant decorations for the department stores during the last two weeks.

The downtown florists had handsome St. Patrick's day window displays, and green carnations sold fairly well Saturday, Sunday and Monday. They say that shamrock plants sold much better than last year.

FLOWER BOXES

Successful Florists use Sefton Boxes. To have success in shipping flowers, YOU should use them.

We offer a complete and superior line of cut flower, folding boxes in numerous grades and sizes, as well as Corrugated Fibre Board Boxes for Live Plants and Floral Designs.

Sefton Florists' Boxes combine high quality with low price. We manufacture them in large quantities and thus are able and pleased to give you the benefit in reasonably low prices.

A box of high quality attracts the eye and makes it a pleasure to open a neat, tasty package. Sefton Florists' Boxes are trade builders, inasmuch as they are high class and make a good impression. Purchasers of our boxes were once users of the inferior grades.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

About the middle of last week business took an unexpected turn for the better. The market, which had been on the ragged edge for a fortnight, began to brighten and by Saturday's close everything was cleaned up fairly well. Monday's opening was as good. It is to be hoped that this strong demand will prove substantial, instead of being only a spurt. The shipping business is holding its own, especially on decorative greens.

Roses are coming into a full crop. The Brides and Maids are the best seen in the market for some time. Killarney is just coming on crop and all the offerings are excellent. Richmond sells up each day. Beauties are coming in better and are beginning to be a factor in the market. Carnations, with the exception of white, are in adequate supply. The extra demand for white for coloring purposes has so skinned the plants that it will be several days before the supply gets back to normal. Indications are that the cut of carnations locally for Easter will be more or less short. Small bulbous stock is, as a whole, cleaning up nicely. The offerings of tulips, daffodils and jonquils are choice. Easter lilies and callas are rather slow. Sweet peas enjoy a steady call. Many of the shorter ones, however, must be sacrificed to move them. Violets hardly sell at all.

Various Notes.

Harry Pfeiffer and Charles Pfeiffer, Jr., have taken over their father's greenhouse business and will run the place under the name of Chas. Pfeiffer's Sons.

Some of C. E. Critchell's orders for Easter are coming in so early this year that he is making arrangements for extra supplies of Easter lilies.

P. J. Olinger went to New Castle last week.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has added a fine line of cut flower boxes to its list of supplies.

Hardesty & Co. had quite a run on funeral work the latter part of last week.

I regret to tell of the death of Mrs. Al. Bunner.

Among Cincinnatians in Chicago last week were Al. Sunderbruch and R. Witterstaetter.

MILWAUKEE.

While stock continued plentiful last week, the demand showed quite an increase and business in general was quite satisfactory. While in former years the demand for green carnations was rather slim, local retailers did not stock up heavily for that time and the call caught them sleeping, for the demand for green cut flowers on St. Patrick's day this year was beyond expectations. The wholesalers report a good demand for white stock for dyeing. E. O.

AN UNHEATED GREENHOUSE.

I wish to build a greenhouse, 40 x 100 feet, on the north side of a range of greenhouses. In this house I intend to grow only summer flowers, such as Kaiserin roses, sweet peas and asters. I do not wish to heat the house, as it would necessitate installing a new boiler. The temperature in this part of Virginia occasionally drops to 5 degrees below zero. Would the Kaiserins stand it if well mulched? Of course, the sweet peas and asters could be planted late in the spring. Is such a house practical? I shall greatly appreciate any information you can give. J. F.

The Kaiserin roses will come through the winter all right if they are well mulched and the beds are run on the dry side. The sweet peas could be sown quite early, by the early part of February if the ground is sufficiently open. It will not harm them if the ground is frozen over occasionally after sowing. Or you could start plants in flats of sand or sandy loam and transplant to the unheated house not later than the end of March. The sweet peas will do far better if started as early as possible. They want a night temperature 10 degrees lower than the roses, while asters do better if even cooler than sweet peas. Give the Kaiserins the warmest part of the house and the asters the coldest. The asters should be planted early in April. Such a house should prove practical for the crops named and could also be profitably utilized for chrysanthemums. You could, if necessary, plant such crops as gladioli, ten weeks' stocks, double feverfew, Spiraea Japonica and antirrhinums for Memorial day, in addition to sweet peas, and these could be followed by chrysanthemums. SPINACH has been one of the fast selling items with the wholesale seedsmen in Europe.

J. W. BITTENBENDER has started in the wholesale and retail seed business at Knoxville, Ia.

W. W. VANSANT & SONS, Farragut, Ia., whose specialty is seed corn, report this their busiest season.

THE Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., recently completed a range of five greenhouses each 28x150 and is building two others 28x44.

THE Holland bulb growers had a mild winter followed by a severely cold spell in February, but the latest advices indicate that the bulbs have come through in good shape.

THERE has been a change in the Vick & Hill Co., Rochester. E. H. Vick, who is a brother of F. W. Vick, now is in business for his own account at 223 Flower City park, Rochester.

THE volume of mail orders now coming in is such as to indicate that the big day of the season, which frequently is the third or fourth Monday in March, is likely to be in April this year.

FIRE February 27 destroyed the seed store of John Dewsnup, of Deseret, Utah. The loss was near $10,000, with no insurance. There was more than 60,000 pounds of alfalfa seed stored in the building.

THERE was heavy snow all over the north, from the Rockies to the Atlantic, March 14 and 15. The storm was followed by a genuine spring thaw, but it will take weeks to get the frost out of the ground. The seed season is, therefore, developing slowly.

ACCORDING to advices early last week from the Lima bean district of California, the rainfall to date exceeds six inches for the season, and while it is a good deal below the average it is held, nevertheless, to be ample for the present and makes prospects for the coming crop much better than the previous outlook.

THE agricultural appropriation bill, carrying an appropriation of $285,680 for free seeds for 1913, was passed by the lower house of Congress March 12. Curiously enough, Free Seeds Mann, as he is known to some in the Second Illinois district, filibustered against the bill, but because of other features than the appropriation for free seeds.

Owing to the backward season in California, all Winter and late Sweet Pea Seed will be late in maturing. To avoid late deliveries, I will send all early orders of Winter Sweet Pea Seed directly from our ranch in Lompoc, Cal. These will reach my farthest customers not later than August 10th, saving over four weeks' time. Send all letters of importance to Lompoc, Cal. We will have all the leading colors and many novelties. Orders booked now. New complete list will be sent out in May.

Mt. Airy, Md., Feb. 26, 1912.
Dear Sir:—We have been cutting very fine peas this season from your stock. Stems 18 and 20 inches, with 3, 4 and 5 flowers, and in several instances with 6 flowers to a stem. You deserve and receive great honor from the trade for bringing Winter flowering Sweet Peas to their present high position in the market. You have already done more for the florist than the great Burbank will ever do.

JESSE P. KING.
We have also only the best Spencer and Unwin late Sweet Pea Seed on hand now, also other Florists' flower seed. Send for list.

lingham, Whatcom county, ranchers and gardeners are receiving offers from Frederick Ludeseweit, a greenhouse proprietor and florist, of Moscow, Russia, to grow bulbs on contract. The Russian states that after exhaustive investigation he is satisfied that north-west Washington is able to produce the finest hyacinth, gladiolus and narcissus bulbs in the world. A. L. Thompson, a rancher of Marietta, has written to Russia expressing his willingness to grow bulbs on contract in any quantity."

ONIONS AT LAREDO.

The Bermuda onion industry in the country contiguous to Laredo, Tex., has assumed enormous proportions during the last two years, and that section is now the heaviest shipper of the onion. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been invested in pumping plants, pipe laying and other essentials to irrigation, and more machinery and more land is being taken in regularly. The onion crop this year is a big one, fully 2,200 acres being planted in Bermuda onions, and the indications are that from 1,800 to 2,000 cars of onions will begin to move out of the Laredo section early in April. It was thought that the recent severe freeze which visited that section had damaged the onion crop to a considerable extent, but later developments showed that the damage was comparatively slight. At the present time the onion crop as a whole is in excellent condition and presenting a most prolific growth, with indications for a heavy yield.

CUTHBERTSON IN CALIFORNIA.

The Annual for 1912, published in England, by the National Sweet Pea Society, has an article by Frank G. Cuthbertson, well known to the seed trade, entitled "Life on a California Sweet Pea Ranch," that contains much of interest, although largely given to a description of the daily life of the seed growers.

"At San Juan, C. C. Morse & Co. had 150 acres of sweet peas this summer, besides the huge trial grounds," he says. "To climb the foothills and look down on the wonderful carpet of colors is a sight never to be forgotten. Only those who have seen the sight can realize the magnitude and beauty of the scene. At San Juan the sweet peas were separated by radish, onion, parsnip, and other vegetable crops. Eighteen miles from San Juan the firm have another ranch, at Gilroy. On this ranch were another 150 acres of sweet peas, and also the wonderful 'workshop' of this firm, where most of the American novelties have originated. I had the pleasure of working in the workshop for three weeks, cross-fertilizing and selecting, and I can promise to the enthusiasts in the Old Country some nice things in the near future. There are some good things coming along and those who favor the doubles will be delighted with some of the varieties which will appear by and by. The Americans have the lead in doubles, and they certainly are attractive in the bunch.

"Gilroy proved to be a warm spot, and for many days I found it hot work on my knees cross-fertilizing flowers, with the temperature 99 degrees in the shade. The evenings are always cool, so that one can sleep in comfort. At Evolution is the march of progress. See how Grandmother's parlor has been transformed. You remember perhaps the old type—where family funerals and weddings were always held—the ancient horsehair sofas and chairs standing about like Egyptian mummies—a cold-blooded marble table in the center, with a few sea shells scattered about the plaster-Paris statue of a marriage ceremony under a glass dome. A sort of pallbearer's palace—a fit place to study about the immortality of the soul, read Milton's Paradise Lost, or to chloroform a cat. It was generally used for special ceremonies, such as balls, weddings and funerals, and the entertainment of long-lost uncles. Then came the plush covered era—chairs that would give you the creeps—fuss up your blood and absorb the dust; and now since the advent of the vacuum cleaner, capable of sucking the guts out of such disease breeders, people have reached the Sanitary Age—plain wood, with no cockroach cracks, rugs instead of carpets, and the name "parlor" has been changed to "living-room," and so on down the line. Same in the lily bulb business—from the old Madonna or Candidum lily—then the Harrisii, the Longiflorum, Multiflorum, Giganteum, Oshima lilies (commonly known as Formosas), Azores, African Harrisii and some new ones en route. Always something new and something better is being evolved—to satisfy the more exacting buyers. Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs are secured from first hands direct from their original source. The first and important part of the business is to secure the best quality produced. If a lily is mixed, and only partly diseased, it is carefully cultivated, and the diseased bulbs dug up and destroyed. Then from the healthy stock the variety which appears strongest and most prolific is selected. All this takes time, but all good things come slow. This process is now going on with the Horseshoe Brand Formosas—the process of evolution. The improvement is marked, and Horseshoe Formosas are becoming better every year. Some examples we have record of this season are remarkable. Easter comes very early in 1913, and growers who want to be sure will do well to buy a few cases of our Horseshoe Brand Formosas. Send for the Book of Bulbology, which contains prices.

Gilroy the sweet peas were separated by breaks of lettuce and onion. The lettuce for seed were to me a most wonderful sight, altogether there being somewhere near 300 acres of that crop. A pleasant surprise to me were the breaks of Cupid sweet peas. Hitherto I had always thought poorly of Cupid sweet peas, but in the warm, dry topsoil in California they thrive admirably. The plants are a mass of bloom and present a gay appearance.

"Of course, the roguing is the principal occupation in summer time, and it is not, as many people imagine, roughly done. True, there is an enormous acreage to cover in the season, but it is all gone over several times and the plot for stock seed is very thoroughly rogued. California growers realize the importance now of true stocks, and are doing their utmost to secure purity and fixity. A great deal of the rough roguing is done by the Chinamen, and I have no hesitation in saying the Chinaman is an expert at the job. Of course he has to be told what to do, but if you tell a Chinaman what to do, he can do it, and do it well. I must confess to being greatly surprised at the smartness of these fellows. I like the Chinamen, and can always get on with them. They are honest, trustworthy and kind-hearted people, and when once you 'savey' them they are 'heap good' fellows."

THE SEED SITUATION.

The Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, has issued a circular to farmers in which it says: "We realize that this is the most peculiar season in many respects that we have ever had during the thirty-five years that the writer has been connected with the seed business and we do not wonder that the small dealers over the state are at a loss as to how to handle the trade. For several years past there has been a short crop of almost all kinds of clover, grass and field seeds, in many localities amounting to an entire failure. The surplus stocks which have accumulated in previous years have been exhausted; the seed warehouses and lofts were bare at the beginning of the season. We do not need to tell you what a short crop this was, not only locally, but throughout the United States and Canada and also in some foreign countries. Owing to the dry weather, the meadows were short, pasturage was so scarce that the stock was turned on to the meadows in many cases and hay was so high in price that it was a strong temptation to cut the crop for hay, instead of letting it produce seed. Through a large section of the country, the seed sown last spring started well, early, but later died out, and the pastures and meadows are bare and will require re-seeding. This is bound to make a considerable demand for seed, in spite of high prices.”

After reviewing the situation with regard to the principal items the circular concludes: “Summing up the whole matter, we believe that owing to shortage of hay and pastures it is going to be absolutely necessary for the farmers to sow more seed than usual this spring, in spite of high prices. It would be really foolish for them to wait, as the difference in cost of seed this year compared to an ordinary season, figuring it by the acre and not by the bushel, is small, amounting to less than $1. We can not look for low prices on clover, timothy or other seeds, next year, as the old meadows are so badly killed out. It is probable that low values will not be reached again for many years, if ever. Far-seeing farmers will sow clover this spring, and, if they secure a good seed crop will probably realize high prices for same. Winter is holding on so late that the spring season will probably be short; there will be a great rush for seed and it will be almost impossible to fill orders promptly.”

FOREIGN POTATOES FOR SEED.

Although home-grown seed potatoes are selling at high prices, foreign-grown potatoes should not be substituted for them, according to a statement on the danger to the American potato crop from the use of imported seed-potatoes issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, as follows:

“Europe has several potato diseases not now known to exist in this country, which, if introduced, might be the means of greatly reducing our annual yield of potatoes. Should these diseases become prevalent throughout the United States the cost of producing future crops might be greatly increased.

“Do not, therefore, under any circumstances use foreign-grown potatoes for seed, either at the north or at the south. The sorts which are coming to this country at the present time are FORCING RHUBARB.

I am thinking of setting a bench with pie plant. Will it do all right with carnations? Will it be best to make a bed on the ground or in a bench six or eight inches from the ground, with heating pipes by the side of the bench? What kind of fertilizer should be used and what is the best variety of pie plant? At what time of the year should it be put in the house? Will roots that have grown in a garden all summer be all right for use the following winter? If not, where could I get roots? The climate here, in northwestern Oregon, is warm and rainy in winter, but with little sunshine. The thermometer rarely registers as low as 10 or 12 degrees above zero.

A. H. B.

You can force rhubarb either on raised or solid beds, it does not matter which. It will do well in a carnation temperature, but better if a little warmer after being well started. Mammoth Victoria and Linnæus are probably the best varieties.

Select only good, strong clumps from a field 2 years old or more—not younger than that, or they are not strong enough. Lift the clumps with some soil in the fall, just before the ground freezes up, and store them in a shed where they will be available any time a batch is wanted. Perhaps in your climate you could go outside and dig them any time they are wanted, which would be better.

When taken inside, the clumps are packed close together; some fine soil is put in between and on top and they are watered well the first time, but not too freely for a while afterward. Regular rhubarb houses are usually dark and made of lumber. The plants are often grown under carnation benches, along the edges, but a bed by itself is undoubtedly better. More clumps are brought in when one lot becomes exhausted.

It would be advisable to try the experiment on a small scale first. It is not too late yet to put in a few clumps and get some experience.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Subscribers on the Pacific coast should not fail to note that their special department of The Review has grown until it now occupies five pages. Give us a boost and the Pacific Coast Department will keep right on growing.

Spokane, Wash.—A burglar recently entered the Ziegler Flower Store, at 8 Lincoln street, by forcing the door, and escaped with the contents of the cash drawer.

San Mateo, Cal.—The MacRorie-McLaren Co. has recently received a great deal of local newspaper publicity because of a shipment of orchid plants to England for the nobility.

Eugene, Ore.—R. Rae & Son are planning to make large additions to their greenhouses on West Eighth street. They will erect several more houses and otherwise improve the place.

Bakersfield, Cal.—C. D. Oldershaw, of 2607 Chester lane, has charge of the work of planting the shrubs and trees in the grounds surrounding the new courthouse. It is said that two carloads of stock will be used.

Mountain View, Cal.—Richard Diener has been at work for a long time on the production of new plants. His most promising novelty, he thinks, is Carnation California, which probably will be introduced at an early date. Wm. Metzner is a partner in the enterprise of Diener & Co.

Bellingham, Wash.—At a recent meeting of the Western Washington Horticultural Association, held in this city, the following officers were elected: President, C. J. Stuart, of Monroe; vice-president, C. E. Flynt, of this city; secretary, J. Wayland, of Clarke county; treasurer, John A. Stewart, of Christopher. Puyallup was chosen as the place of the next meeting, to be held sometime in November.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

There is a decidedly better tone to business since the rain, and stock in all lines is cleaning up regularly. The outdoor flowers have suffered somewhat and it has been difficult to gather them, and this has been all in favor of indoor flowers. The fashion show in the large stores has led to a demand for quite a large quantity of greens, mostly asparagus strings, and the cheaper grades of flowers, while many palms and other large plants have been rented out for the occasion.

Greenhouse carnations are fine and in full supply. Roses are fairly plentiful, good reds being in shortest supply. Daffodils are everywhere and tulips are coming more plentifully, with longer and better stems. Valley is in better supply and of superior quality to that shown of late. Orchids run along about even with the demand, but the quality is not first-rate. Cattleya Schroederæ and Phalenopsis amabilis are the most plentiful and are more frequently seen than any others. Acacia and other boughs are not so much shown. The call for smilax is not so good as that for other greens. In pot plants fine azaleas, rhododendrons and assorted bulb stock are shown, but the demand is not great. The Japanese azaleas shown are simply a mass of flowers and these sell on sight, only a few being offered.

Various Notes.

Tassano Bros. expect the first arrivals of outdoor roses from their ranch in a few days. They are looking grand and are probably as good as any in southern California. Business in all lines is good here.

Howard & Smith report that nursery stock has been moving rapidly since the rains. A feature just beginning at their Montebello nurseries is the large block of their seedling amaryllis, or hippeastrum. They have been working with this species of plants for several years and have the cream of all varieties. Their own seedlings, as they come in line, show a marked superiority even over the best European named stock, and from now until June 1 or thereabouts the nursery will be well worthy a visit for this feature alone.

Good work, carried out in the best style with flowers of best quality, is the rule with the Hayward Floral Co., and this, combined with a good location, accounts for the large and constantly increasing business here.

At the establishment of the H. N. Gage Co., daffodils from under lath have been moving well, the flowers being large, clean and on good, stiff stems. Tulips and other spring flowers are being handled in large quantities, and also excellent valley.

Business is booming at the Roserie, several large decorations having been carried out of late. Mr. Muller recently returned from a week's stay on the desert, where Mrs. Muller still has to stay.

At the Standard Pottery a big run on the large bowls is reported. These are fine, well finished goods, in which the firm takes great pride. The ordinary pots as made here are light and strong, and for this reason are fine for shipping long distances.

A. F. Borden reports business as keeping up well. He has been showing elegant pot hyacinths, while the quality of the carnations being shipped in from his Hollywood greenhouses is of the best.

Funeral work still keeps the staff at Morris Goldenson's on the rush. The Japanese azaleas shown here are marvels of good culture and show the value of this section.

Early orders for young pot roses are being filled at Dieterich & Turner's range at Montebello. The young stock is large and in the best of condition, as are the blocks of Boston and other ferns. The rose houses are coming along in grand shape for Easter.

The whole of Chas. Brazee's immense cut of tulips is being handled by the Los Angeles Flower Market and the quality of the flowers is magnificent. "Little Holland" was the name suggested to Mr. Brazee for his Wilmington ranch by one of the Holland salesmen recently.

S. Murata, who bought out S. Shima's business at 655 South Hill street recently, is doing a brisk trade and his delivery auto truck is kept on the run all the time. Good stock in all lines is being shipped.

Tulips, Easter lilies and long American Beauties are leaders just now with Creutz & Co. Trade in greens is fine.

San Francisco has decided on a central market. What's the matter with Los Angeles?

The yellow Mexican poppy, Hunnemannia fumariifolia, is quite attractive now and it stands well as a cut flower, much better than the California poppy, eschscholzia.

Visitors to the El Reah Greenhouses, at Hollywood, say that the Easter lilies there are the best on the coast.

H. R. Richards.

TACOMA WASH.

The Market.

This city and vicinity continue to have fine weather and the prolonged oversupply has forced the prices down somewhat. Carnations are good and may be had in any quantity, but most of the larger growers will clean out the old stock as soon as Easter is over. Lilies seem to be coming slowly, despite the bright weather and the generous amount of fuel being consumed to get them in on time. All kinds of bulbous stock are more plentiful, but there is not the oversupply of former years.

Trip to Seattle.

Leaving Tacoma at 9 a. m. March 13, twenty-four of the local florists, including the bowling team, took a special car for Seattle, where they were met by the Seattle club.

After a short car ride, followed by a launch ride over beautiful Lake Washington, we arrived at the range of the East Seattle Floral Co. Here we were shown through the well kept houses by the proprietors, Messrs. Stuber and Peterson, after which refreshments were served in the packing rooms.

From here we were taken to the establishments of the Wilson Floral Co. and the Mathieson Floral Co.; then to Frank Bell's and later to Risdon & Son's place, where a picture of the two clubs was taken in the largest greenhouse in the state of Washington.

A. E. Buxton's place was next visited, and after another short car ride we found ourselves again in the city. A banquet was served at the Olympus cafe, after which all went to the bowling alleys. As usual, the Seattle boys were out of luck and we easily took two of the three games played. No especially high scores were rolled, though the averages were good.

After the games, all went to the club rooms, where a joint meeting was held. Refreshments were again served and we returned home, tired but believing it to be the best day ever. These are the little things that tend to bring the two cities closer together, both in a business and social way, and will no doubt do much good to the trade of both cities.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Miefke opened a flower store here last week. She will carry on a general florists' and nursery business. The stock will be supplied from her greenhouses at Fife.

The Smith Floral Co. is making extensive improvements in its new store. A fine show case is among the attractions noted. The company's greenhouses in the south end are looking well, and Mr. Smith reports business good along all lines. J. L. S.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The bright weather has put a quietus on business. It seems as though funeral work slacks up the same as the counter trade. Carnations are overplentiful in all varieties, but the percentage of splits is being decreased as the season advances. Roses are increasing in quantity but are far from being in surplus. Daffodils are in full bloom in the gardens, so prices are gradually declining. The demand for pans of hyacinths and tulips has been remarkably brisk and good prices generally have prevailed, although the low prices of some florists make some people skeptical of their values.

Various Notes.

Clarke Bros. shipped a large consignment of Oregon grape to San Francisco this week, to be used by the Oregon delegation selecting the first site at the exposition grounds.

Alder & Robinson have opened a store in Oregon City, reporting business satisfactory to date. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

According to the weather man, this vicinity has had but nine inches of rain this season, as against twenty-seven inches one year ago. We have had most of these showers during the last few days and they were the most welcome blessings this portion of California has had for some time. Now that the fear of an excessively dry season is dissipated, everyone feels better and the chances for business have increased to quite a noticeable extent. We are in the midst of the lenten quietness and are having about the same amount of trade as in this season last year. Funeral orders are good and have been so for several weeks.

There is plenty of stock, with an abundance of late-flowering narcissi, brought into shape by the rains. Violets are scarce and a few weeks of warm weather will finish them for the season. Carnations and roses are a shade lower in price than they have been, with still lower quotations in sight. Easter lilies, freesias, hyacinths and valley are about as they were last week. Tulips are not so plentiful. Fruit blossoms and wild flowers are in evidence. Greens are not as plentiful as they usually are at this time. The wild maidenhair is slow in growing this year and its scarcity

SEATTLE, WASH.The Market.

Trade was fairly good last week, several large funeral orders having helped to clean up some of the surplus stock. Flowers of most varieties are plentiful and in most cases quite up to the demand. St. Patrick's day created a little stimulus for white carnations. There are too many carnations, and the retailing of them at 35 cents a dozen does not tend to improve their status. In the same way the cheapness of violets causes the better class of flower buyers to discontinue wearing them. Bulb stock continues cheap. Sweet peas are in most of the stores, but there is no great sale for them. The same may be said of valley, the price of which does not pay the cost of the pips. Good quality hyacinths are scarce, while spiraea is fairly plentiful.

The party enjoyed the sight of the fine bedding stock and carnations grown by these enterprising florists. They then continued on the lake to Bryn Mawr, where the plant of R. A. Wilson was visited. The party then bid farewell to the lake at Brighton beach, where the plants of A. B. Mathieson, A. E. Buxton, Frank Bell and Risdon & Son were looked over. Various kinds of refreshments were served at each stop. Returning, dinner was served at the Olympus cafe, after which the principal event of the day, the bowling match, was staged. NURSERY NEWS.AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

THE legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen has joined hands with the officials of the Department of Agriculture in the effort to secure the passage of House Bill 18,000, the quarantine bill, feeling that the original determination to oppose the bill will be likely to result in the enactment of a law much more burdensome to the trade.

DANIEL T. MCCARTHY, at Lockport, N. Y., recently advertised for hunters to shoot rabbits on his place south of the city. Under the law, rabbits can be shot when a pest to fruit trees and farms. "I'm a poor shot," said McCarthy, "and the rabbits have been multiplying without subtraction. The damage amounts to thousands of dollars for Niagara nurserymen."

THE San Benito Coöperative Nursery Co., Hollister, Cal., has bought twenty-nine acres in what is known as the Hogan field. This company, which is to be immediately incorporated, is composed of P. Nieson, Al Freddersen, G. F. Kennedy, S. G. Button, Joe Canning, Michael Sauf-naeur, Ed Smith, A. A. Smith and George Nielson. They have recently purchased the Kennedy nursery, about seventeen miles from Hollister, on the Tres Pinos creek, and already have a stock of 50,000 trees, which will be placed on the market this fall.

THE Peters Nursery Co., Knoxville, Tenn., has been succeeded by the Rose-cliff Nursery, with C. J. McClung, III, as owner and manager. The new concern has taken over the holdings of the old company, which consist of a tract of land of 135 acres near Bearden. A new road leading from the Kingston pike to the nursery will be built immediately. An important announcement made by the new management is that it will be in a position to do landscape gardening on a large or small scale. An expert landscape man has been secured.

THE JUNE CONVENTION.

A joint meeting of the various committees working on the thirty-seventh convention of the A. A. N., June 12 to 14, was held in Boston, March 12, attended by Secretary John Hall, Vice-President W. H. Wyman and Harlan P. Kelsey, of the committee on arrangements; J. Woodward Manning, committee on entertainment, and A. E. Robinson, committee on exhibits. A change in convention headquarters was found necessary and the Hotel Somerset was chosen. The business sessions

MARLOW BROS. BRANCHING OUT.

The Marlow Bros. Seed Co., of Wichita, Kan., has been incorporated to do a wholesale and retail seed business. The officers are Clarence Marlow, president; Scott B. Powers, of Republic, Mo., vice-president; William Marlow, Wichita, secretary and treasurer. The paid up capital stock is given at $25,000. The Marlow brothers are successors to Puckett & Bagby at 119 West Douglas avenue, Wichita, buying that retail seed store about a year ago. At that time they conceived the idea of a wholesale seed house in Wichita, and have been trying the proposition out since last summer. The demand for seeds shipped out of Wichita to the southwest was found to be so satisfactory that the organization of a wholesale seed company was decided upon. The new company plans to at once start work on new warehouses and later on a new store building. From three to five salesmen will be placed in the field to cover the territory south to the Rio Grande and the Gulf of Mexico.

SEASON OPEN AT WESTCHESTER.

The nurseries about Westchester, Pa., are busy preparing for the usual spring work of shipping and some orders have already been sent out, mostly of hardy shrubs and trees consigned to southern points. Many orders are being boxed ready for shipment in the large packing sheds, but the real shipping will not start until there is an improvement in the weather.

The various forces of field men are ready to commence work at any time and will do so just as soon as the weather permits. The traveling workmen have arrived on the ground and the camps are being gotten in shape by them to await the arrival of the main force. A few have been here all winter and these have been keeping house at the camps and getting things in readiness for the spring. The same men return nearly every season and are ex-

BATAVIA, N. Y.

Green carnations, and also other cut flowers, sold quite well here for St. Patrick's day. We believe this was due to the fact that the anniversary of Ireland's patron saint fell on a Sunday this year, which was one of the most beautiful days we have had this season. The weather was so invigorating that nearly everyone, Irish and those who are not of that nationality, could not help but wear a smile, and when passing the windows of Gus Noack and those of Stroh's their loose change was soon coaxed from their pockets by the display of fine carnations that were offered for sale. We are glad to say that St. Patrick's day is growing in popularity, and we hope that it will continue so for some years to come.

We believe that business will pick up now, as it does in other lines of trade.

...NEWS NOTES...

Newton Highlands, Mass.—A. H. Fewkes, of the Highland Conservatories, is the owner of a new automobile.

New Haven, Ind.—The New Haven Floral Co., with $5,000 capital stock, has been incorporated by H. J. C. Leitz, H. F. Herman and Sophia L. Herman.

Cleveland, O.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Maynard, formerly of Detroit, have returned from a short trip to Bermuda, report having the time of their lives, and will be in Cleveland, at 1480 Lauderdale avenue, for a few months.

Auburn, Ind.—August Fleming, the pioneer florist, is seriously ill from a tumorous growth. He was taken to the Sacred Heart hospital at Garrett, Ind., and his physicians pronounce him gradually growing weaker.

Shreveport, La.—A. J. Manhein, whose home and greenhouse were destroyed in the recent cyclone in which his baby lost its life, has been elected secretary and steward of the new home of the Elks, now nearing completion.

Adrian, Mich.—Squire Johnson, who for many years operated a truck farm, has decided to engage in similar business again, and to that end has purchased W. L. Snyder's 14-acre tract, with the greenhouses and residence, at 82 Maple avenue, west. Fred Dermeyer will act as Mr. Johnson's manager.

Dows, Ia.—The residence of I. H. Shaffer, manager of the Dows Greenhouse, caught fire March 17 and was partially destroyed. In trying to extinguish the fire Mr. Shaffer was overcome by the smoke and heat, but it is expected that he will be able to attend to business in a few days. The property damaged was covered by insurance.

Dayton, O.—Ione B. Frank, wife of Horace M. Frank, manager for the Heiss Co., suffered a painful injury March 16 and one that may cost her the sight of the right eye. She was at the store with her husband and in some manner stumbled and fell heavily. Her face came in contact with a piece of wire used in making designs and the ball was penetrated.

Providence, R. I.—Fire March 14 put 4,600 city telephones out of commission for several days. Among the florists affected were Elmwood Greenhouses, F. Deitz, Hope Greenhouses, A. J. Johnson, Geo. Johnson & Son, T. H. McAndrew, Morey & Taylor, Park Greenhouses, F. B. Pierce, N. D. Pierce, Jr., A. J. Davis, J. R. Hamilton, C. H. Hunt, F. E. Sanders and J. F. Jordan.

ST. NICHOLAS

You should plant St. Nicholas next season BECAUSE :—

It covers the whole season with top grade blooms.

It does not crop, nor go off in color at any time from September to July.

It is a great keeper and shipper.

It outsells all other scarlets over the counter.

It has been bringing us from 35 to 50 per cent more all season, than the best Beacon we ever grew.

Many growers have come to see it growing, and then placed their orders.

A number of them placed orders early, then came to see it and doubled the original order.

We can still give you cuttings that will make fine stock for blooming next winter. But let's have your order at once.

$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

We have 2000 fine plants of Beacon in 2-inch pots to sell at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Also cuttings in sand, strong and well rooted, $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

A Seedling of S. M. MERWARTH & BRO., Easton, Pa.

Parentage, HARLOWARDEN and ENCHANTRESS

As a medium-priced "red" it has a very promising future

From the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., where this has been grown on trial, we have a letter under date of Nov. 24, 1911, saying: "So far we like the new seedling very much; the color of the flower is fine and the size good. The stems are stiff and the number of blooms to a plant shows it will be a good producer."

E. J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., who has been growing five hundred on trial, writes us under date of Jan. 8, 1912: "So far this season this variety has produced more than double the blooms Beacon has, planted in the same house, and I feel sure it will maintain its lead the balance of the season. It is of a much brighter color than Beacon, flower as large, with a good stem, and a calyx that practically does not split, not averaging more than one split flower a week from the five hundred plants."

GLEN COVE, L. I.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held March 13 at Pembroke hall. There were interesting exhibits in the monthly competition, for which S. J. Trepess, A. Mackenzie and J. Halloway acted as judges. Their decisions were as follows:

Vase of roses, John W. Everett, gardener for J. T. Pratt, first; J. McDonald, gardener for E. Queen, and Joseph Robinson, gardener for Colgate Hoyt, honorable mention. Cauliflower, J. W. Everett, first. Henry Gaut, gardener for H. L. Pratt, received a certificate of culture for lettuce and a certificate of merit for antirrhinums. Scott Bros. received a certificate of merit for William Eccles carnations, named for the gardener of Mortimer L. Schiff, of Oyster Bay.

Several offers of prizes to be competed for at the annual show were received. It was decided that the silver cup donated by Mrs. E. M. Townsend, of Oyster Bay, be competed for at the dahlia show for outdoor roses, twelve varieties, six of each.

It was decided that the Nassau Horticultural Society should become a member of the State Floral Society. M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., was made an active member instead of being an honorary member.

Next month's exhibit will comprise one pot of calceolaria, vase outdoor flowering shrubs and six tomatoes.

Middletown, N. Y.—On Tuesday, February 13, Ed. A. Lorentz celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary as a florist on Spring street, and his friends were profuse in their congratulations. Starting in a small way, he has built up a flourishing business and his greenhouses are now among the finest in the county. All the houses have recently been rebuilt, with as great a use as possible of concrete and iron. He has a handsome office, with metallic inside walls and ceilings. He grows a miscellaneous stock, for the retail trade only.

MADISON, N. J.

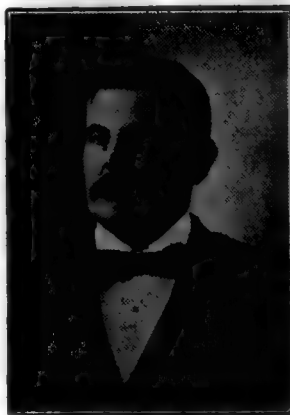

Carnation night called out an almost full attendance of the members of the Gardeners' Club and everyone was more than repaid. Geo. Hubbard, one of the younger members, came to the fore with a fine paper on the propagation of the carnation. G. F. Neipp, of Chatham, treated on cultivation from a florist's standpoint, and John Dunn, foreman to Wm. H. Duckham, gave carnation culture from a private gardener's point of view. Mr. Dunn is another of the younger men. Each essay elicited applause.

The show itself was grand. Peter Fisher's Gorgeous received a certificate of merit. He also showed Benora in fine shape. C. H. Totty had Wodenethe and Brooklyn in excellent form, they having been shown several times to this club. G. F. Neipp, Chatham, had Gloriosa, which earned a cultural certificate. Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., had white seedling No. 618, showing up well. Florham Estate, Robt. Tyson, superintendent, had a vase each of Alma Ward, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Rose-pink Enchantress, awarded cultural certificates. Robt. Roper, of Boston, had a fine vase of seedlings. Merwarth Bros., of Easton, Pa., had a beautiful vase of Comfort. Springbrook Farm showed a vase of Rose-pink Enchantress and E. Reagan a vase of mixed carnations. Ernest Wild had a magnificent vase of Beauty of Nice stocks, awarded a cultural certificate. Wm. H. Duckham showed sixteen pots of seedling amaryllis, a superb exhibit, awarded a cultural certificate, and also a pan of the new primula, malacoides, which received a certificate of merit. The standard of the exhibits was high and the newer things were well gone over, and many of them favorably impressed the gardeners and florists present.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade, with the exception of the last few days, has been unusually quiet. Stock of all kinds is plentiful. The streets are assuming a springlike effect, as every corner downtown has a flower stand. The last week was a busy one for the palm decorators, owing to the many store openings. Next week is the auto show, which should liven things considerably.

Various Notes.

Peter Weiland, of New Castle, has been sending the best sweet peas into this market that have been seen this season.

Fred Stolti, formerly with A. Wiegand & Sons but for the last two weeks with Alfred Brand, has resigned his position.

The Smith & Young Co. has rented a store room at 227 East Ohio street and will remove the wholesale department to this address next week. This is a large room with a commodious basement, and will give ample room for some time to come for the rapidly increasing business.

Charles Pahud is spending his spare time investigating commercial automobiles.

Ferd Hitz & Son, of Madison, Ind., have been shipping carnations to this market.

The Smith & Young Co. has purchased glass for a house 30x300.

A. Wiegand & Sons have been busy the last week with store decorations.

L. F. Benson has his delivery automobile, which was recently damaged by a street car, back in service again.

W. E. Clark, with the Clark Bros. Flower Pot Mfg. Co., of Crooksville, O., spent a few days with the trade last week.

John Bertermann and Adolph Baur have returned from the Chicago spring show, which they pronounced a success.

Baur & Steinkamp have ordered material for a new house 30x355 feet.

H. L. W.

Independence, Kan.—Mrs. Cora B. Crew, of this town, has purchased property at Cherryvale and will build a greenhouse there.

Club Meeting.

The Springfield Florists' Club held its monthly meeting in the office of the American Rose and Plant Co., in Clifton avenue, Monday evening, March 18. The bill for cost of sodding and caretaking of the esplanade plot was allowed, amounting to $180. Wm. H. Guthrie, who is a grower of Rex begonias, was elected a member of the club.

An interesting paper on "Peonies," prepared by John M. Good, was read in the absence of Mr. Good by George H. Mellen. The origin of the peony and its gradual importation from China under great difficulties was traced, as well as its wonderful development in recent years. The Chinese have a pedigree list running back 1,200 years, while the American Peony Society has been only nine years compiling its list, in which work it has only got fairly well started. The magnificent sight during the blooming season at the Good & Welsh peony farm at Mud Run was interestingly described. Ward Welsh, the "farmer member" of the club, answered numerous questions as to soil, habits of growth and division of varieties. Mr. Welsh extended an invitation to the club to visit his farm at the season for blooms and water-melons, going via Husted and the hay wagon route, which invitation was accepted. Ge Dale.

New Haven, Conn.—Schilder & Lefebvre are planning to take over a greenhouse establishment of 16,000 square feet near Philadelphia and grow for that market.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business is holding up satisfactorily, and there are a few large functions in the nature of weddings, fetes or receptions to accelerate the general volume of trade. Prices range about normal; the quality is good and so is quantity. Funeral work has continued good all winter and, being well distributed, has kept everyone more or less busy. Bulb stock in pans and pots is beginning to make its appearance and give indications of the approach of the Eastertide. It is expected that there will be a sufficient supply for this occasion.

Various Notes.

T. J. Johnston & Co., Ed Brooke manager, have added a handsome new delivery automobile to their garage. This gives this concern two automobiles for delivery and one for pleasure.

T. H. McAndrews has commenced cutting fine valley from his new range of houses at East Providence.

Maurice Miller, for several years with William B. Hazard, has opened a store on Westminster street, near Franklin street.

The decorations for the Empire theater are being furnished by The Rosery.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, has been serving on jury duty at the Superior court of Washington county.

Herbert E. Ripley is now in charge of the cut flower department at Chipman's greenhouses at Woonsocket.

The old reliable firm, GODFREY ASCHMANN, is not connected with any other firm and is more active than ever

Prepare for Easter!

From whom will we purchase our Easter supply?

From our old friend, GODFREY ASCHMANN, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past, and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

One of Godfrey Aschmann's Lilium Multiflorum Houses (photo taken March 12, 1912). No arguments needed, speaks for itself. The real stuff—The cream of Japan's production. The true Lilium Multiflorum, raised from 9 to 10-inch selected bulbs, $95.00 per 1000. Just look at the picture—they are just right for Easter trade. We sell them cheap too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-inch pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-inch pots.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have four houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Vander Cruysen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Vander Cruysen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tiptop condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade, 6, 7 and 8-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each. NOTICE.—A portion of large size Mme. Vander Cruysen must be ordered in connection with small sizes, because we were able to get only a limited amount of this variety in smaller sizes.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6-in. pots, 50c, 60c and 75c.

Niobe, double white, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each. Vervaeana, double variegated, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. De Schryveriana (double variegated), 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25. Simon Mardner, double pink, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Pres. Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $2.00. Empress of India, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo, best red, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Helene Thelemann, Mme. Eichhaute, etc., 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Of the varieties left to us, we will give you a good assortment for 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and upwards, just as you say. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Hydrangea Otaksa never was as good as this year, green as grass, full of buds, every branch stocked up. 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Primula Chinensis, in bloom, 5½-in., $2.50 per doz.

Oinaria Hybrida Grandiflora. Henry F. Mitchell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Dielytra Spectabilis (Bleeding Heart), 6-in. pots, 35c to 50c.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6 to 7-in. pots, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or 100 the same.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

HYACINTHS, DAFFODILS, TULIPS.

Bulbs imported by ourselves at high prices from first-class growers in Holland; and cannot be compared with cheap bulbs flooding the market in the fall.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c; 9-in. pans, edged with Asparagus Plumosus, giving them an attractive appearance, 75c; 10-in. pans, filled with first size Grand Maitre hyacinths, 2 to 3 flowers to each bulb, 13 to 15 in. high, also edged with Asparagus Plumosus, $1.00 per pan.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence. 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Murillo Tulips, double, pinkish pearl, valued very highly as a pot tulip, 3 bulbs in a 4-in. pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100. Tourneol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $2.00 per dozen pots; $15.00 per 100. 9-in. pans, filled with Tourneol or Murillo tulips, edged with Asparagus Plumosus, 75c per pan. Pans nicely packed with excelsior, preventing breakage.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in., made up of 3 plants, 15c, 25c; 5½-in., 25c.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glaucia and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 18th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, spring 1911 importation, 6 to 7-in. pots, 5 years old, 3 good tiers, 15, 18 to 20 inches high, 24 to 26 inches across, very handsome, $1.50 to $2.00 each; small size 6-in., $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa Glaucia. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 3, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35 and 40 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 5½-in., 3 to 4 tiers, 15, 17 to 20 in. high, 50c to 60c; spring 1911 importation. Can meet all applications.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 3 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. This is a special bargain, seldom offered.

TWO HOUSES DEVOTED TO FERNS.

All in fine condition. The 7 and 8-in. sizes are as large as a bushel basket—some as large as a washtub; ALL POT-GROWN.

Nephrolepis Glatrasii. This is a very handsome fern, resembling the Scottii, but shorter and bushier, with weeping habit, which gives it a very fine appearance and makes it valuable. 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c; 3 to 4-in., 20c to 25c.

IMPORTER, WHOLESALE GROWER AND SHIPPER OF POT PLANTS

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been brisk here for the last two weeks, with an abundance of stock on hand. Roses have been quite plentiful and of good quality. They have been used up closely at all times. Carnations are plentiful and several firms have made special sales on them at times. These sales have served to keep them down so there has been no overstock at any time. Lilies have been lacking in supply for a time and the demand was greater than the cut.

Sweet peas are quite plentiful, with a heavy demand, and they are generally about all used up. The demand has been heavy for valley and at times there was not nearly enough to go around. Bulb stock has been plentiful, with some to spare at times, but as a rule it is mostly used up. Pot plants have been moving well, with a good supply on hand. Everybody is making preparations for Easter and no doubt there will be a good supply of stock.

Various Notes.

Ben Flynn, of Graff's store, reports extra heavy business in funeral work.

Sherman Stephens says things are moving quite lively out at his place.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is rushing the work on the store and hopes to have it all finished up for Easter.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports good business on the flower side, but seed trade has hardly opened up locally, as the weather has been backward and some of the gardeners are not buying as early as usual.

There have been several Greek stands opened up in the last two weeks and they seem to be doing some business.

The Aphine Manufacturing Co., Madison, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of Jan. 27, will say that we have been using Fungine on let-tuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the Aphine for lice on lettuce instead of [a nicotine preparation] and other mix-tures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots; if so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this Fungine as the season ad-vances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rap-ids growers to these products.

Yours very truly,

Greenhouse Heating.

ONE of the largest concerns supplying Pocahontas coal to florists, and it is the favorite fuel with many growers, gives it as its opinion that the labor troubles that are imminent in the coal trade will be rather long drawn out.

HEAT FOR FLORIST'S DWELLING.

Will you kindly inform me what size of radiators, or how many square feet of radiation, will be required to heat two rooms in my dwelling, adjoining the greenhouses? I am using overhead mains. Will special radiators be needed? The water in the boiler is most of the time at 180 degrees and I want a temperature of 70 degrees in both rooms when the outside temperature is 25 degrees below zero, the coldest we had this winter. The two rooms have no doors leading to the outside; they have 8-inch cement walls, plastered outside and finished inside with siding all over. One room is eleven feet long, six feet wide and eight feet high; it has one window, $2\frac{1}{2} \times 5$ feet. The other room is eleven feet square and eight feet high; it has two windows, each $2\frac{1}{2} \times 5$ feet. There is a connecting door between the two rooms. There are other rooms in the rear of these two rooms.

H. S.

The amount of radiation depends to some extent upon the amount of wall surface exposed to the outside air. The arrangement of the rooms is not quite clear, but supposing that each of the rooms has two walls exposed, and that the rooms to the rear are heated, it should be possible to heat the smaller room, 6×11 feet, by using a radiator containing forty square feet of radiating surface. The larger room should have sixty-four feet of radiation.

DEEPEN THE BOILER PIT.

A short time ago I wrote to you asking for information on the heating of my greenhouse. However, I did not give as full particulars as I might and a brother florist has advised me to write again, giving more explicit details. I have run the steam system for two winters and have not got satisfactory results. My boiler, I think, is large enough, but perhaps there is not enough pipe for radiation. When I build a larger place, I shall probably install a hot water system, but I must use the steam system for the present. My greenhouse is 12×60 feet, six feet high to the eaves and nine feet to the ridge. It has an even-span roof. The house runs east and west. The gables are glass and there is a foot and a half of glass in the south wall. The required temperature is 60 degrees when the outside temperature is zero.

The boiler is of the round, upright type, for steam, and is six horse-power. It contains thirty 2-inch flues, three of the coils are just about on the same level as the water in the boiler, and when I let cold water in to fill the boiler the water backs up into the coils. The lower ten feet of the chimney consists of 10-inch round tile, enclosed in cement, and above that there is about eight feet of galvanized pipe. Is that enough chimney for Pocahontas mine run coal? The chimney is seventy feet from any building. How low should the boiler be, as compared with the coils, in order to maintain a good cir-ulation? Where should the air valves be placed? The piping consists of a 2-inch overhead feed pipe in the center of the house, and returns under the side benches. At the north side there are two 1½-inch returns and one 2-inch return; at the south side there is one radiator containing three 1-inch pipes. I shall greatly appreciate any information, as I am tired of experimenting. I am located in southeastern Michigan.

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Better than All Others

I have fired boilers for the last forty years. The Kroeschell is the best I have ever used. I have two cast iron boilers, also a locomotive boiler coupled with yours, but did not need to use the cast iron boilers this winter. Your No. 7 boiler is rated at 15,000 sq. ft. of glass and carries 25,000 sq. ft. of glass until the outside temperature goes down to 10° of frost. We have no trouble to keep temperatures in our houses with easy firing since we installed your boiler. From the boiler to the farthest end of our violet houses and return is 800 feet, and circulates very quickly.

C. H. W. C.

It is always desirable to have a steam boiler two feet below the coils, when a gravity system is used, and for a large range the difference in height should be even more than two feet. The air valves should be near the lower end of each of the coils. While the boiler in question would probably test about five horse-power, the grate is rather small for greenhouse heating, where it is desirable to leave the fire for several hours at night. The trouble referred to could probably be corrected by sinking the boiler about two feet. If this can not be done, a check valve could be placed in the return and the water supplied to the boiler by means of an electric pump.

For a house requiring only 300 square feet of steam radiation it is generally more satisfactory to use hot water, but the same difficulty would be met with unless the boiler can be lowered. While, as a rule, it is advisable to have chimneys at least twenty-five feet high, if a good draft can be secured with a height of eighteen feet, that is all that is required. The amount of radiation is fairly correct, although another 1½-inch return could be used to advantage along the south side of the house.

The plaintiffs allege that gas from defective mains entered their greenhouses and destroyed stock, causing damage to the amount asked in the complaint. They further claim that the gas company was notified of the defective mains and made some repairs, but that these were done in such an unworkmanlike and unskillful manner that the gas again percolated through the ground into their greenhouse and caused damage to their stock. Mackie & Hall represent the plaintiffs, and trial is desired in this county.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

A permanent meeting place was considered by the Syracuse Florists' Association at its third meeting, held at the Vanderbilt. The matter will be settled at the April meeting.

R. H. C. Bard, president, was in the chair. Twelve members were elected, making a total membership of thirty-four, and the general welfare of the business was discussed. The association was formed in January, with Mr. Bard as president; P. R. Quinlan, vice-president; W. E. Day, secretary, and Harry Bellamy, treasurer.

NEW CARLISLE, O.

W. N. Scarff is undecided whether or not he will rebuild the greenhouses which collapsed under the heavy snow some time ago. Prof. C. W. Waid was manager of the greenhouses and now he and Mr. Scarff have had a settlement. Mr. Scarff has purchased the interest of Prof. Waid, who expects to leave soon. Prof. Waid is now considering a position at an experimental station at Morgantown, Va. He came from the Ohio Experiment Station at Wooster, O., when he entered the contract with Mr. Scarff.

Minerva, O.—During the six years in which A. M. Stackhouse has been in business here, the amount of his yearly sales has rapidly increased. Though the population of this town is only about 1,200, there are several neighboring towns that contribute to the volume of trade. The outlook for this season is good.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING
AND
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

While the outlook was rather dull, business picked up toward the end of last week, resulting in a clean-up of all available stock on the market. Carnations and roses piled up, but the special sales relieved this situation Friday and Saturday.

On the whole the prices which stock brought were nothing startling, but almost any price is better than the ash barrel.

Until now we have had winter weather, but the last few days brought a heavy thaw and indications are that spring has come at last. Bulb stock is, of course, plentiful, especially yellow daffodils. Lilies are also seen in large quantities.

Various Notes.

A most cordial invitation is extended to all florists, their wives and employees to spend Monday evening, March 25, at the beautiful new establishment of the Bem Floral Co. There will be music and plenty of lunch. Florists from anywhere in the universe are welcome. While the store, which, by the way, will be one of the finest and most complete flower stores in the country, is practically completed, Mr. Pochelon will not open it to the public until about Wednesday, March 27, with a formal opening later.

One of the most attractive show windows on Woodward avenue last week was that of J. F. Sullivan. It was a typical St. Patrick's day window. In one corner stood a large painting of St. Patrick. In the foreground were numerous snakes, apparently winding their way over the grass amidst clumps of shamrock plants; to top off the whole, a small piece of the famous Blarney stone was conspicuous.

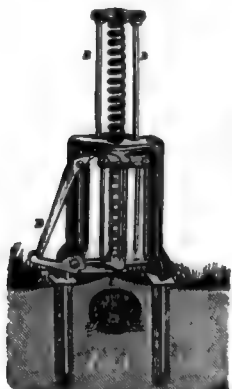

This is spring opening week at the stores and it has kept some of the florists decidedly busy. J. L. Hudson's store was tastefully decorated by Breitmeyer's staff. B. Schroeter supplied the decoration for Crowley, Milner & Traver, and the Bird Co. openings.

Walter Mundt was elected a member of the Detroit Florists' Club at a recent meeting.

About April 1 Hufford & Mabius will move from their present quarters to their new location at 247-249 Randolph street, where they will have all modern conveniences to be found in a first-class flower store. H. S.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

There has been quite an improvement in the demand for cut flowers, but little difference in prices. In some instances they have not been quite so good, but as there has been a pretty fair cleaning up there is not much complaint from the wholesalers. As the retailers are making a fine showing of blooming plants, their stores look fine and Easter expectations are good. The indications are for heavy supplies of stock, which no doubt will keep prices down and encourage increased sales, which is nearly always the case when flowers are within reach of the masses.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams is taking advantage of the lenten season for spring house-cleaning and redecorating her store, which will be completed this week.

Randolph & McClements are in the midst of plans for their big new store on Penn avenue, near Highland, which, with the new conservatories recently built, will be one of the show places of our city. The new store, when completed, will take the place of the Penn avenue and the Baum street stores which are now being operated. The new place is one of the most desirable locations in the east end.

The Zieger Co. closed its Highland avenue store on the expiration of the lease, and now has a temporary store on Penn avenue.

This city seems peculiar. In order to do business one must be right in the line of travel, as the general public will not go a step out of its road if they can help it and the trade must bow to the whim, no matter how high the rent.

The Phipps conservatory, Schenley park, is rearranging the houses for the annual Easter show, and Foreman John Jones is moving his stock around so as to have it come just right. He anticipates the finest show ever held and, after the long, hard winter, people are hungry for something of that kind.

Chas. Koenig, the lily grower, says Pittsburgh will have enough lilies this year to supply the country.

EASTER NUMBER

in the thought of every man or firm intending to erect a greenhouse, or range of houses, should be the question of results:—Which construction will give the most sunlight during the long winter months, when every ray of light means money, and, at the same time, be strong enough to stand the strain of wind and snow? Right here is where the construction illustrated herewith comes into the question. You can see for yourself how light the house is—no posts or heavy rafters to cast shadows—a clear, unbroken view from end to end; but, is it strong? Yes—unqualifiedly, Yes! Many of the world's largest buildings, the strength of which is unquestioned—such as the big assembly halls, coliseums, etc., are built with truss construction, and the same principles are properly applied in the new Garland truss houses, one of which is shown here.

Carnation House Forty-two Feet Wide, Built by Dobbs & Son, Auburn, N. Y.

AN immense amount of time, thought and energy was spent in bringing the Garland truss construction to its present state of perfection. Severe tests of every kind have been applied, and the result is a house that we can conscientiously recommend and endorse as the lightest strong greenhouse on the market. We have eliminated the hundreds of bolts, clips and clamps found in other truss constructions, every one of which gave a chance for strain to loosen them, and have substituted a construction so perfectly matched and planned that all parts fit tightly and are hooked together with no chance for "play" in the joints. Another essential point in the strength of Garland construction is the Garland Semi-malleable Cast Iron Gutter, and we want to tell you more about it. See the inside back cover (No. III) of this issue for further particulars, or write

MAKING EASTER PROFITABLE.

Watching the Extra Expenses.

If the volume of business done by a retailer during Easter week could be extended over a long enough period to be handled without the cost of additional store help, drivers, errand boys, horses or automobiles, the profits would naturally be more than under the present circumstances. Still, by carefully watching every detail the extra expenses can be greatly reduced, and every dollar saved at this time is a dollar added to the profits.

First of all, refer to your notes on last Easter and see how violets, sweet peas, roses, etc., sold, and in placing your orders for this year's supply order accordingly, allowing a liberal amount for increased business, but do not buy recklessly. It is more profitable to lose a few sales than to have several thousand violets left the day after.

Baskets sell well at Easter, but should not be made up too long before or too many at one time. It is more advisable to make them up as the demand requires, for immediately after Easter the market for them will be gone and then the stock in them will be practically useless.

The Extra Help.

Plants and baskets should all be marked with the selling price by some competent person and this price should not be cut without first consulting the person in charge. It is also wise not to allow the extra salespeople to sell cut flowers, especially roses, unless they have had previous experience in handling flowers, as many an expensive rose or carnation is broken through being carelessly handled. Let none but your regular help sell cut flowers or take orders for design work.

By using some judgment in engaging your extra help, many a dollar can be saved. Hire enough help, but do not give every friend or relative a job just to make yourself a good fellow. Friends are all very well, but treat them as you would strangers if you wish them to earn their pay in Easter week.

Unnecessary Wastefulness.

In putting up the numerous boxes of loose flowers for delivery, an extra flower of a kind of which you have a surplus in stock will do no harm, but often, in their enthusiasm or forgetfulness, employees will fail to keep track of their count and if this is not guarded against many dollars will be given away, for which not you but the sender will receive thanks.

If you want to give flowers away, enclose your card and send them where they will bring returns.

Plants should all be carefully wrapped to guard against frost and breakage, but much unnecessary waste of paper and twine is often caused during the rush by allowing these materials to be trampled underfoot. This, of course, is a small item; still,

Beauties in Gold Basket.

if the small leaks are closely watched there will probably be no large leaks.

The Extra Cost of Delivery.

As already stated, there are any number of extras which make inroads into Easter profits, but the additional cost of delivery is the biggest item by far. I have known of instances where florists have contracted with auto express companies to do their Easter delivering at so much per day, and the actual cost amounted to as much as 25 cents to 30 cents per order. This is altogether too much, but how best to get away from or around this awful drain is a hard problem to solve.

First of all, we must start right. Avoid having plants that sell for less than 75 cents or $1, by planting small stock together or setting them aside until after Easter. Mark all plants and add from 15 cents to 35 cents to the usual price. Your trade will not notice this slight difference in price and it will at least partly offset the delivery expense.

Troubles That May Be Avoided.

Instruct your salespeople not to ask too many questions as to when an article shall be delivered; this will give you more leeway. Also see that the full, correct address of the customer is obtained; this will save many an extra trip, or perhaps a pull from east to west or north to south.

Care should be exercised in hiring all your delivery help. There are in every city any number of young high school students who like to earn a little pin money occasionally, and among these you will find good material. These boys are usually well educated, refined and from good families. It is good policy to arrange with extra delivery help to pay them so much per hour. This will avoid all disputes when pay day comes.

Systematizing the Deliveries.

All trips should, of course, be routed by a person well acquainted with the city, so as to save all possible time in making deliveries. Another important principle to bear in mind is: Keep the wagons or autos going. It is the time lost in waiting for the next trip that necessitates so many extra wagons.

Some firms require the signature of the customer for the article delivered. This takes a great deal of time and I doubt whether the satisfaction of being able to prove a delivery in case of dispute pays for all the extra time taken. Few complaints arise from failure to make delivery, and usually these errors are due to having obtained a wrong address and can be readily rectified.

The C. O. D. Orders.

If in your business you have many C. O. D. orders, then purchase a package of C. O. D. stickers from a stationery store and paste one on each C. O. D. order, at the same time giving the driver a statement in an addressed envelope, in which to keep each C. O. D.

separate. Then, if any dispute arises as to shortage or bad money, it is more easily traced. This plan is carried out successfully by the large department stores.

Start your wagons out early in the morning. A driver can deliver much more during daylight.

There is no reason why profits on such occasions as Easter or Christmas should not be in proportion to our regular profits. It is natural for a person to get careless when business is rushing and this carelessness costs money. By keeping an eye on all that is going on, you can stop many a small leak and thereby earn many an extra dollar during an Easter rush.

Hugo Schroeter.

SIMPLICITY IN EASTER BASKETS.

For People of Good Taste.

For a long time there has been a predilection on the part of people of taste in favor of simple methods of arrangement, either of cut flowers or plants, and in no instance has this been more apparent than with reference to plant baskets. The Easter lily is one of the simplest of plants; its beauty lies in this simplicity of outline and purity, and to see it all "fussed up" with half a dozen other and less telling that one customer likes the incongruous mixture is no good reason why it should be forced on all.

Some Effective Combinations.

An indiscriminate mixture of various foliage plants, such as crotons, dracaenas and coleus, with lilies, is often practiced, but it is rarely a success. Yet last Easter some of the most successful arrangements were of Easter lilies and Croton Sunset. The dark color and the somewhat set appearance of the croton were decidedly good. Another simple yet effective basket was made with lilies and Spiraea Japonica, no other plant being used. In this case the feathery foliage and flowers of the spiraea seemed to act as a foil to the heavier, more decided lines of the lily.

Although so frequently used, the azalea can hardly be described as a suitable basket plant. Used alone, it is flat looking and uninteresting, while no other plant contrasts or associates well with it. Erica melanthera and other heaths, on the other hand, are beautiful as basket plants and lend themselves readily to artistic grouping with other plants.

The Smaller Gift Receptacles.

As with baskets, so with the many smaller contrivances used for Easter bark, and here hydrangeas for the larger and Primula obconica for the smaller ones suggest themselves. When specially shaped receptacles are in use, lily of the valley is fine. It is not heavy enough to hide the outline of the slipper, the cross or whatever else is depicted, yet by its graceful, light nature it prevents any suspicion of flatness or stiffness.

A little care in selecting suitable plants for the various decorative receptacles is always well repaid in results and, other things being equal, the simpler the methods employed the better.

R.

EASTER BASKETS.

Both Old and New.

The pleasures of the plant basket are again upon us. Yes, we say pleasures, in spite of the irritations and the loose dirt. In fact, the vacations for the plant basket are becoming shorter every year. He—the plant basket—has virtues of his own and accommodating ways. Odds and ends and bad shapes are his favorites. Get the left-over ribbons and chiffons overhauled. They'll be needed in this job. Get the disabled baskets, as well as the newest fads, in line. Retouch, trim, cut out or recover, and the first thing you know you'll have a nobby lot of new baskets ready, with pans and collections of pans. For where one will not suffice, maybe two will, and where none will fit, wrap the balls of soil as they come from the pots in tin foil. It holds the moisture. Baskets are but temporary affairs, anyhow.

Making the Old Ones New.

The different bronze and silver paints are a good investment. Buy the materials in bulk and mix them as you need them; that is the most economical way. Coat some of the faded baskets with gold, some with bronze, some with green bronze and a few with silver. Bronze baskets with gold trimmings are popular, while green and gold of course are attractive. Some baskets may be recovered later with boxwood on the outside. This may be done by sharpening the stems, driving them through the braid and fastening them flat against the outside body of the basket with wire. When filling the basket, see that whatever foliage is used shall harmonize with the boxwood.

Two considerations emphasized in these columns before will bear being repeated annually. Don't try to transplant a benchful of plants into one basket. So many of these plant baskets look uncomfortable! Cluster them, nestle them together, but don't herd them. The other prohibition is, don't set the stems all in vertical lines. Throw some outward. Tip a few so that the tops will show.

The Everlasting Color Question.

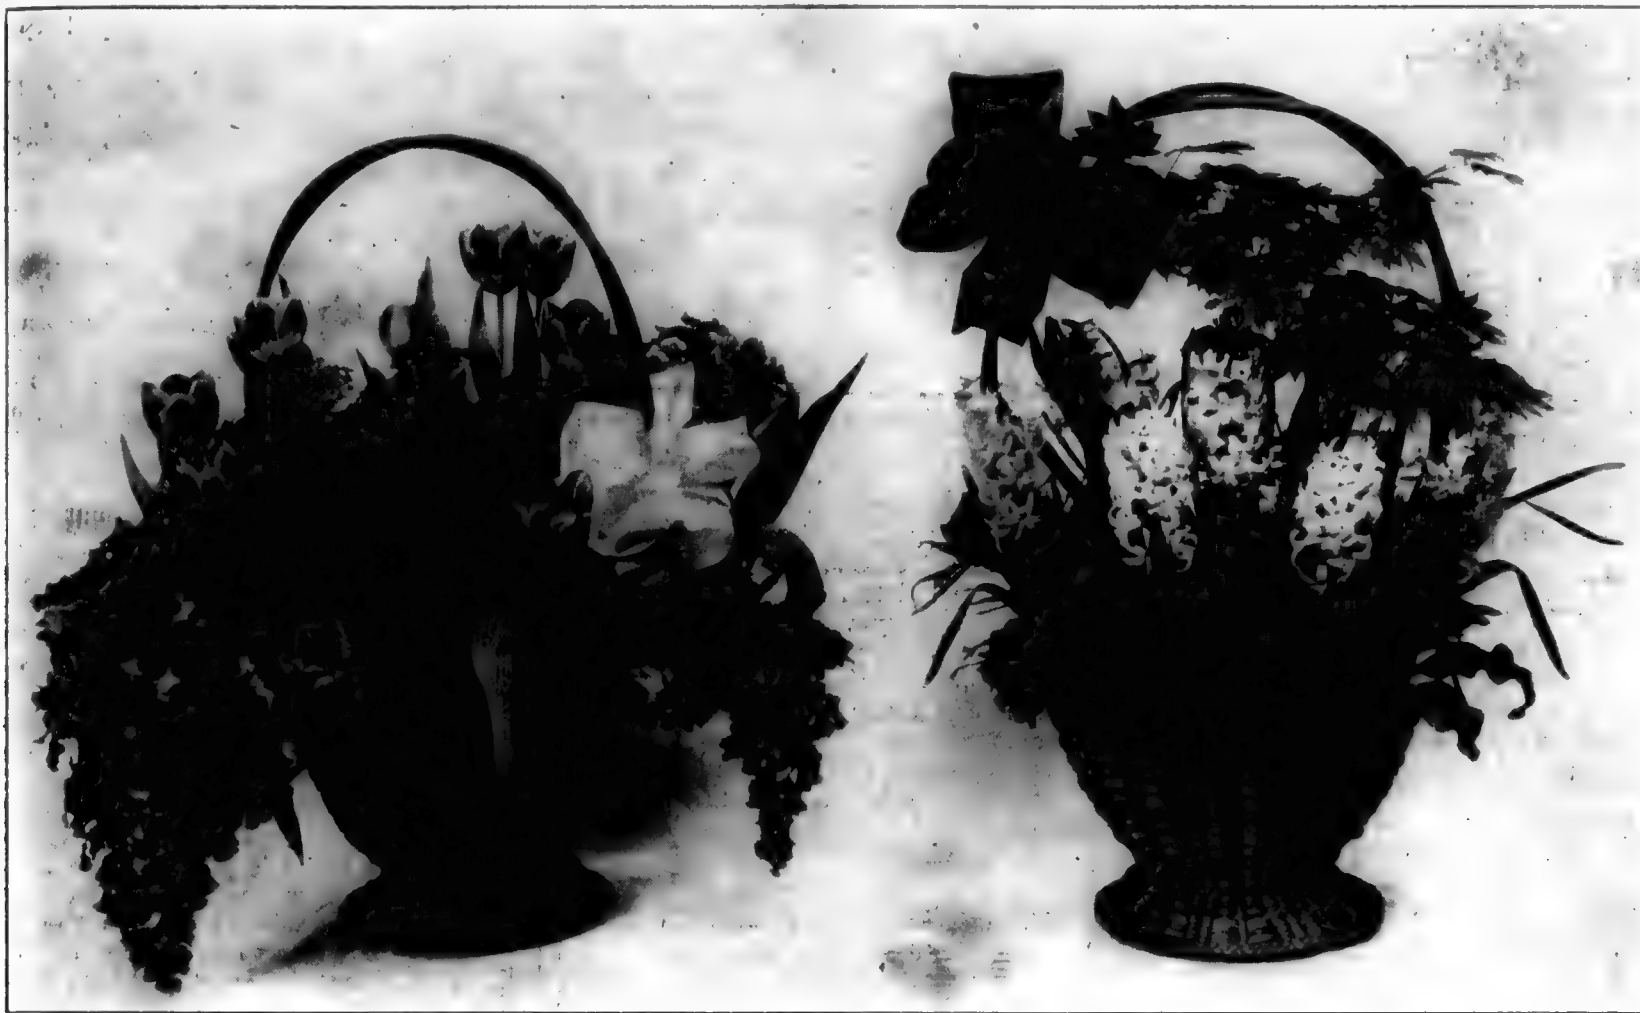

Then there is the everlasting color question bobbing up. A few "don'ts" and a few "does" are in order. Don't associate primulas in pink and cyclamens in pink. Don't try to mix up crimson ramblers with genistas, yellow tulips or daffodils. Be careful of the pinks and yellows. Salmon pink may associate with soft yellows, but violet pinks with strong yellows are dangerous experiments. They will take to deep creams and dull bronze cheerfully.

For yellow bulbous stock try old-gold and golden browns in baskets and ribbon.

Covering the soil around plants is sometimes necessary and as often not needed. If you have tall plants or those which are scanty of foliage, then cover the soil either with moss, low ferns or blooming plants, such as pansies or sweet alyssum. The sight of a little patch of soil toward the center or some retired spot is not objectionable, but it is better to have an edge of green at least. If the plants are well grouped some of them will break over an edge somewhere, and if a border is added it will not be a complete one.

Suggested Color Schemes.

Here are a few good color schemes for plant baskets:

A basket filled with adiantum plants, with a cluster of long-stemmed My Maryland roses over the handle. Use a small vase on the handle or in the soil, for the rose stems.

A basket of Narcissus poeticus or marguerites with a handle decoration of pink ramblers.

For a church decoration or an Easter funeral, a tall basket of callas, one or two plants for the foliage and extra cut callas set into the soil. Combine with this a group of yellow iris at the base of each side of the handle, or train a spray of yellow ramblers over one side of the handle and a cluster of genistas low at the other side.

Lilacs and Easter lilies make a choice basket. Suspend a cluster of lavender chiffon butterflies over the lilies.

Trim the handle of a low basket of freesias with Chatenay roses and old-gold ribbon.

Have a basket of roses in assorted colors, looking carefully to the color harmony. It might include Tausendschon, white ramblers, Unele John or HINTS FOR EASTER BOXES.

Skill and Care in Arrangement.

To know a color and its affinities on the instant, to see a dozen places where such and such may be used without waiting to try, never to fuss with uncertainty as to results, never to fix over—these are what we must be equal to in order to handle display pieces and orders and make suggestions to customers. With a more extended variety of flowers than at any other holiday of the year, every box should be a gem with perfect setting. With just the correct touch which small flowers can give, color combinations may be varied and perfect.

Realizing that a box seldom reaches its destination just as perfectly arranged as it leaves your hands, take some precautions with the larger flowers at least, to secure them just where you lay them in the box. Old boots receive as careful handling when in the hands of extra messengers and drivers. About the first act sees the box upside down and on both ends. It does not take a lawyer to find out what will happen to the tips of those fine Beauty buds or soft lilies. Arrange the flowers as you wish them to appear when the box is opened, and secure them in place by a tie of cord or ribbon across the stems, which passes through the bottom of the box and around over the lid, tying on top. According to the value of the box, make this tying-in material more or less expensive. Secured in this way, they may stand on their heads or stand a shock without damage.

Artistic Settings for the Flowers.

Now to improve the appearance of the assortment of flowers in the box: For an extra nice order, line the box with sheet moss. This makes a rich separate. Then, if any dispute arises as to shortage or bad money, it is more easily traced. This plan is carried out successfully by the large department stores.

Start your wagons out early in the morning. A driver can deliver much more during daylight.

There is no reason why profits on such occasions as Easter or Christmas should not be in proportion to our regular profits. It is natural for a person to get careless when business is rushing and this carelessness costs money. By keeping an eye on all that is going on, you can stop many a small leak and thereby earn many an extra dollar during an Easter rush.

SIMPLICITY IN EASTER BASKETS.

For People of Good Taste.

For a long time there has been a predilection on the part of people of taste in favor of simple methods of arrangement, either of cut flowers or plants, and in no instance has this been more apparent than with reference to plant baskets. The Easter lily is one of the simplest of plants; its beauty lies in this simplicity of outline and purity, and to see it all "fussed up" with half a dozen other and less telling that one customer likes the incongruous mixture is no good reason why it should be forced on all.

Some Effective Combinations.

An indiscriminate mixture of various foliage plants, such as crotons, dracaenas and coleus, with lilies, is often practiced, but it is rarely a success. Yet last Easter some of the most successful arrangements were of Easter lilies and Croton Sunset. The dark color and the somewhat set appearance of the croton were decidedly good. Another simple yet effective basket was made with lilies and Spiraea Japonica, no other plant being used. In this case the feathery foliage and flowers of the spiraea seemed to act as a foil to the heavier, more decided lines of the lily.

Although so frequently used, the azalea can hardly be described as a suitable basket plant. Used alone, it is flat looking and uninteresting, while no other plant contrasts or associates well with it. Erica melanthera and other heaths, on the other hand, are beautiful as basket plants and lend themselves readily to artistic grouping with other plants.

The Smaller Gift Receptacles.

As with baskets, so with the many smaller contrivances used for Easter bark, and here hydrangeas for the larger and Primula obconica for the smaller ones suggest themselves. When specially shaped receptacles are in use, lily of the valley is fine. It is not heavy enough to hide the outline of the slipper, the cross or whatever else is depicted, yet by its graceful, light nature it prevents any suspicion of flatness or stiffness.

A little care in selecting suitable plants for the various decorative receptacles is always well repaid in results and, other things being equal, the simpler the methods employed the better.

R.

EASTER BASKETS.

Both Old and New.

The pleasures of the plant basket are again upon us. Yes, we say pleasures, in spite of the irritations and the loose dirt. In fact, the vacations for the plant basket are becoming shorter every year. He—the plant basket—has virtues of his own and accommodating ways. Odds and ends and bad shapes are his favorites. Get the left-over ribbons and chiffons overhauled. They'll be needed in this job. Get the disabled baskets, as well as the newest fads, in line. Retouch, trim, cut out or recover, and the first thing you know you'll have a nobby lot of new baskets ready, with pans and collections of pans. For where one will not suffice, maybe two will, and where none will fit, wrap the balls of soil as they come from the pots in tin foil. It holds the moisture. Baskets are but temporary affairs, anyhow.

Making the Old Ones New.

The different bronze and silver paints are a good investment. Buy the materials in bulk and mix them as you need them; that is the most economical way. Coat some of the faded baskets with gold, some with bronze, some with green bronze and a few with silver. Bronze baskets with gold trimmings are popular, while green and gold of course are attractive. Some baskets may be recovered later with boxwood on the outside. This may be done by sharpening the stems, driving them through the braid and fastening them flat against the outside body of the basket with wire. When filling the basket, see that whatever foliage is used shall harmonize with the boxwood.

Two considerations emphasized in these columns before will bear being repeated annually. Don't try to transplant a benchful of plants into one basket. So many of these plant baskets look uncomfortable! Cluster them, nestle them together, but don't herd them. The other prohibition is, don't set the stems all in vertical lines. Throw some outward. Tip a few so that the tops will show.

The Everlasting Color Question.

Then there is the everlasting color question bobbing up. A few "don'ts" and a few "does" are in order. Don't associate primulas in pink and cyclamens in pink. Don't try to mix up crimson ramblers with genistas, yellow tulips or daffodils. Be careful of the pinks and yellows. Artistic Settings for the Flowers.

Now to improve the appearance of the assortment of flowers in the box: For an extra nice order, line the box with sheet moss. This makes a rich setting for any color or kind of flowers. For a picture box of flowers, lay a frame of fruit boughs in bud or bloom, or branches of tree catkins around the edges of the box as though the group of flowers were the picture and the boughs were the frame. Make frequent use of buds for Easter flower arrangements. Another extra touch, for the outside of the Easter box, may be added by lacing a broad ribbon lengthwise of the box lid and bringing it around for a tie. Of course this will call for an extra wrapping outside.

Encourage the use of an appropriate vase or jar with cut flowers, as a jardiniere or pot cover is used for a plant. The flowers may be arranged in the vase, if delivery is to be made soon, and the purchaser may see just the effect they will have. Lay vase and flowers in the box and secure each in place as already described. This arrangement is valuable for patients in hospitals, where it is often impossible to find appropriate vases.

Artistic Combinations of Flowers.

Here are some suggestive combinations for Easter boxes of flowers:

Azalea mollis with blue miniature Dutch hyacinths and mignonette.

Lining of bronze or purple pansies with lilacs and Narcissus poeticus.

Purple or lavender iris with gardenias.

Valley and genista.

Violet-pink sweet peas with sprays of pink rambler roses.

Yellow tulips, violets and gardenias.

Cherry or peach blossoms with their cousins the roses.

Richmond roses and mignonette and freesia.

White spiræas and lilacs.

White carnations, genista and mignonette.

Scarlet carnations and marguerites.

Primula obconica, violet colored sweet peas and valley.

Peach blossoms, Chatenay roses and Spiræa Gladstone.

Lilacs, pussy willows and violets.

Calla lilies, purple Dutch hyacinths and Boston ferns.

An especially dainty box—freesias, forget-me-nots and cream sweet peas.

Violet crocus, valley and mignonette.

Lilacs and lavender Dutch hyacinths, showered with short-stemmed white peas. T.

THE FACULTY OF BEING READY.

A Useful Faculty at Easter.

There are some men who never seem to be ready for anything, no matter how much time they have had to prepare, while there are others whom an emergency seldom finds off their guard. The differences in the two are readily seen in a retail store at a holiday like Easter. Now, I am not going to give a lot of advice as to this. All I could say has been better said by others. I will simply ask readers: "To which of the foregoing classes do you belong?" and will endeavor to point out one or two things that will surely help at a busy time.

The most popular plant for Easter is, of course, the Easter lily. Most stores handle at least a couple of hundreds of these, and the wrapping, should the weather be inclement, is a serious job.

Wrapping and Labeling.

The retailer who grows his own stock can easily have at least two-thirds of the plants wrapped, with the number of flowers penciled on the wrapper, the day before. Orders can be rapidly filled from these in most cases, though occasionally a customer wants a certain plant and will take no other. The only course then is to let him or her have it and wrap it specially. In many instances the grower from whom the retailer purchases his stock is so well known for straight dealing that he can be relied on to pack and number the plants as has just been indicated, and this will also be a time-saver.

Never label plants or wrapped baskets on their side, but always on the top, with a tied-on label. When the adhesion label is used on the side and several plants are placed together on the floor of the store or in the wagon, it is impossible to get at the label without pushing the hand and arm down between the plants, often to their detriment, to say nothing of the loss of time involved. The label on top can be seen at once and handled without pulling the plant or basket about.

About Early Orders.

It is useless to request customers to give their orders early unless you are prepared to fill them early and fill them right. The customer who is kept waiting after being asked to order early is not likely to give an early order next time. All this class of orders should be made ready the night before Easter and be delivered on the first trip in the morning, whenever practicable.

A fine thing to have ready for Easter business is a good stock of small plants suitable for making up into baskets. Small plants of Rex and other foliage begonias, crotons, ferns, pandanus and neat little specimens of cocos or geonoma are all useful for the customers who want "something else," besides a lily or azalea, in their baskets.

The Extra Help.

The help problem is another that has to be considered early. It is folly to wait until everything is behindhand before getting proper help. Where everything is rushed by tired and half-hearted employees, mistakes and oversights are sure to occur, but with the right kind of help, started early, the proprietor or manager of the store can always be in front of his work, not behind. In short, the "faculty of being ready" is a mighty useful thing around Easter time. H.

HOLIDAY SYSTEM.

More Business, Less Rush.

"The idea of system as it runs through your head is beautiful," somebody says, "but when it comes to the rush your most finely spun system loses out." Yes, it does if you let go of it. It is impossible to handle a rush without it. You may escape with your life, going at it haphazard, but your nervous system and your loss and gain account will pay the penalty.

In the first place, separate the order and sales departments. Let the salesmen sell; don't hamper them with filling orders between times. Have a separate room or portion of a room screened off for order work and let this group of workers be undisturbed by requests from customers who wish to be waited upon. To take care of trade already gained is just as important as gaining more.

In the Order Room.

According to the number of competent people whom you can muster for the order room, arrange your order slips. If there are at least two experienced people, let one take charge of the shipping and the other take charge of the city deliveries. Each of these files should first be arranged according to time of delivery, with the first order out on top. Then, as each order is filled and the order sheet checked off, bunch the packages for different express offices and districts of the city. Have a separate place for rush orders and special deliveries. Don't burden a delivery man with too long a trip; better make two shorter trips of it. You can get orders out and delivery made before late bedtime. What do sleepy people want of flowers and plants?

Before starting to fill orders, have all the necessary articles right at hand—express books, boxes of all sizes, string, ribbon, paper, extra pencils, train schedules, city directory and map, time-piece, order blanks, tags, scissors, knife, hammer and nails, all the bench room and floor space possible, a stool for a moment's rest now and then, a clean, dry space to write on, etc.

Sorting City Orders.

If city and shipping orders are separated and deliveries for set times may be reduced to specials, sort your bunch of orders for the city by districts, getting out all the orders for one district first. New orders, which are continually pouring in from the order room, should be placed upon a separate file, to wait until advance orders are filled.

According to the accumulation of deliveries when it is getting late in the day, stop taking delivery orders. There is no limit to what people will ask. They will ask you to deliver immediately at eleven o'clock at night. Possibly for a slight difference in price they will carry their own packages or postpone delivery till the next day.

Taking Charge of Stock.

Stock keeping, if carefully watched, does much to preserve the peace of mind of both customer and shopkeeper. Of course there are extra helpers for the holiday rush and usually the greenhouse force is drafted into service. These men are accustomed to handling stock. Place one of them, or more if necessary, in charge of storing and keeping tab on the reserve stock. The man or men appointed for this purpose will hand the stock out as wanted and will prevent pulling and hauling and destroying by inexperienced help. How many times it is sickening to see the way in which good stock is destroyed by nervous help! It is better policy to keep only a fair amount of stock on display, and let it sell out quickly and be frequently renewed, than to have it all in view and continually mauled over, and a large proportion spoiled by overhandling, bad air and drafts.

Keeping Tab on Greens.

Keep tab on the green goods. An enormous amount may be used in a short time. Let the stock man give warning as it gets low. It is a serious inconvenience to have to wait for green. Watch how much goes in with flowers over the counter. Little except own foliage should be dealt out, unless with extra fine orders.

In the arrangement of blooming plants in the salesroom, be sure to separate varieties and colors. It will be much easier then to make a selection than to roam all over the room picking the choicest plant of a favorite variety. Don't fill up small gaps too promptly; let people see that you are selling and what you are selling, and a choice will be more quickly made. Let there be more business with less work for this rush. G.

TAKING ADVANTAGE OF EASTER.

Immediate and Future Profits.

We, the retail florists, always feel as though we had been relieved of a heavy load when the Easter rush is over.

If you were to ask a student in geometry or trigonometry to divide one square foot into four square feet you would be laughed at and told, "It is impossible." Still, retailers have to do this same thing during an Easter rush. We have to crowd about four to six weeks' business into one week. Is it any wonder, then, that the man at the head of the establishment, who has to figure it all out, feels relieved when it is all over and he is still able to look an insanity commission straight in the face?

All this, too, without much if any profit; at least, that is the way we feel when the time comes for settling with the extra help, drivers, etc. Still, my contention is that Easter can be made profitable, not only from a monetary point of view, but also from an advertising standpoint.

Attracting New Customers.

During the year, flower buyers are not apt to wander from store to store as they would at Easter time and the wise florist will take advantage of this fact. If you will take notice, many strange faces will be seen in your establishment at this time and it is up to the retailer to make them regular patrons.

First of all, have your windows as attractive as it is possible to make them and this is easy with so much beautiful stock available. Everyone is in the flower-buying mood during Easter week and an attractive window will make many an extra sale and bring people into your store.

Then aim to have your store as clean and neat as possible. This does not necessarily mean that there must be no leaves or paper on the floor, but it means clean corners, clean woodwork, clean windows, clean clerks, clean space under the benches, etc. We all know that a store cannot be swept every time a leaf falls to the floor, but cobwebs will not be excused. In the evenings, when the rush of business is over, have things tidied up for next day.

Courtesy to Customers.

Instruct all your salespeople to have a word of welcome for your patrons and to request that they come again, even if they bought nothing.

In a store where a large business is done and where from eight to ten salespeople are employed during Easter week, it would pay to appoint some clean-cut, well-mannered person to act as a sort of floor walker, to see that customers are waited upon in due time and to serve as a sort of "Welcome! Come again!" sign.

Of course, regular patrons should not be neglected. In fact, many of these will expect some little deviation from the general rule in the way of delivery, trimming of pots, etc., and it is good policy to cater to these little whims, for it would hardly pay to lose an old customer in the endeavor to make new ones. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."

Wrappings and Receptacles.

The contents of every box of flowers should be carefully arranged and the box itself should present a neat appearance when it arrives at its destination. Plants, also, should have the same careful attention. Where they are not costly enough to warrant covering, at least have the pot free from a season's accumulation of moss and dirt. Paper pot covers can now be bought so cheaply and are so easily applied that their use is becoming almost universal. This is rightly so, for while we all know that plants are grown in pots, still it is not in good taste to make the pots conspicuous on all occasions, any more than it is in good taste to run around barefooted.

When an article, be it a box of flowers or a package of laundry, arrives at its destination, its appearance speaks louder than words. See that your packages, when delivered, have a good word to say for you and your methods.

When Mistakes Happen.

Errors are bound to occur during Easter week. Cards will be lost, orders overlooked, lilies broken; perhaps some funeral order will be delivered after the ceremony. Such mistakes will happen, but, when a customer advises you of such an error, do not sail into him hammer and tongs with complaints about the awful Easter rush. Let your patron see that you are sincerely sorry and do all you can to satisfy him, even though he may be a little too severe under the circumstances. Do this as a matter of policy.

From an advertiser's standpoint, you can surely make Easter bring good returns if your store is managed right.

If you have anything in the way of special wreaths, baskets, ribbons or crockery, display these conspicuously at this time, when your establishment is sure to be full of people, just as you would casually make a suggestion.

If the store has a suit of Sunday clothes, put it on during Easter week; it will pay in the long run.

FINISH TO EASTER PLANTS.

Where Some Growers Fail.

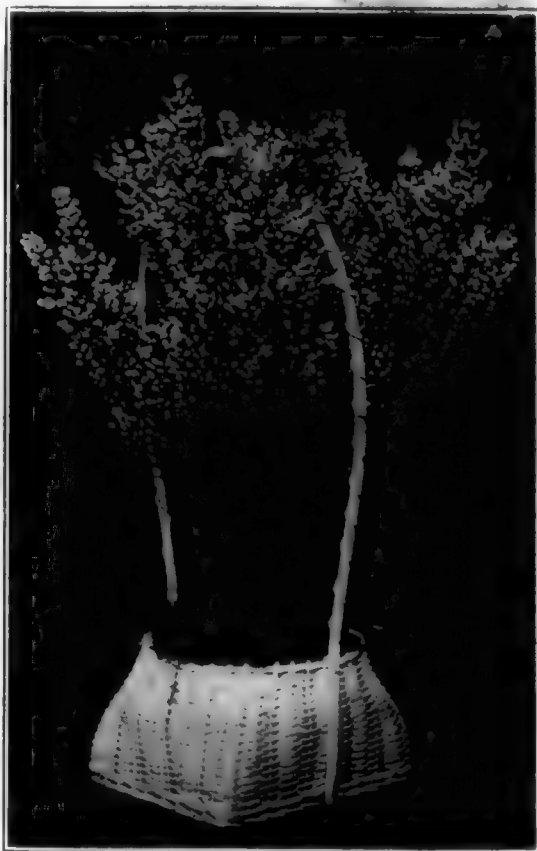

Nothing so plainly shows the difference between the experienced and the inexperienced plantsman as what is termed "finish" to flowering or foliage plants. While the term is as good as could be selected, it is not, perhaps, wholly descriptive, but it is sufficiently so to be well understood. A plant lacks finish if it is growing in too large a pot to look well. This shows that the grower expected it to do better things and in some way has missed it. The experienced grower will always strive to get the most possible out of a certain size of pot, for he knows well that, when the plant comes into the retailer's hands, the smaller the pot the better he is able to use it for furnishing, for basket or vase work, or even for retailing directly as a specimen.

A Vital Difference.

Take the case of azaleas for Easter. It may be said that an azalea, when imported, has just so many buds to open and all that is necessary is to place the plants in heat at a certain time and to send them out when ready. But why does one man always turn out an attractive plant, neat and trig looking, with good color of flowers and foliage, and another send out a plant with half of the flowers past their best and the foliage dull and wilted? It is due to lack of knowledge as to how to put the finishing touch to them. It is like comparing a suit of clothes of the "hand-me-down" type with one from an up-to-date tailor.

Slap-dash Growers.

Doubtless there are many growers who can not put this finish to their plants; they can hardly tell the difference between the finished and the unfinished product. But these are in the minority. What causes the trouble with most growers is a kind of slap-dash treatment of their plants. They go into the house where they are growing at a certain time every day, put on the air, throw around the water and casually look over the plants as a whole. They will not take the trouble to look at the plants individually—to note that such a one has too little room for proper development or that another is getting more than its share (or less, as the case may be) of water, or that there are weak specimens struggling along in a hopeless effort to get their fair share of light and air from bigger fellows that are elbowing them out of existence.

The Grower's Sixth Sense.

Then, again, in the matter of feeding. If we are to get the best possible out of a certain size of pot that only holds so many cubic inches of soil, then some feeding has to be resorted to and a kind of sixth sense is one of the attributes of the successful grower, who can "see through a ball of soil" and know, by a plant's appearance overhead, what its roots are like below. Only such a man can tell just when to begin feeding his plants for best results. Only such as he can tell when to place his lilies in a cool house to retard them sufficiently to give that hard, vigorous appearance that denotes finish in these popular plants, or how much heat to allow to avoid having to resort to forcing tactics at the end.

The Grower Who Knows.

A grower may produce a coleus in heavy soil in a cool, shady house, but the grower who knows will give that coleus a finish by planting it in light, rich soil, watering freely and keeping up a hot, moist atmosphere, buoyant with sunlight all the time it is growing. If the subject is a croton or a pandanus, he will still give it the light, heat and moisture, but the soil will be heavier in the case of the croton, to insure proper consolidation of the wood, and not too rich for the pandanus, to prevent loss of the white variegation.

These are only a few points, but they serve to show how important it is for the grower who wishes his plants to be well finished to be ever watching these small and seemingly unimportant details, for upon their being duly noted and carried out depends much of the success of the plantsman. R.

THE EASTER ILLUSTRATIONS.

In looking over the illustrations in this issue it will be brought to the mind how necessary to the retail florist, especially at such a time as this, is the wide-awake dealer in florists' supplies. In not one instance would the showing have been possible in the days before the baskets, ribbons, hampers and vases became so diversified and so refined.

Take, for instance, the Beauties on page 27. Would so tasteful an arrangement of short-stemmed blooms have been possible without the gold basket and the ribbon? Most decidedly not. The basket has a glass vase inside, so that it has a permanent value to the one who receives it as an Easter gift, and it will be filled by the florist time after time.

There are no plants except primulas and adiantum in the low basket shown on page 28, but the pussy willows help to make it one of the most pleasing arrangements of the many excellent ones illustrated in this issue. The basket was the natural color of the willow.

The picture on page 29 illustrates two extremely effective ways of filling the same basket. The one at the left had pink tulips and Adiantum Farleyense, the one at the right white and blue hyacinths and Japanese maple. Each had an appropriate ribbon. These were same basket, only of a color to harmonize with the pink tint of the flowers.

The basket at the left on the illustration on page 30 was a better seller last Easter than was the one at the right. The former was a willow basket stained with a stripe of greenish yellow around the middle, green below and dark green above. Planted full of daffodils, with the soil covered with moss and a few fine pussy willows added, it was a popular arrangement. The pink heather was in a natural willow basket with pink ribbon and presented an equally pleasing color combination, but did not take so well with the buyers.

Such inexpensive articles as are shown in the illustration on page 31 always are ready sellers in any first-class flower store. They do not appeal to the people who are looking for something showy, but people who have plenty of money, and whose friends also have the means of providing for themselves all the more elaborate things they need, like to exchange these unpretentious arrangements. The receptacle has as much influence as the plant in effecting the sales. With the stock of the modern supply house to draw upon, an infinite variety of these inexpensive arrangements can be provided. On the left in the illustration is a geranium in a Florentine terra

The small illustration on page 31 is a balloon-shape trained plant of the Dofothy Perkins rose set into a white willow pot cover that had big mouse-ear handles. The ribbon was light pink, in keeping with the color of the flowers of the rose.

The rose basket shown on page 32 is too expensive a plant to sell in any number except in the highest class stores, but one or two such novelties are an excellent investment for any store, even if not sold at all, for the advertising value is great. People will go out and tell their friends about it; even advise them to drop in at the store to see it. The variety is Newport Fairy. It is one of the trained plants flowered in 1911 by the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia. As it stood, in its basket pot cover, in the retail store in which it was photographed, a thousand miles from the greenhouses, only $15 was asked for it.

The lily is the typical Easter flower and, however large a business is done in other plants, more people will want lilies than will call for any other one item of stock. Where cheap trade is done it still may do to offer the lily in the pot in which it was forced, but even then most of the retailers find it necessary to cover the pot with crepe paper. In the higher class stores mats and ribbon are used, or the lilies are shifted to some better receptacle, such as those shown in the illustration on page 33. Note that in one case the base of the lily is surrounded by small ferns, while in another there are a number of pussy willows.

The heather in the single column illustration on page 33 was planted in the pan in the basket and sold without trimming. The basket was natural willow, the bottom square but the top round. The soil was covered with green sheet moss, which is a finishing touch many who fill baskets and jardinières are apt to forget.

We often are told that the Crimson Rambler has had its day, but in such made up plant baskets as that shown on this page it has a place that nothing else will fill and it still sells well. With it was Pandanus Veitchii, Nephrolepis superbissima and Asplenium nidus avis. The basket was willow, white enameled, and the ribbon was foliage green.

Azalea mollis and Rhododendron Pink Pearl are two of the subjects which, if well done, are fine Easter plants. An excellent example of each is shown in the illustration on page 35. Note how effectively the one defect of the azalea, the absence of foliage, is supplied by the use of the superbissima fern. The color of the Roman pottery harmonizes with the color tone in the flowers. The rhododendron has the simplest possible treatment, but nothing could be more effective, for the pink chiffon mat and the pink ribbon with which it is tied are in perfect harmony with the soft tint of the big flower heads.

There were hyacinths, candytuft and superbissima ferns in the low basket shown on page 36. The basket may be had finished in any number of colors, and there are just as many ways of filling it effectively.

The boronia is an Easter plant not uncommon in the eastern markets, but not often seen in the west. The erica also is more largely grown along the Atlantic than it is beside the lakes and rivers. The two plants have much sim-rather large baskets. In a first-class flower store, where they were photographed last Easter, they proved ready sellers at $10 each.

The little picture on page 29 shows a spiraea in a basket of unique shape, like an inverted Mexican sombrero. This was Gladstone and the basket was blue. Queen Alexandra was shown in the cotta jar. Next is a primula in a white china dish. The erica is in a blue and white receptacle. The fernery in the center is planted with Primula veris, P. obconica and some small ferns. The begonia is in the same kind of pot as the erica. On the right is a cineraria in the same vase but of a different shape.

ilarity, as shown in the illustration on page 36, where each is shown in a white china receptacle, but the blooms of the boronia are too dark to appeal to many of the Easter shoppers.

If one has the idea that plants are crowding cut flowers at Easter, it is erroneous. Of course the sale of plants is large, but so is the sale of cut flowers. The Easter plants are a great deal easier to illustrate than are the Easter cut flowers. There is not much material for a photograph in the retailer's stock of roses, carnations, violets and lilies. Nor are they easy to show in the store in other than the every-day shape. Perhaps that's one reason why plants have had so much popularity since they began to be shown in such attractive form for Christmas and Easter. But it is possible to show cut flowers in a novel manner, too. On pages 38 and 39 are two groups of cut flower arrangements picked in a leading western store last Easter. These were samples only. The florist used them to take orders for loose cut flowers, but he also took orders to duplicate any of the arrangements, receptacle and all, at any designated place on Easter morning—and that such orders are numerous anyone can tell by a glance at the illustrations.

THE GLASS MARKET.

Jobbers of window glass express themselves as having no doubt that the recent sharp advance in prices will hold and some of them say they look for a further advance in greenhouse sizes because of the fact that the factories have practically none on hand and no great quantities are likely to be manufactured before the end of the present fire, May 25. It is well understood that the smaller sizes are a sort of byproduct of the glass business—it pays the factories much better to make the larger sizes, but in making these there is a part of each sheet that must be cut to the smaller sizes. This proportion is kept at the minimum; the factories will not cut the greenhouse sizes to order except at a price considerably above the market. There is to be another readjustment of glass workers' wages immediately after the end of the present fire, and on it will depend, to a large extent, the price of glass next season, but it is well within the possibilities that the market will rise during the summer, especially if the early demand continues, for it has been exceptionally heavy this year.

BEGONIA GLORY OF CINCINNATI.

As Compared with Lorraine.

While some growers persist in giving Begonia Glory of Cincinnati a bad name as a market plant, saying that it does not branch as freely as the older Gloire de Lorraine, there is no question about its superiority as a market plant when well grown, or of its lasting properties in the store or after delivery to customers. Having grown the two side by side and noted the peculiarities of each, I am of the opinion that those who find fault with Cincinnati do not treat it correctly. It is true that the shoots made do not branch so freely as those of the older variety, but it pushes up more of them from the base and the larger, more persistent flowers make a better display.

The Shoots from the Base.

Anyone who examines the roots of Glory of Cincinnati will find a large number of nodules or embryonic buds upon them, which, if given a chance, will all break into growth and push up fine shoots. And these shoots grow with great rapidity after about the beginning of August, rendering what up to that time were small and worthless looking plants, fine specimens by Christmas.

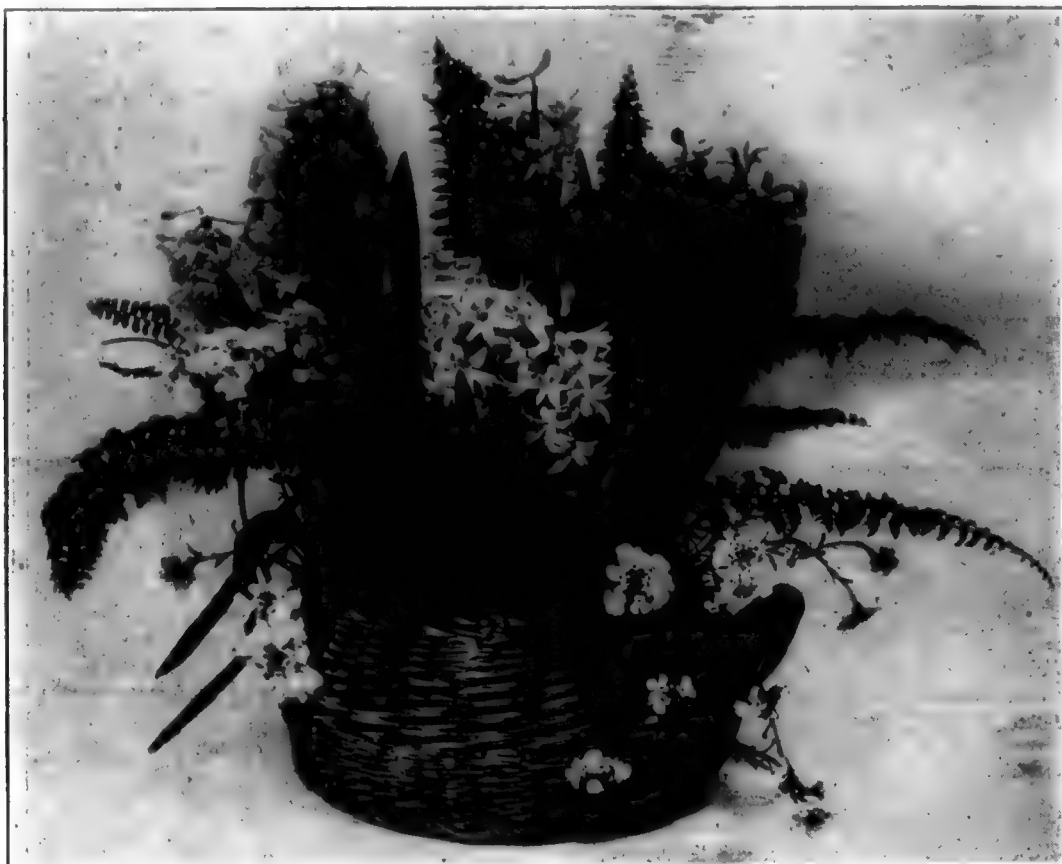

In order to develop properly, these nodules or buds must have a certain amount of air as well as water; consequently the compost or soil in which the plants are grown must be porous. Heavy, retentive soil holds too much water and, if dried, cakes up into hard lumps in which the roots cannot run. But a soil containing lightening material, such as leaf-mold, peat, well decayed horse manure and some gritty dividing substance, like coarse sand or gravel, will do well for this plant.

Its cultivation in detail does not differ much from that practiced for Lorraine. It is really stronger in growth and not so liable to spot as this good old favorite, which, by the way, is still worth growing, in spite of its larger rival.

Treatment of Plants on Arrival.

As many growers will doubtless buy young stock rather than raise the plants themselves, a word on the treatment of the stock received may perhaps be in order. When shipped a long distance, the plants in many cases will be dried out considerably and they ought not to be potted immediately after arrival. I have been quite successful by unpacking them carefully and moistening the balls slightly, keeping the foliage as dry as possible, and then laying them in flats or on a bench, with moss under and between them, the moss having previously been thoroughly soaked with water. By these means the roots absorb the moisture slowly from the wet moss, and in a few days it is evident, from the freshening up of the foliage, that they are in a fit condition to be potted. A night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, a moist atmosphere and light shade are the conditions needed.

Plants potted on arrival, without this necessary preparation, do not start nearly as well and damping of the foliage, as well as loss of roots, will occur.

Hyacinths, Candytuft and Ferns in This Basket.

Danger of Overpotting.

Another thing to guard against is overpotting in these earlier stages. If given too large pots, the little plants simply cannot obtain a mastery over the compost, but remain stationary or go back all summer long, with the result that it is the middle of August or early September before they make any show of growing. In the meantime the soil, not being occupied by roots, has become sour and is not in a condition to sustain the young roots when they form. Plants in small pots, on the other hand, will have the soil all filled with healthy young roots; they can be repotted then into larger sizes and the roots will have new, sweet soil to run in, instead of a sour, close ball.

As to other cultural requirements, all they need is a genial, moist atmosphere, a temperature of about 60 degrees at night and plenty of air at all times. Keep the plants well apart, shade only enough to prevent injury to the foliage and a fine batch of plants will be the inevitable result.

ANTIRRHINUMS FOR FORCING.

Do the florists use field-grown antirrhinums for forcing or do they prefer 2-inch plants in the fall? At what time are they generally planted in the benches? Do they come true to color from seed, and is there any special variety that is best for forcing? Please name a few other field-grown plants that can be disposed of in the fall. Please name, also, a few perennials most in demand for planting out by florists. Any information you can give me will be gratefully received.

V. R. F.

While field-grown antirrhinums are occasionally used for forcing, they are not nearly so satisfactory as plants from pots. Snapdragons do not lift with good fibrous roots, as do carnations, violets, Jerusalem cherries or hydrangeas. In fact, they do about as poorly as geraniums when dug up. If field-grown stock is used, it should first be established in pots and benched later. The giant forms of tall growing snapdragons are the most useful for forcing. If you buy seed from a first-class dealer you can rely on the seed coming pretty true to name. In colors, bright pink, pure white, yellow and scarlet are the most popular, in the order named. If you get a really good strain it is, of course, best perpetuated from cuttings, which are abundantly produced on the flowering stems.

Among field-grown plants which are in particular demand and can be disposed of in fall or spring, are hollyhocks, delphiniums, perennial phloxes, peonies, sweet-williams, pansies, forget-me-nots, foxgloves, double daisies, Shasta daisies, aquilegias, Canterbury bells, single pyrethrums (P. roseum), German iris and Japanese iris.

In the way of more tender plants, the call is always good each fall for field-grown Vinca variegata, carnations, violets, Asparagus Sprengeri and hydrangeas. C. W.

DISEASED LILIES.

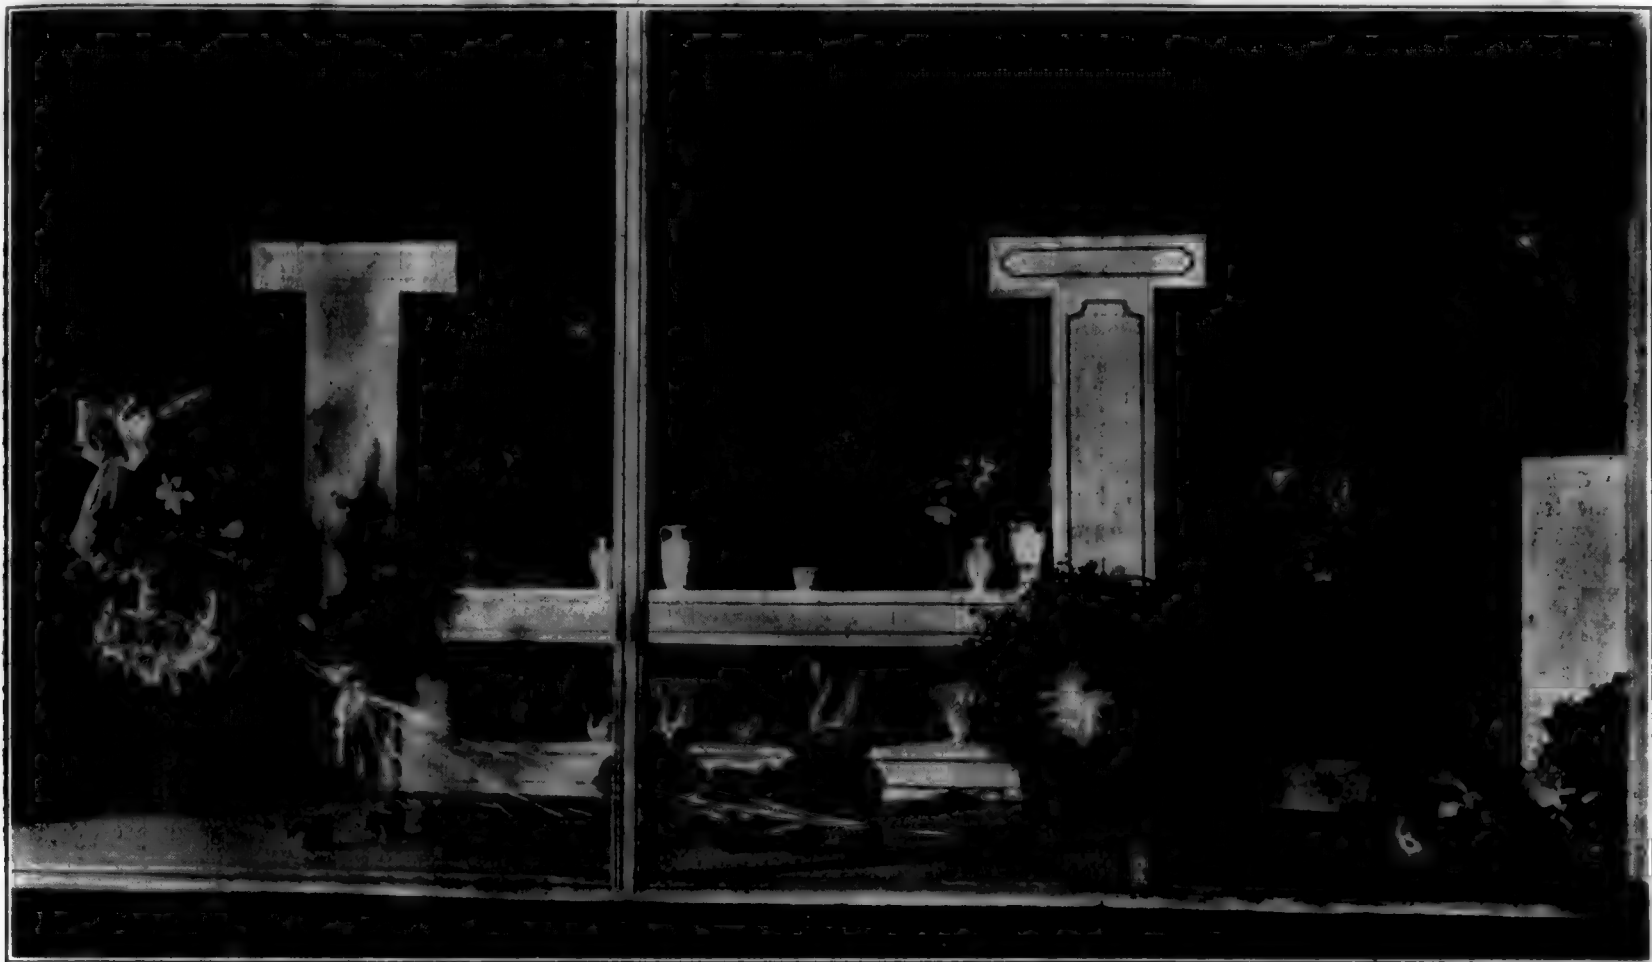

I am sending you under separate cover one Lilium giganteum. Any information as to what is wrong with it will be greatly appreciated. It is the worst in 200, but the roots all are rotten the same as sample. They were started under a bench in a house at 60 degrees. When the pots were fairly well filled with roots and the breaks began to show they were placed upon the bench in the same house. As they advanced they were fed liquid manure and given a top-dressing of well rotted cow manure. Shortly after the second liquid was applied we noticed a check in the growth, which led to a discovery of hundreds of small white worms around the base of the bulbs, like maggots or small grub worms. Lime water was then administered, which killed most of the worms, but not until the last ten days did the plants show signs of going backward.

The sample lily was certainly in a bad condition, most of the foliage being brown. Probably the variety was giganteum, as it is dwarf and resembles that type. The *giganteum*s, after potting, like to be started in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, and, like all lilies forced for Easter, are better kept on the dry side until the pots are nicely filled with roots and the tops have made some growth. A top-dressing of cow manure would be of no special advantage to the plants and is no doubt responsible for the white maggots. Too strong a dose of either liquid cow manure or lime water, or a combination of the two, has probably given the plants a serious check by destroying many of the roots. Throw away the worst diseased plants. Give the balance a warm, moist house, where a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees is maintained. If the roots of the average bulbs are as badly destroyed as the specimen sent it will do more harm than good to apply any more stimulants. Use clear water only, spray the plants freely, keep them clear of aphids and move to a somewhat cooler house as they open. C. W.

THE EASTER WINDOW.

The tendency is to put too much in the window. To impress the public with the size of the stock carried it may be all right to crowd the window as full as it will hold, but there never is anything about such a window display to suggest to those who see it that here is a man who is master of his art, who knows how to convey with flowers the finer sentiments. To the one who crowds his window, flowers usually are merchandise, nothing more.

The best window displays invariably are the simpler ones—they carry a message.

For an Easter display try such a simple decoration as the Koropp window shown on this page and note how much greater attention it attracts than the one that is a jumble of stock, a riot of color.

TO DESTROY EARTHWORMS.

Will you kindly inform me whether I can safely use carbon bisulphide to destroy the angleworms and grubs which bore and plow through our pansy seed beds, outdoors, destroying a large portion of our best seed before it has time to come up? How long before sowing time should the carbon bisulphide be used, or is there any liquid sterilizing material on the market which would be better or more safe to use? W. C. W.

There are several special worm eradicators on the market, one of which is called the Radix and is manufactured by the Bon Arbor Chemical Co., Paterson, N. J. This comes in liquid form and is much used on newly seeded lawns, being applied preferably after a rain, through an ordinary watering pot with rose attached. It does not injure grass or any growing plants on which I have used it. Carbon bisulphide can be used just before seeding, or even when the seedlings are up. It will not injure them in the least. Holes should be bored twelve to eighteen inches apart each way and a teaspoonful should be placed in each hole, immediately covering it. Sterilization by steam would, of course, destroy all earthworms, grubs, weed seeds, fungi, etc., where there are facilities for using this method. An application of lime and soot a month before sowing, incorporating them well in the soil, will make it distasteful for worms and grubs. A light application of gas lime the spring previous to sowing is also excellent. C. W.

IT IS A TRITONIA.

Enclosed under separate cover you will find a freesia which flowered with me for two years. Is there any on the market of that shade, or is there any value in this bulb for florists. F. T.

This is Tritonia crocata, a South African bulb, allied to gladioli, montbretias and sparaxis, and not a freesia at all. It is seen in limited quantities each winter in the larger flower markets and proves quite popular with critical flower buyers. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Preparations.

The busiest season of the year with the grower of pot plants will soon be here. While cut flowers are sold in large quantities, they are each year becoming less of a factor when compared with pot plants, and it will be noticed that the average Easter prices for cut flowers are no higher, and in some cases lower, than those obtained at Memorial day. There is much to be done between now and Easter to have flowering plants look presentable. Above all things, have pots, pans and tubs scrupulously clean. See that all plants requiring it are neatly staked, and use stakes painted green, if you have them or can procure them, as they look much neater than those generally used. Then, again, do not use white twine if you have green twine or raffia. These little points, seemingly unimportant to many, mean much when it comes to selling plants. We never know how the Easter weather will be and must, therefore, be prepared for eventualities. An abundant supply of newspapers and other wrapping paper should be on hand, as it will never do to send out plants exposed to the elements in frosty weather.

You are probably handling some hardwooded plants, such as acacias, ericas, boronias, azaleas, etc. Be sure never to allow them to get really dry; it will mean the loss of many of the flowers and perhaps the plants themselves, if you do so. Then, again, remember the thirsty nature of spiræas, hydrangeas, marguerites, rambler roses and others, and see that they are well watered. When shipping plants to your customers, it is good policy to hang tags on each, stating whether they should be watered once or more daily. Try to fill orders promptly, and do not promise shipments when you know you cannot send them on time.

Poinsettias.

While there is yet ample time in which to start the poinsettias, it is a good plan to look over the stock plants and be sure that they are all right. Perhaps you are accustomed to root an early batch and later plant them out in a bench, or, as some prefer, grow them singly in 6-inch pots, and where bracts eighteen inches in diameter and upwards are wanted, some of the plants should be started now. Do not water too freely at first, or you are liable to lose many of your stock plants. Where plants are wanted for pans only it is yet rather early to start poinsettias.

Achimenes.

Achimenes are useful summer blooming plants in pots, pans or baskets, and last a long time in flower when they can be afforded the necessary protection from the sun's rays. Points to remember about achimenes are that they are liable in the early stages of growth to become infested with thrips unless carefully fumigated or sprayed, that they like a light but moderately rich compost, and should never be sprayed overhead. Start the corms in flats of sand. Place them in their flowering receptacles before they have made much growth. While they appreciate warm house treatment until we get warmer weather, they need only a cool, airy and shaded greenhouse. A few fine achimenes are: Margaretta, large white; longiflora major, splendid dark blue; Aurora, delicate mauve; Mauve Queen, light purple; Rose Queen, rose lake, and Ambrose Verschaffelt, white with violet lines.

Mahernia Odorata.

That old, rather insignificant but nevertheless sweet and popular plant, Mahernia odorata, is now in flower. It makes a good basket subject, and if grown in pots should be trained over a light wire frame, not too formally but just sufficiently to keep it erect. As the plants pass out of flower, head them back somewhat. A number of shoots suitable for propagating purposes will be found, which will root readily in an ordinary cutting bench. Cuttings inserted now and kept potted on will make nice stock in 5-inch to 6-inch pots or pans for flowering next February and March. If you have never grown this plant, secure a few and try it. The culture is of the simplest. One point to remember is that it wants a cool house; 45 degrees at night will suffice. In a warm house it will come almost blind.

Perennial Phlox.

The clumps of phlox lifted last fall and planted in a cold house will now be yielding an abundant crop of cuttings. Keep inserting these in the propagating bench before they become too long. When rooted, if for your own use, plant in flats; if to sell, pot off singly. If you have no stock lifted, take cuttings from plants outdoors as soon as procurable. They can be planted directly from the cutting bench to nursery rows outdoors, provided a cool, moist day is selected for the work. These spring rooted phloxes will each produce one large head of bloom next summer, better heads by far than are carried on the older clumps, which, as they become crowded, deteriorate in size.

Easter Cut Flowers Offered in Artistic Pottery and Basket Vase Holders.

Phloxes are, everything being considered, the hardiest, most floriferous and generally useful of all hardy flowering perennials, and no rural florist can afford to be without them.

Gardenias.

Gardenia plants which have not been grown too warm will now be giving a fine spring crop of high-grade flowers. Provided these are in pots, they will be found quite salable Easter plants. Of course, they will not sell as well as rambler roses, lilies, genistas or Dutch bulbous stock, but those who are looking for something choice are glad to get them and pay a good price for them. Before sending out any plants, make sure that they are clean and that no clusters of mealy bugs are hanging about them. Where plants are going out of flower and are making new growth, this is an opportune time to take a good batch of cuttings. They root most quickly from heel cuttings, but those cut through with a knife will also root freely. Give them a close frame if possible, in a warm, moist house, and a brisk bottom heat. Do not be afraid to keep them well soaked with water and few will fail to root.

Pruning Hardy Climbers.

The pruning of hardy climbers can be done at any time during mild weather in winter. It is usually left until spring. Where it has not been done it should be taken in hand at once. Clematis paniculata should be cut back quite hard; as a result, it will grow more vigorously and will soon cover any allotted space. Wistarias, begonias, vitis, actinidias, aristolochias and others want pruning now. Loniceras, ampelopsis, the climbing hydrangeas and celastrus will not need much pruning, but any dead or dying wood should be removed. Climbing roses can be pruned after other climbers are done. Cut away dead, dying and weak wood only, and shorten back the strong canes a little. Last season's canes from the base are what we depend on for next summer's bloom.

Removing Winter Protection.

The winter just closing has been one of unusual severity and the frost has penetrated to a greater depth than has been known for years in many sections. It is yet too early to estimate what damage has been done, but if winter mulching was carefully done it is safe to say that the death roll will be greatly minimized. It is in the late winter and early spring that the greatest damage is done, particularly to plants which were not mulched. Bulb beds, perennial borders, etc., will be showing signs of activity, and in some states the winter covering is, no doubt, already removed, but in the colder states it is always wise to make haste slowly in its removal. March and, to some extent, early April are treacherous; some days will remind us of the tropics and those following of the arctic. If the winter mulch is removed with the first warm days, we usually have cause to regret it. Rather than remove it all, take away a portion at first, leaving sufficient to cover the plants. If this is not done, the plants are liable to sustain considerable of a check if they get two or three hard freezings, succeeded, as they usually are, by bright sunshine. As to pansies in the field, it is not yet safe to take off the winter covering. However, if it is in any place packed down heavily, loosen it up, but do not leave the plants exposed yet a while.

Chrysanthemum Cuttings.

While it is yet much too early to put in chrysanthemum cuttings for single stems, except it may be for exhibition flowers, the present is an opportune time to take a batch of cuttings of such varieties as are needed for pot culture. The average florist does not have much call for large specimen plants, any more than he nowadays has for big blooms, but rooted at this time nice plants can be produced. Be careful to select varieties of a dwarf habit, as tall kinds are of little use commercially. Be sure the colors are decided and do not grow doubles only, as the singles and anemones of the Garza type have many admirers.

Be careful to select varieties of a dwarf habit, as tall kinds are of little use commercially. Be sure the colors are decided and do not grow doubles only, as the singles and anemones of the Garza type have many admirers.

NOTES ON GLADIOLI

WILTING BEFORE PACKING.

Since the publication of my paper on "Gladioli as a Special Crop," in The Review of March 7, I have received several inquiries from The Review's readers regarding the proper or best method of handling cut gladioli for shipment, such inquiries being prompted by that portion of my paper which refers to wilting the flowers before packing. May I encroach upon your columns to explain and further substantiate my contention?

It is a fact which is easily demonstrated, that if gladiolus spikes are cut, placed in water long enough for them to revive and stiffen the petals of the flowers, then it is next to impossible to pack any number of such spikes without creasing or cracking some of the petals, and if this is once done the flower is worthless. After being wilted, the flowers are limp or passive and offer little resistance in packing; hence they are not damaged to the extent the stiff flowers would be. Of course, one could go to an extreme in wilting and injure the spike; good judgment should be exercised in this matter. I stated that we allowed the flowers to wither "lying upon the ground for an hour or two," but modified this by saying "according to the temperature." In some sections and under extreme temperatures, fifteen minutes might be long enough. The point is to have the petals in such condition that they will not bruise, and I stated the method used at my place.

I claim, also, that there is a great advantage in having the spikes standing in the packages. It is not necessary for a skeptical grower to actually make a shipment to demonstrate these facts. Pack four shipments of, say, 100 or 200 spikes each, standing and lying down, and treat two shipments with water and wilt two, and hold them in what would be considered the temperature of an express car, say for twelve or twenty-four hours, but in the meantime don't forget to bang the shipments about a few times to make them think they are in the hands of the express company. Then open them, cut off the ends of the spikes, place in water and judge for yourself which is the best way to handle them.

IDEALS IN GLADIOLUS GROWING.

May I be permitted to say a few words in reference to C. Betscher's article on "Hybridization of Gladioli," on page 22 of The Review of March 14? I suppose he has his own particular reasons for selecting as an ideal a gladiolus seven feet tall. Ye gods and little fishes! Why not have them eight feet or, better, ten feet tall? Evidently the wind is not boisterous in his part of Ohio, or perhaps he would provide a root system to match, which would insure a safe anchorage. In case one should happen to become lost in a field of such gladioli, no doubt a plant could be found strong enough to be climbed, in order to take an observation to determine one's bearings.

It seems to me that there are nearly as many different ideals as there are growers, and that they are prone to run to extremes. At present many of our most noted specialists are feverishly striving to produce the clearest white, without any mark or touch of color whatever. Such a result, in my opinion, would partake more of the outre than the artistic, besides being unnatural, which is proved by the lack of constitution in most of the super-white sorts. Another notion is that we must have larger and still larger flowers, seven, eight inches or more in diameter—the bigger the better.

To my mind, it is far better to work for a combination of well balanced virtues, rather than seek to develop abnormally any one particular characteristic, which, though it may be spectacular and may attract the attention for a time, does not possess the charm and holding power of some more conservative sort.

In closing I should like to inquire whether Mr. Betscher has succeeded in eliminating the hooded form of the flowers of Primulinus hybrids, which hitherto has been considered one of their chief defects. H. E. Meader.

BOSTON IVY.

We have tried several times to grow Boston ivy from seed, and although we get the seed from a reliable firm, few ever come up. In what temperature do they succeed the best and what other treatment would you recommend?

W. M. R.

Boston ivy, Amelopsis Veitchii, is of easy germination, provided you secure fresh seed. Sow in a compost of leaf-mold and sand and give an average night temperature of 60 degrees until it germinates. It is better grown 10 degrees cooler when well started and the seedlings should be potted off singly before they become too crowded. Get some more seed from a first-class firm, sow at once and you still have time to grow nice plants for next year's sales. This is one of the plants that is gaining steadily in the favor of the public.

MUMS IN NEW ORLEANS.

I am about to make my first trial of new mums for the New Orleans market and would like to receive a little advice from you. The following are the varieties: Mlle. Margaret Desjouis, Smith's Advance, White Cloud, Unaka, Donatello. When will be the proper time to plant, the time to stop, and to take the bud? What bud should be taken on each of them? How long will it take for them to mature? These plants are to be grown in New Orleans in the open field, to be covered with cotton. Can any of those named be in full flower by October 25? If not, can you tell me what variety has the same qualities as the G. S. Kalb, only larger and whiter? It is right up to time; never fails when the Mrs. Robinson is far behind.

A. W.

I am not familiar with conditions that obtain in the mum belt of New Orleans and this grower had better consult some of her florist neighbors. The variety most largely grown is, of course, Mrs. Robinson. I have been informed by florists in that vicinity that varieties such as Smith's Advance, White Cloud and Donatello, or early varieties like those mentioned, do not come good in that section. It would seem to me that Desjouis would possibly do well there. Any of the varieties above named can be in full flower easily in the north, but I am not familiar with conditions in the south, or whether any florist has tested Smith's Advance there, in quantity, I cannot state. It is a great advance on G. S. Kalb, which the correspondent mentions as being good. As to buds, the last days in August and early in September seem to be accepted as about the proper time in Louisiana for best results.

THRIPS ON CUTTINGS.

We are sending under separate cover a few Bonnaffon cuttings which you will see are peculiarly affected. We have not been able to tell whether it was the work of an insect or fungus. We have used Aphine at the strength for red spider, also Fungine. We do not believe either one is helping the trouble.

C. L. H.

The cuttings of Bonnaffon forwarded to us were badly infested with thrips. If C. L. H. will use a microscope he will see thousands of them on the foliage. I noticed he has used Aphine at the strength for red spider. The only trouble with any spraying solution on thrips lies in the fact that it is almost impossible to hit the insects with an insecticide. One application will not do it; neither will two; but persistent use of Aphine will clean out thrips. Perhaps the quickest way would be to fumigate heavily and persistently with tobacco dust, followed by spraying on bright days.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION

THE MODERN HOUSES.

[A paper by D. T. Connor, of Philadelphia, Pa., read before the Lancaster Florists' Club, at Lancaster, Pa., March 21, 1912.]

The subject which you assigned me is so well known to most of the commercial growers that I feel there is little left for me to add. However, I am glad to tell you what I know and what I have observed in my connection with this work.

The first thought in planning to build greenhouses should be to construct them so that you can get the best possible conditions for plant life under glass. We now have fifty-seven varieties of greenhouse construction, made up in various widths and lengths. There seem to be two styles that are preferred, the single wide house and the ridge and furrow plan. I believe equal results can be had from both styles of houses.

The Ridge and Furrow House.

The ridge and furrow is now built with high gutter lines, seven to ten feet, and by this plan we get more direct light and a larger air space, which is desirable. We also obtain this same condition in the wide single house.

In my conversation with many florists who have both styles of houses, I find they claim that the ridge and furrow house is cooler in the summer months; it is easier to repair and the cost of building is about the same. You are able to get more ventilation and for some crops this is important. With high gutter lines we do not have any trouble with the drafts that are objectionable in the connected houses with low gutter lines.

The Single Wide House.

The single wide house that so many growers are building, forty to seventy-five feet wide and built in lengths, seems to bring out the proper results, but unless you can build this house in long lengths they will be found expensive to erect, as the gable ends cost the same.

We have a great many growers who prefer the large, single wide house, but, as I said before, good results can be had from both styles of houses. Growers often find that they have to adopt a certain style of house to meet the surrounding conditions, grade of ground, limited space in which to build, etc.

Solidity of Construction.

The modern greenhouse is a combination of glass, wood, iron and concrete. The first and most important consideration in building a greenhouse should be to build proper foundations. These, as you know, are made of concrete and iron posts and should be of the best materials to stand the strain and take care of the reef construction. It is a common fault for growers to build light side walls and weak gable ends. The roofs of all greenhouses should be built of good material and made sufficiently strong to carry the loads which they are obliged to meet, the weight of snow and the wind pressure which have to be taken care of.

If you stop to think that the heating, glass, glazing, painting and erecting cost the same, no matter how cheap the construction is made, you will see that a few dollars more will be well spent in using better materials.

The Iron Gutters.

The ridge and furrow houses are built with channel-iron and cast-iron gutters; both kinds will outlast the life of any greenhouse and should be used in place of wood gutters. Iron gutters are easier to erect, require fewer posts and are an important feature in tying the houses together. In the semi-iron construction pipe purlins and columns are used to support the roof. I believe this style to be the best for ridge and furrow houses up to thirty-five feet wide. I feel sure it is a mistake to cut out pipe columns or supports of the houses, as this would put the strain on the roof and sides. I am sure that houses built of light truss work will only last a short time and constant repairing will be required. I am not in favor of truss construction unless the materials that are used are sufficiently strong to make the house rigid.

Houses forty feet wide or over should be built of flat rafter construction. We are using this material in all our wide houses and we find them the most economical houses to build. The iron work is fitted and worked out at the factory, so that the erection of the flat rafter style is made easy when it reaches the grower.

Setting the Glass.

Another important matter in building wide houses is to build the gables strong and rigid. It is much easier to make the gable strong with iron frame construction. During the past winter we have had a great many wind and snow storms that made trouble for the florists. I have had a great many reports of glass being blown out and considerable damage done by the frost, and in most cases it was where the construction was weak and the glass set the 24-inch way. I believe most of the growers are satisfied to space the glass the 16-inch way. This makes the houses strong and, with the use of small sashbars, sufficient light can be had. The glass should be bedded in putty and securely fastened with zinc glazing nails, and the glass should be lapped. I know that in your section a great many florists prefer to butt the glass. We can point out a

CARNATION CULTURE.

[A paper by G. F. Neipp, of Chatham, N. J., read before the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, at Madison, N. J., March 13, 1912.]

Within the last fifteen years more progress has been made in the culture of the carnation than of any other flower. Yet, when we visit the flower markets of the large cities we find alongside of the finest carnations lots of poor ones, and one cannot help asking the question, Why do florists keep on growing such rubbish, that never pays for the work, not to say expenses? There is no excuse whatever, since there is no longer any secret in carnation culture and it does not cost any, or only a little more, to produce good flowers than poor ones.

Good carnations can even be produced in small houses, if they receive the proper treatment, and yet I have seen produced in good, up-to-date houses the poorest carnations I ever laid my eyes on.

Ignorance is no excuse, since we can read articles on carnation culture from the best authors in the country nearly every week in our trade papers. We can get plenty of information in our societies and we do not need to go far to see good carnations grown in an up-to-date establishment. But the trouble is mostly that these so-called carnation growers are too conceited to look for any information, or, like some fellows I have met, they would not believe anybody. Others gather all information they can get, but have not the brains to work it out. If somebody suggested that their carnations needed feeding, they would overdo it; or if told that they keep their plants too dry, or too wet, or the houses too warm or cold, they would fall into the other extreme.

I once had a neighbor who had four small greenhouses and always kept them too warm. He never had any success with carnations; yet he said that if he had the money he would keep the houses at 90 to 100 degrees for carnations, and I now think he has only one greenhouse instead of four.

Propagating and Transplanting.

As in any other plant culture, in carnation culture propagation is the foundation upon which to build up the structure necessary to success. Therefore the greatest care should be given to the selection of the stock and the production of healthy and well rooted cuttings.

Many cuttings are spoiled by putting them too deep in the sand, shading too much, keeping too wet or too warm, and also by waiting too long before potting them up. They should be potted as soon as all cuttings which are placed in the sand at the same time are rooted. Some will have a little longer roots than others, but this cannot be helped.

I use 2½-inch pots and a good, live soil, without any addition of manure or fertilizer. As soon as the pots are full of roots, but before the plants get potbound, and while it is too early to plant in the field, we knock out the plants and plant them in a bench, or sometimes in a coldframe, according to season and weather, using about the same kind of soil as in potting.

As soon as lateral shoots start to show on the bottom, we pinch out the main shoot. The young plants should be kept in a light house, with plenty of ventilation, and the temperature kept cool. It is of much importance to have the crown of the roots never covered more than one-half inch, as this prevents stem-rot and insures a healthy growth. As I only practice field culture, I shall not touch upon pot culture.

Planting in the Field.

It is of much importance what kind of soil and location is available. The soil should not be too heavy or too light, but almost any kind can be used if properly treated. I prefer a field almost level or with a slight slope, so as to give water no chance of standing after rain, but not steep enough to make washing out possible.

The field should be well manured in August or September of the previous year, and plowed and harrowed several times. A late plowing should be done in November and the surface left in a rough condition. No field should be selected that lacks good drainage.

In the same manner we prepare our bench soil, only we manure it more heavily and keep on plowing and harrowing until we bring the soil inside.

The field to receive the young plants is plowed again in spring as soon as the soil is dry enough, and the surface is smoothed off with the harrow. As soon as steady weather can be expected, all hands join in planting out, planting in rows fifteen to eighteen inches apart. Again I see to it that the plants are not planted too deep—just a little bit deeper than they stood in the pots.

Learning What Not to Do.

This reminds me of my first experience with carnations in this country, seventeen years ago. It was my first job in a plant-growing establishment of sixteen or eighteen rather small houses. Three of the houses were devoted to

Gentlemen:

We wish to compliment you on the business getting ability of your paper.

It is with much pleasure that we write that the RESULTS of our Easter specialty ads in the recent issues of the Florists' Review have been very LARGE and EXCEEDED OUR EXPECTATIONS, helping to make this Easter season the most successful in our history.

Orders coming from all parts of the country show that The Review is read EVERYWHERE.

carnations, but I started in March and the houses looked more like geranium houses, as most of the carnations had died and geraniums in 4-inch pots took their place. We also had probably 10,000 young carnation stock in a sash house, some in pots, the others in flats with about two inches of soil, and all looking as yellow as a lemon. When planting time came we brought them out to the field, pots, flats and all. From the flats we had to cut them out in squares and then the boss told us to plant as deep as possible, showing me, as a greenhorn, how deep, which was about two inches soil about the roots. The soil being very sandy—in fact, all sand—I did not wonder much about deep planting, but I found out later, when many plants rotted off just above the ground after some heavy rains.

In the latter part of August they were to be benched. The boss, with his brother, did the planting and I had the pleasure of bringing in the plants. This, of course, gave me a chance to see how they did it. They dug a big hole in the soil, nearly to the bottom, stuck the plants away down, and the ends of the roots, which were long and few, stuck up. Then the hole was filled up and the ends of the roots frequently stuck out of the soil. I could not help asking, "Do you expect these plants to grow?" The answer was, "They don't need to grow; they must only flower." The growing was done in the field." I was thoroughly speechless, but thought this must certainly be a great country if they could make carnations flower without growing. But one day a friend asked me how I liked the job and I said, "First-rate; I think it's a good place to learn how things should not be done," and he laughed. I did not stay much longer, but had a chance to carry out a good percentage of those plants to the dump heap, and the next spring I had a look at the houses, but most of the plants were gone, the geraniums taking their place again.

Preparing for Benching.

But to come back to the field. We start cultivating with the wheel hoe as soon as planting is over, going through once a week. As soon as the plants have made some growth, topping commences, to form the plant and also to prevent flowering, which would only stop the growth to some extent.

By July 1 the plants should be large enough to be benched, and as the old plants are usually thrown out there is no reason why preparation ought not to be made. After the old plants and soil are carted out, the benches ought to receive a thorough cleaning and white-washing, and also all the necessary painting should be done before the benches are filled again. As soon as the soil is on the benches, all hands have to get busy and get the benching done in short order, one or more planting and the others digging and bringing in. Care should be taken to leave some soil on the roots, as the plants will grow on much more quickly. As soon as a number are planted, they should be watered. But I would not soak the bench all through at once, but would rather go over the same place three or four times until the soil is all moist, but not too wet, as root action will be slower in an extremely wet soil. The house should always be well ventilated and the atmosphere kept as cool as possible.

Treatment in the House.

I put no shade on after benching, but a light shading in spring, which gradually wears off. Watering for the first few weeks should be done carefully.

Florists Review,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

The Florists Review did it all alone. Our two-inch display ad, offering our new gladiolus Princepine to the trade, made its first appearance in the F.R. of November 23rd. In December we were corresponding with foreign publishers regarding advertising rates; but, before we had placed our order with them, inquiries came pouring in from home and abroad, therefore we thought best to withdraw our ad from the Review for a let up. On Jan. 1st we asked you to discontinue our ad until further notice, but there was no letup until all the stock was sold. They did not even leave us any for our retail trade and yet we have to do something which a man hates to do, returning some nice looking checks.

The Review reaches the buyer no matter where he is located.

CASH VALUE.

Here are photographic reproductions of two letters that have real money value for everyone who does business with florists.

They point the way to the greatest business gain at the minimum cost.

One is a letter from a small advertiser—he used only two inches of space. But it was all he needed. Six insertions cleaned up his stock.

The second letter is from the firm that used more space than any other advertiser in the last six weeks—approximately four pages each issue. Read the letter; their satisfaction with results is evident; the season was "the most successful" in their history.

One advertiser spends $2 per week; the other spends over $80 per week. Both so well pleased they feel impelled to tell about it.

One appeals to growers, the other to retailers.

Could anything show more clearly The Review's efficiency as an advertising medium?
